PREFACE.

In submitting this volume of the New Jersey Archives to the public, the Committee venture the opinion that it will prove by no means the least important and interesting of the series. In its character, it is unique. No similar volume has been previously published in America, if anywhere in the world. No like picture of the manners and customs of a people, of the events and themes uppermost in men's minds, of the daily happenings, the political and religious controversies, as viewed from every standpoint, has ever been given of any American community.

Hampered as they were by an odious and vexatious censorship, nevertheless the Colonial newspapers vividly mirror to us the popular life of their day. We can trace in their pages, too, the gradual evolution of the press toward a broader freedom, as their news items expand from the merest mention of ship news, runaway servants and foreign events, to chronicles of the movements of the Governors, the doings of the Legislatures, and finally aspire even to criticisms (at first in the cautious guise of communications) upon the ruling powers. This development of the liberty of the press evidenced the growing independence of popular sentiment in the Colonies. In New Jersey, such independence was greatly fostered by the constant friction between the Council of Proprietors, and the yeomanry who either questioned the title of the Proprietors, or who, in any event, were restive under the exaction of yearly quit-rents. The Proprietors were so closely identified with the Royal Government that when the people became accustomed to resist the former, they found it easy to dispute the right of a foreign King to control their affairs.

The historian will be glad to have brought within his reach such a mass of contemporaneous chronicles of the period covered by this volume. These Newspaper Extracts have been gleaned with entire impartiality from all available sources. True, they have been taken exclusively from Boston, New York and Philadelphia newspapers, for the reason that from 1704 to 1719 the only American newspaper was published at Boston, and for nearly all the rest of the period, the three cities named had the only periodicals in the country, Besides, from a careful comparison of files it was found that the newspapers of those cities contained all the news published relating to New Jersey. Sometimes a paragraph or article was published only in one paper; or a New York file is lacking for a particular date, and the omission has been supplied from another file; or, a news item is given in a different form, or with additional particulars.

It was deemed best, at the outset, not to attempt a mere selection of what might be considered the most important articles. That is always an effort to substitute one man's opinion for that of others. The modern school of historical students prefer to do their own thinking, and consequently want all the information available. Hence, everything relating to New Jersey has been gleaned from the earliest files. Nothing has been omitted because it might be considered unimportant.

The casual reader will notice the preponderance of shipnews in the first extracts, in the days when Perth Amboy, Burlington, Salem and Cape May ranked with Boston and New York as seaports:

The number of runaway servants and slaves will attract attention, and will call to mind the first need of the young Colony—population to till the ground and carry on the necessary labors of the community; and how persons were brought from the home country, often against their will, and sold for a term of years into a modified system of bondage, to pay for their passage across the ocean; and how these "servitors" or "redemptioners" often fled from their masters, who were thereupon required by law to advertise them, or be liable for their maintenance wherever captured. These advertisements are among the most interesting and diverting in the volume. The curious garbs worn by the runaways—relics of finery indicating often their former gentle condition, or the sterner stuff wherewith the common people were clad; the references to branding, showing the prevalence of that barbarous custom as a punishment for crime; the peculiar descriptions of some of the servants—the "Leering down Look," "proud hambling Gate," "walks Crimplin," "he is so prodigious a Lyar that if observed he may easily be discovered by it," "with a long Nose and a wild Look," "goes crooked and groans very much in his sleep," "speaks by Clusters," 'talks West Country." etc., etc., and the varied accomplishments of others—all throw a flood of light on the condition of the toiling masses in those days.

Here we have tales of piracies on the high seas; and on land reports of counterfeiting and other crimes, punished by the pillory, the whipping post and branding, discrimination being made against negro slaves, who were summarily tried and burnt, for offences punishable in the case of whites with the lash or the brand. The sparseness of population is indicated by the frequent mention of wild animals killed—panthers, bears, deer, etc. The relations between the whites and the Indians appear in an unfavorable light in these pages. The aborigines are usually mentioned as in a condition of servitude, or in some discreditable transaction. It should be borne in mind, however, that the dusky natives had no newspaper to represent their point of view.

Small-pox was frightfully prevalent. Frequent epidemics are reported, and most of the servants advertised are described as "pock-fretten." Inoculation had made little progress in America.

While the mother country imposed grievous restrictions on American commerce and industries, still we find, accounts of numerous mills, mines and forges, and as the country developed new ferries and "stage waggons" were established to meet the demands of internal trade. Other signs of prosperity are found in the shop keepers' lists of wares, the sales of books, the increase of printing, and the stylish furniture that gradually came in vogue. With prosperity came gentler manners, so that we are prepared for the statement that in 1738, in the Quaker town of Burlington, an election was held at which it was agreed to reform the ancient practices, and accordingly there was no "reaping of Characters, or using of Canes in a Hostile manner on one another."

The advertisements of sales of lands, houses, mills, etc.. give a great deal of information of importance to the local historian.

It is hoped that the notes which have been added may increase the usefulness of the volume to the reader; to the student they may be of service in pointing to other sources of information. The aim has been to make them fullest regarding men and events least familiar to the general reader.

In the Index, it has been sought to give the name of every person and place mentioned in the text; also of every vessel. Subjects are likewise indexed fully.

In procuring the material for this volume the editor has been greatly indebted to the cordial co-operation of William Kelby, Librarian of the New York Historical Society, and to his brother, Robert H. Kelby, who personally copied the Newspaper Extracts from the files of that Society; to Frederick D. Stone, Librarian of the Historical Society of Pennsylvania, who supervised the gleaning of Newspaper Extracts from that Society's files; to Dr. Samuel A. Green, Librarian of the Massachusetts Historical Society, who secured and directed the services of Miss S. B. Kidder, in making similar gleanings from the extensive files in Boston, and at Harvard University; and to Miss Mary Robinson. Assistant Librarian of the American Antiquarian Society, for like aid among that Society's great Newspaper Collections at Worcester.

The preliminary History of American Newspapers, with the Lists of Files, etc., forms a natural introduction to the volume, and has an interest of its own, to the student.

American Newspapers of the Eighteenth Century. Chronology and History; Lists of Files, and Libraries in which they may be found.

With Some Notices of the First Printing and the First Newspaper in each State.

Part I .-- Alabama-Maryland.

INTRODUCTION.

Several years ago the writer conceived the idea that a very interesting and valuable volume could be made up of extracts from early American newspapers, relating to New Jersey-after the manner of such gleanings relating to New York City, published in the New York Corporation Manuals for 1862 and subsequent years, and those relating to "Old New York and Trinity Church," in the New York Historical Society's Collections, Vol. III., for 1870. To that end, he procured lists of files of the newspapers of Boston, Philadelphia and New York, in the principal libraries of those cities, in Harvard University, and in the Library of the American Antiquarian Society at Worcester. It then occurred to him that these lists would be useful to all historians, and that their value would be increased if similar lists could be procured from other libraries. As the investigation was extended, it was found that no full list had ever been printed of all the American newspapers published in the last century. The nearest approach to it was by S. N. D. North, in his very excellent monograph on the American Press, published in the U.S. Census for 1880, Vol. VIII. Nor had anyone ever attempted to publish a list showing where files of these early newspapers could be found. Only a few libraries had ever published a list of their own newspaper files. The tendency of modern historical research is to examine and reexamine constantly the original sources of information. A newspaper file is a mine of history to every student. It is the contemporaneous record of events, chronicled as witnessed by the writers, often with distorted vision, it is true, but frequently all the more truth-telling because of partisan bias. Historians have been many a time perplexed for want of a date or a fact that could be best obtained from a contemporary newspaper, but did not know where to look for such journals. It is believed that this List will be a help to all historical students.

The history of the newspaper is so closely interwoven with that of printing in general, that it was thought advisable to add a few notes on the introduction of the press into each State and Territory of the United States, and into each of the Provinces of Canada, as well as into Mexico, with the title of the first book printed in each, and of the first newspaper issued therein, so far as such data could be obtained.

The first contribution toward a history of American newspapers that the writer has found was:

A Narrative of the Newspapers printed in New-England—In a letter to the President of the Historical Society, from one of the members.

This was published in the Collections of the Massachusetts Historical Society for the Year 1798, Boston, 1798, Vol. V., pp. 208–216; and in Vol. VI., 1800, pp. 64–77. The Narrative was written by John Eliot. It includes a brief and interesting history of Connecticut newspapers, by Noah Webster, jun. Subsequent writers on this theme appear to have entirely overlooked this early Narrative.

In the compilation of the present work, however, it has been found that the best and most comprehensive account of the early printers of America is still:

The History of Printing in America. With a Biography of Printers, and an Account of Newspapers. To which is prefixed a concise view of the Discovery and Progress of the Art in Other Parts of the World. In two volumes. By Isaiah Thomas, Printer, Worcester, Massachusetts.

Worcester: From the press of Isaiah Thomas, jun. Isaac Sturtevant, frinter. 1810.

8º 2 vols. Pp. vi., 7-487; iv., 5-576.

The second edition, published in 1874 as Vols. V and VI of the Transactions and Collections of the American Antiquarian Society, has an added value from the preliminary memoir of Mr. Thomas, the appended catalogue of American publications prior to the Revolution, and the notes by the committee supervising the printing of this edition.

A work superseding that of Thomas, in a large measure, respecting the early New England newspapers, is the following:

Specimens of Newspaper Literature: with Personal Memoirs, Anecdotes, and Reminiscences. By Joseph T. Buckingham.

Boston: Charles C. Little and James Brown. 1850. 120 2 vols. Pp. xii, 348; (4), 356; 2 portraits.

Mr. Buckingham's work is based mainly on original examinations of newspaper files, and on personal recollections; having the advantage of writing forty years after Thomas, he is able to correct some errors of his predecessor.

The third general work on the subject is:

Journalism in the United States, from 1690 to 1872. By Frederic Hudson.

New York: Harper & Brothers, Publishers, Franklin square. 1873.

80 Pp. (4), xli, 43-789.

This is the best account published of American journalism, especially of its political and news-gathering features, during the half-century prior to 1870.

The most ambitious attempt to cover the whole subject of the history of American newspapers from the earliest day, and to present the fullest statistics, is the work of North, already mentioned, the full title being:

History and Present Condition of the Newspaper and Periodical Press of the United States, with a Catalogue of the Publications of the Census Year. By S. N. D. North, Special Agent.

[Washington. Government Printing Office. 1884.] 4º Pp. vi, 1-446. Maps. [Part of Vol. VIII. of the Tenth Census—1880—of the United States.]

The late Joel Munsell, the eminent Albany printer, made a contribution of some value to the history of the American newspaper press in the desultory melange entitled:

The Typographical Miscellany. By J. Munsell.

Albany. Joel Munsell, 58 State street. 1850.
80 Pp. (6), 267, (1).

Its particulars respecting the press of the State of New York are especially valuable, and for the most part accurate.

An odd compilation having some relation to the general subject was:

The Spirit of the Public Journals; or, Beauties of the American Newspapers, For 1805. [Four lines of quotation.]

Baltimore: Printed by Geo. Dobbin & Murphy, No. 4, Baltimore-Street. 1806.

¹²⁰ Pp. xii, 13-300.

The preface gives a list of ninety-six American newspapers from which the selections are taken—the earliest list of the kind in the nineteenth century.

A similar venture was made by Joseph T. Buckingham, the title of the second volume being:

Boston: Published by Joseph T. Buckingham. 1824.

120 Pp. xi [actually but 7], 13-256.

Each selection is credited to the newspaper whence it is taken, and these titles are useful additions to our information.

Other special works will be cited as used, the references forming a bibliography of the subject, the extent of which will probably surprise most readers. Local histories have been largely consulted. Most recent works of this class devote special chapters to the history of the press in their respective localities.

But the writer's principal reliance has been the newspaper files listed in the following pages. These lists contain the names of newspapers the very existence of which was unknown to some of the most diligent of local investigators, even in this special subject. Where local writers fail to mention their home newspapers, the particulars here given have been gathered with care from the papers themselves. The endeavor has been to give a brief history of every newspaper printed in North America prior to 1801, from all the data available.

In the compilation of the list of American Newspaper Files, correspondence has been had with nearly all the older College Libraries, with nearly every historical Society in North America, with nearly all the State Libraries, with the principal Public Libraries, and with scores of individual historians, collectors and others. The lively interest taken in the work by his hundreds of correspondents has been a gratifying incentive to the writer to persevere in his effort to make it as complete as practicable.

Special thanks are due to that most accomplished bibliographer, Justin Winsor, of Harvard University Library, who furnished a list filling sixteen large folio pages, enumerating the enormous and unrivaled Newspaper Collections of that Library; to William Kelby, Librarian of the New York Historical Society; to Frederick D. Stone, Librarian of the Historical Society of Pennsylvania, who with the generous cooperation of Charles R. Hildeburn, not only furnished a list of that Society's collections, but procured similar lists from the Library Company of Philadelphia, and the Franklin Library; to Prof. Addison Van Name, who furnished a slip catalogue of the newspaper files in Yale University; to Albert C. Bates, Librarian of the Connecticut Historical Society; to Theodore F. Dwight, of the Boston Public Library; to John Ward Dean, of the New England Historic Genealogical Society; to Clarence Cuningham, Corresponding Secretary of the South Carolina Historical Society, for generous aid regarding South Carolina newspaper history and files; to Charles Poindexter, State Librarian of Virginia; to Philip A. Bruce, Corresponding Secretary of the Virginia Historical Society; to James J. Barnwell, Librarian of the Library Company of Philadelphia; to Dr. William H. Egle, State Librarian of Pennsylvania; to Col. Morris R. Hamilton, State Librarian of New Jersey; to Reuben G. Thwaites, Secretary of the State Historical Society of Wisconsin, one of the youngest, but among the most vigorous of such societies, and whose collection of newspapers is equaled by few in the country; to Theodore L. Cole, of Washington, D. C., for details of the earliest publications of the statutes of the Southern and Western States, and the beginnings of printing West of the Mississippi; to Paul Leicester Ford, of Brooklyn, who with characteristic liberality not only supplied a list of his own files, but placed at my disposal the very careful and minute lists he had prepared of the great newspaper collection of Dr. Thomas Addis Emmet, and likewise authorized the use of his Check-List of American Magazines Printed in the Eighteenth Century. The list of newspaper files in the Maryland Historical Society is taken from that prepared by John M. W. Lee, former Librarian of the Society, and published in the Magazine of American History in June, 1881; John G. Morris, the present Librarian, says few or no additions have been made since that date. The list in the Massachusetts Historical Society's library has been gleaned from the Society's catalogue, printed in 1859, and which Dr. Samuel A. Green, the Librarian, writes me has received but slight additions in that department since it was published.

For cordial cooperation in preparing a history of the press of Canada, the writer is under the deepest obligations to the Hon. John George Bourinot, Clerk of the Dominion House of Commons, at Ottawa, and President of the Royal Society of Canada; he is also indebted to F. Blake Crofton, Provincial Librarian of Nova Scotia, and Corresponding Secretary of the Nova Scotia Historical Society; and to F. C. Wurtele, Librarian of the Literary and Historical Society of Quebec.

To others who have given special information regarding particular States or localities acknowledgment is given in place.

It should be clearly borne in mind by those examining the following Lists, that in many and even in most cases, the files are imperfect or incomplete. Extreme dates are given, and it may be that the file contains but a few isolated numbers of a given paper in the period embraced between these dates. In some cases the condition of the files is indicated by the words "incomplete," "imperfect," "few numbers," "many numbers missing," and the like. But the same is true of most of the files where no such qualifying words are used. To have indicated the precise numbers present in each file, or to have noted the missing papers, would have involved an enormous amount of labor, and would have greatly increased the bulk of this volume. Moreover, such minuteness of detail would have been less valuable than might be at first supposed, for most of the great libraries are constantly adding to their files, and filling up the existing gaps.

It is obvious that perfection is unattainable in a work of this kind, especially in a first attempt. The writer will be pleased to have any errors and omissions communicated to him. In the meantime he trusts that this little volume may be of use to historical students, and that it may serve to awaken an increased interest in the history of American Newspapers.

Paterson, N. J., February 10, 1894.

ABBREVIATIONS.

In the use of abbreviations to indicate the libraries in which certain files are to be found, any arbitrary or conventional system has been avoided. The customary abbreviations are employed to signify names of States; where they are used alone, the meaning is that the files are in the State Library. The letters "H. S." added, indicate the Historical Society called by the name of the State. It will be noticed that in the following table the letter "L." stands for "Library," and "S." for "Society."

Alabama.

1812.—The Madison Gazette was established at Hunts-ville—the first newspaper.—North, 359.

· The following is the title of the first book:

Acts | passed at the | first session | of the | First General Assembly, | of the | Alabama Territory; | in the forty second year | of | American Independence. |

St. Stephens: | Printed by Thomas Eastin. | 1818. |

12° Pp. 116, iv.

All the acts were "approved" between Feb. 3 and 14, 1818. Probably five hundred copies were printed. The long "s" is used—a late survival, perhaps an old font of type.—Cole.

Alaska.

1868, May 1.—Alaska Times, at Sitka, by W. S. Dodge, with T. G. Murphy as editor; removed in 1870 to Seattle, Washington, where the paper was discontinued.

Arizona.

The first newspaper:

1858 .-- The Arizonian, at Tubac.

The paper was removed in 1860 to Tucson, and suspended in 1861, the office furniture—two derringers—being advertised for sale.—Bancroft, 498, 607.

The first book probably was:

Arizona. The Constitution of the Provisional Government of the Territory of Arizona, and the Proceedings of the Convention held at Tucson.

Tucson, J. Howard Wells, Publisher, 1860.
12° Pp. 23.—History of Arizona and New Mexico,

1530–1888, by Hubert Howe Bancroft, San Francisco, 1889, 507.

The Howell Code, adopted by the First Legislative Assembly of the Territory of Arizona, Sept.-Nov., 1864.

Prescott, 1865.

8° Pp. 491. Brinley Catalogue, No. 4,715. Probably the first book of any considerable size printed in the Territory. For pamphlets printed at Prescott in 1864, see Brinley, No. 4,716.

Arkansas.2

1819.—Printing introduced by William E. Woodruff, who was born on Long Island, and went to Arkansas in 1819, locating at Arkansas Post, where he issued the first newspaper:

1819, November 20—Arkansas Gazette.

The first book was:

Laws | of the | Territory of Arkansas: | comprising | The Organic Laws | of the territories of Missouri and Arkansas, with their | amendments and supplements annexed; | All laws of a general nature, | passed by the General Assembly of the Territory of Mis- | ouri, at the session in 1818; | Together with | The Laws passed by the General Assembly | of the | Territory of Arkansas, |

California.

1833, January.-Printing probably first introduced.

José Figueroa, appointed Governor of California, arrived at Monterey, January 14, 1833, and immediately circulated a proclamation, printed in Mexico before leaving there, and "together with a brief notice of his arrival, also printed, as it seems, at Monterey. This was the first use of type in California. I suppose that he brought a small quantity of type with some kind of a hand-press, or stamp, for printing cards and brief notices, more as a curiosity perhaps than for actual use."—History of California, by Hubert Howe Bancroft, San Francisco, 1885, III., 241.

The first newspaper was issued:

1846, August 15 (Saturday)—The Californian, at Monterey, by Robert Semple and the Rev. Walter Colton, chaplain on the U. S. frigate Congress, and former editor of the North American, Philadelphia. Semple was 39 at this time, and was a native of Kentucky.

In his very entertaining book, "Three Years in California," New York, 1850, Chaptain Colton tells the story of this pioneer in California journalism:

Saturday, Aug. 15. [1846.] To-day the first newspaper ever published in California made its appearance. The honor, if such it be, of writing its Prospectus, fell to me. It is to be issued on every Saturday, and is published by Semple and Colton. * * * My partner is an emigrant from Kentucky, who stands six feet eight in his stockings. He is in a buckskin dress, a fox-skin cap; is true with his rifle, ready with his pen, and quick at the type-case.

He created the materials of our office out of the chaos of a small concern, which had been used by a Roman Catholic monk in printing a few sectarian tracts. The press was old enough to be preserved as a curiosity; the mice had burrowed in the balls; there were no rules, no leads, and the types were rusty and all in pi. It was only by scouring that the letters could be made to show their faces. A sheet or two of tin was procured, and these, with a jack-knife, were cut into rules and leads. Luckily we found, with the press, the greater part of a keg of ink; and now came the main scratch for paper. None could be found, except what is used to envelop the tobacco of the cigar smoked here by the natives. A coaster had a small supply of this on board, which we procured. It was in sheets a little larger than the common-sized foolscap. And this is the size of our first paper, which we have christened the Californian. Though small in dimensions, our first number is as full of news as a black-walnut is of meat. We have received by couriers, during the week, intelligence from all the important military posts through the territory. Very little of this has transpired; it reaches the public for the first time through our sheet. We have, also, the declaration of war between the United States and Mexico, with an abstract of the debate in the senate. A crowd was waiting when the sheet was thrown from the press. It produced quite a little sensation. Never was a bank run upon harder; not, however, by people with paper to get specie, but exactly the reverse. One-half of the paper is in English, the other in Spanish. The subscription for a year is five dollars; the price of a single sheet is twelve and a half cents; and is considered cheap at that.

Saturday, Sept. 12—My partner in the "Californian" has been absent several weeks. All the work of the office has devolved upon a sailor, who has set the type for the whole paper, with fingers stiff as the ropes around which they have coiled themselves into seeming fixtures. Yet the "Californian" is out, and makes a good appearance. Who would think, except in these uttermost parts of the earth, of issuing a weekly journal, with only an old tar to set the type, and without a solitary exchange paper!

Saturday, Dec. 12—Our paper, the only one published in California, made its hebdomadal appearance again to-day. It is a little fellow, but is half filled or more with original matter. A paper is much like an infant; the smaller it is, the more anxious the attentions which it requires. My partner promised to stick by me, but has been the greater part of the time since its commencement on the bay of San Francisco.

"It was not an imposing specimen in its foolscap size, printed on rough paper with worn and deficient type, and with the rickety California press of 1833, now rescued from a garret. * * * On January 9th following, the California Star was issued at San Francisco by the Mormon, Sam Brannan, assisted by E. P. Jones, as editor. * * * The two papers were merged, on January 4, 1849, into the Alta California."—

"At the government house were found the old press and type. * * * The apparatus had not been in use for several years, having been pronounced useless * * in 1845. It had not been picked up in a cloister, nor used in printing Roman Catholic tracts, nor had it ever been used by the padres at all; but it had been the property of Augustin V. Connecticut.

1709.—Printing introduced.

Thomas Short was the first who printed in Connecticut. He set up his press in the town of New London in 1709, in order to do the public printing for the Colony. He was recommended by Bartholomew Green, who at that time printed in Boston, and from whom he probably learned the art of printing. He died at New London, Sept. 27, 1712, in the 30th year of his age.—Thomas, 2d ed., I., 184-5.

First book printed:

A | Confession of Faith | Owned and Consented to by the | Elders and Messengers | of the Churches | in the

New London in N. E. Printed by Thomas Short, 1710.

Sm. 8º Pp. (2), 116. Brinley, No. 2104.

Although the title page has the date 1710, the work was not completed before 1711, and the greater part, if not the whole, of the edition remained in the hands of Mr. Short's widow until 1714.—Thomas, 2d ed., I., 184, note. This book is commonly called "The Saybrook Confession and Platform."

CHRONOLOGICAL HISTORY OF NEWSPAPERS.1

1755, April 12—The Connecticut Gazette. "Containing the freshest Advices, Foreign and Domestick," at New Haven, by James Parker & Co. The Gazette had four pages, and at first each page measured 9x6 1-2 inches, exclusive of margin. Afterwards 14x9 1-4 inches, two columns to the page. The first number bears the imprint: "New Haven in Connecticut: Printed by James Parker, at the Post-Office, near the Sign of the White Horse;" from October 4 to November 29, 1755, the printing office was "near the Hay-Market;" from that date the publishers were "James Parker and Company."²

Narrative of Newspapers, in Mass. Hist. Soc. Collections, for the Year 1799, Boston, 1800, 76–77. The account of Connecticut Newspapers is by Noah Webster, who says he procured the information from Thomas Green, the oldest printer in the State. This is the earliest published account of Connecticut newspapers.

Connecticut Historical Collections, etc., by John Warner Barber, New Haven, [1836]. A very full and quite accurate list of New Haven newspapers, from 1755 to 1837, is given in this work, 180–81.

County, Town and other local histories, as cited.

Mr. Webster, writing in 1800, enumerates seventeen newspapers which had been started in Connecticut in the last century. North, in 1884, names eleven. Thirty-three are described in the following pages.

² This was the second printing office in Connecticut. Soon after locating at New Ha-

President Clap, of New Haven, induced Benjamin Franklin to purchase material with a view to establishing his nephew, Benjamin Mecom. The printing material arrived in the Fall of 1754, but Mecom declined to come, and Parker was induced to undertake the printing office and bought the material of Franklin. Holt went to New York in 1760, and the Gazette was continued by Thomas Green until April 17, 1764, when it was suspended. It resumed publication July 5, 1765. Benjamin Mecom printed it then. It finally ceased with Number 596, February 19, 1768.—History of the City of New Hiven, edited by Edward E. Atwater, New York, 1887, I., 316: Hist. and Antiquities of New Hiven, etc., by J. W. Barber, New Haven, 1831, 62.

This paper was printed on a half sheet of foolscap, in quarto; but occasionally on a whole sheet of pot, folio, by James Parker & Company; and was published weekly, on Friday. John Holt was editor, and the junior partner of the firm; he conducted the journal till 1760, when he removed to New York, and Thomas Green was employed by the company to conduct the Gazette. By the establishment of postriders to the seat of the war at the northward, and to several parts of the colony, the Gazette had, for that time, a considerable circulation. The publication was continued by Parker & Company till 1764, when it was for a short time suspended, but afterward revived by Benjamin Mecom. Mecom continued the Gazette, and added a cut to the title-one which he had used in the title page of The New-England Magazine, published by him three or four months in Boston. The device was a hand clasping a bunch of flowers. He afterwards exchanged this for another, which represented a globe placed on the head of a seraph; an eagle with extended wings lighting with one claw on the globe, holding in the other a book encircled by a glory; from the book was suspended a pair of dividers. Motto, "Honor Virtute Paratur." Another motto extending the whole width of the page, was added after the title, viz: "Those who would give up Essential Liberty, to purchase a little Temporary Safety, deserve neither Liberty nor Safety." Imprint, "Printed by Benjamin Mecom, at the Post-Office in New-Haven." There were two columns in a page of this paper, which was printed from long primer and pica types. Holt, and Mecom his successor, appear to have been attentive in making selections for the Gazette, which was sometimes supplied with original essays on various subjects.—Thomas, 2d ed., II., 85-92.

The number for Saturday, October 1, 1757, has the following imprint: "Printed by J. Parker & Company, at the Post Office, near Captain Peck's at the Long Wharf, where this paper may be had at 2s. 6d. Lawful Money, per Quarter, if sent by the special post; or 1s. 1od. Half Penny, without ven, Parker printed the first book in that town, the Laws of Yale College, with the following title and imprint:

Collegii Yalensis, quod est Novo-Portu, Connecticutensium, Statuta, a Præside et Sociis sancita. In Usum Juventutis Academicæ. Novo-Portu, Excudebat Jacobus Parker, MDCCLV. [Liber Primus Novo-Portu impressus.]

Postage; the first Quarter to be paid at Entrance. Note.—Thirteen Papers go to the Quarter, none to stop but at the end of the Quarter."

In sending out the first number of the revived paper, July 5, 1765, Mecom published this notice: "A year is past since the printer of this paper published proposals for reviving the Connecticut Gazette. 'Tis needless to mention the reasons why it did not appear sooner. He returns thanks to all those who favored him at that time, and hopes they are yet willing to try how far he is able to give them satisfaction. A sample of it is now sent abroad, in order to collect a sufficient number of Subscribers barely to pay the charge of carrying it on. When such a number appears—it shall be printed weekly and delivered to subscribers in town and Country, at the rate of two-pence, for each paper, which is Eight Shillings and Eight Pence, for one year. And no addition shall be made to the price when the Stamp Act takes effect, if it is then encouraged so as to be afforded at that rate. -Subscribers are not desired to engage for any particular time, so that they can stop it when they please. - A special post is appointed to carry it out of the common Post-Roads, -Advertisements shall be printed at a moderate Price, according to their length.-All kinds of Provisions, Fire Wood and other suitable country Produce will be taken as pay of those who cannot spare money, if delivered at the Printer's Dwelling House, or at any other place which may accidentally suit him,"

- 1758, August 8.—The New-London Summary, or the Week-ly Advertiser, "with the Freshest Advices, Foreign and Domestick," at New London, by the second Timothy Green. It was a folio sheet; the size of the page 8x12 inches, in two columns. A cut of the colony seal, surmounted by an escutcheon of the town, a ship under full sail, by way of a crest. It was printed at first on Tuesday, and afterwards on Friday. Green died August 3, 1763, and the paper was discontinued three weeks later, but was resumed in November, under the next title:
- 1763, November 3.—The New London Gazette, "With the latest Advices, Foreign and Domestick," at New London, by Timothy Green, the third printer of the name in New London. It had a cut of the King's arms in the title, and was issued weekly, on Friday, on a sheet of foolscap, folio, principally from a long primer type. On December 17, 1773, the title was altered to The Connecticut Gazette and Universal Intelligencer; the latter part of the title was dropped December 22, 1786. In 1774 the paper was enlarged to a sheet of crown, and afterwards to a sheet of larger size. The imprint of the first number reads: "Printed by Timothy Green, at the Printing Office, late in the occupation of Mr. Timothy Green deceased. . . . N. B. The business of Copper plate printing and Book binding is performed by said Green."

This paper outlived several which, since 1775, were published in the same place; it uniformly defended the rights of the country before the Revolution, and supported federal republican principles after the adoption of the constitution. Timothy Green, the first printer of the Gazette, in May, 1793, resigned his right in the paper to his son, Samuel Green, who continued its publication. — Thomas, 11., 88.

It was a sheet of foolscap size, four pages, folio. At first it had a cut of the King's arms at the head; but this was banished in December, 1773, and the title was altered to Connecticut Gazette. Thirty years after its first appearance, the paper was enlarged to a royal sheet; and about the same time, its original proprietor resigned it to the hands of his son, Samuel Green, in whose possession it remained for many years.—Buckingham's Specimens of Newspaper Literature, I., 316.

The paper on which this Gazette is printed, was manufactured at Norwich—a proof that this colony can furnish itself with one very considerable article which has heretofore carried thousands of pounds out of it. This should excite every lover of his country, to promote as much as possible this laudable undertaking, by saving all their linen rags.—New London Gazette, No. 161, December 12, 1766.

The size of the Gazette was considerably increased over that of its predecessor, the print arranged in three columns, and the price 6s. per annum. It changed owners often, the last Green surrendering it in 1841, and in 1844 it was discontinued, after an existence of more than eighty years.— Caulkins's Hist. New London, ed. 1860, 654-5.

1764, October 29.—The Connecticut Courant, at Hartford, by Thomas Green, "at the Heart and Crown, near the North Meeting-House." This was a prospectus number; the regular issue began December 3, 1764.

From that time to the present it has continued, without a break in its record or a change in its title, so that long ago it became the oldest newspaper in the country.—Chas. Hopkins Clark, in Memorial History of Hartford Country, Conn., 1633–1884, edited by J. Hammond Trumbull, Boston, 1886, I., 605.

It was printed on a sheet of pot size, and continued weekly on Tuesday, until 1767. Green then took as a partner Ebenezer Watson, and removed to New Haven. Watson managed the Courant for two years, under the firm name of Green & Watson, after which Watson became its proprietor. The paper was for a number of years printed with a much worn long primer type, occasionally intermixed with columns and half columns of old pica. About the year 1773, it was enlarged to a crown sheet; a coarse cut of the King's arms was inserted in the title, to which was added, "Containing the freshest and most important Advices, both Foreign and Domestic." The Courant was afterwards printed on a new type, when it made a more respectable appearance. The King's arms were discarded, and the arms of Connecticut took their place in the title, which was now altered to "The Connecticut Courant and Hartford Weekly Intelligencer: Containing," etc. Imprint: "Printed and published by Ebenezer Watson, near the Great-Bridge." After the British troops gained possession of New York, and the newspapers on the side of the country in that place were discontinued, and the printers of them dispersed, the Courant became of much consequence; its circulation rapidly increased; and, for some time, the number of copies printed weekly was equal to, if not greater, than that of any other paper then printed on the continent. Watson, the publisher, died in September, 1777, and the Courant was continued by his widow and George Goodwin, under the firm of Watson & Goodwin, until March, 1779. Barzillai Hudson married the widow of Watson, and became partner of Goodwin in March, 1779; and from that time until 1823, the Courant was published by the firm of Hudson & Goodwin. Hudson died July 31, 1823, aged 82; Goodwin died May 14, 1844.—Thomas, II., 89.

1767, October 23.—The Connecticut Journal, and New-Haven Post-Boy, at New Haven, by Thomas and Samuel Green. Passed through the hands of many publishers. Ended with No. 3517, April 7, 1835. The latter part of the title was omitted in 1775. The paper was published as The Connecticut Journal until 1799, when, for a few months, the words "Weekly Advertiser" were added to the title. Afterwards for a few months, in 1809, the word "Advertiser" was added ag iin.—Atwater, as cited; Connecticut Hist. Collections, etc., by John Warner Barber, New Haven [1836], 180.

The average size of this paper was 14x16 inches; occasionally there was a supplement, which varied from six to eight inches square.

The New Haven Journal and Courier of 1894, is regarded by many as a continuation of the old Connecticut Journal of 1767.

We are very sorry that we cannot procure a sufficiency of paper to publish a whole sheet;—but as there is now a paper-mill erecting in this town, we expect after a few weeks, to be supplied with such a quantity as to publish the Journal regularly on a uniform sized paper, and to be able to make ample amends for past deficiencies.—Connecticut Journal, July 3, 1776.

This paper was printed on a pot sheet, folio, three columns in a page; types, long primer and pica. A cut of a postman on horseback, copied from The Boston Post-Boy, but badly engraved, divided the title. It was published weekly, on Friday. Imprint, generally,—"Printed by Thomas and Samuel Green, near the College." Some years after, the title was Connecticut Journal only, the cut omitted, and the size of the paper enlarged to a crown sheet; but it was occasionally varied. The Journal gained an establishment, and maintained its ground against several other papers which from time to time appeared in New Haven. It continued to be published by Thomas and Samuel Green, until the death of the latter, at New Haven, in February, 1799; the Journal was continued until January, 1809, by Thomas Green & Son. Thomas Green, brother of Samuel, died there also, May, 1812, aged 77. Thomas Green, Jr., died in May, 1825, aged 60.—Thomas, II., 86-7.

Thomas and Samuel Green, the first printers of the Journal, were grandsons of the first Timothy Green of New-London, and were born in that place. The paper underwent many changes in size and typography; and since 1800 has changed owners, I believe, more than once, and in size and mechanical execution, has corresponded with the improvements that have taken place in contemporary journals. Some of the earliest issues were smaller than common letter paper; others respectable demy. That it was not a source of great wealth to the proprietors, previous to the Revolution, may be concluded from a notice, in the paper of April 12, 1773, which says, -"The Printers are sorry, they can with truth inform the public, that they have not, for this year past, received from all the customers for this Journal, so much money as they have expended for blank paper, on which it has been printed; and they shall be under the necessity of reducing it to its original size and price, unless subscribers for it are more punctual in their payments. The next week's paper, (No. 286) completes one year since its enlargement, and to which time all those, who are indebted, (whose accounts are of more than one year's standing) are earnestly requested to make immediate payment to the Printers."-Buckingham, I., 313.

1773, September 30 (estimated1)—The Norwich [cut of ship Packet, And, the Connecticut, Massachusetts, New-Hampshire, & Rhode-Island Weekly Advertiser. It was handsomely printed with a new long primer type, on a sheet of crown paper, weekly, on Thursday. Vol. I., No. 3, is dated "From Thursday, October 14, to Thursday, October 21, 1773." "Norwich Packet" was engraved in large German text. Imprint,-"Norwich: Printed by Alexander Robertson, James Robertson & John Trumbull, at the Printing-Office, near the Court-House, at Six Shillings and Eight Pence per Annum. Advertisements, &c., are thankfully received for this Paper, and all Manner of Printing Work is performed with Care, Fidelity, and Expedition." The original size was 15x9 1-2 inches.

The Packet was continued by this company until June, 1776; Trumbull then became the sole publisher, and continued it with various alterations in the title, size, and appearance, until he died, in 1802. Thereupon No. 1455 was printed for his widow, Lucy Trumbull, but under a new title, viz. The Connecticut Centinel. The Centinel in fact was a new paper, established on the foundation of the Packet. The paper was discontinued in 1804. - Hist. of Norwich, Conn., by Frances Manwaring Caulkins, 1866, 357, 580; Thomas, II., 91-92.

The firm was Robertsons & Trumbull. For the title of a book printed by the firm in 1774, at Norwich, see the Brinley Catalogue, No. 2566.

John Trumbull was, I believe, born in Charlestown, Mass.; he served an apprenticeship with Samuel K. Kneeland in Boston, and entered into partnership with the Robertsons, previously of Albany, N. Y. In 1776 the Robertsons joined the British in New York. Trumbull continued printing at Norwich. He was an honest, well meaning man, and attached to his country. He died August 14, 1802, aged 52 years. - Thomas, I., 192-3.

Alexander and James Robertson were sons of a respectable printer in Scotland, whence James came with John Fleming to Boston, where he worked for two or three years as a journeyman for Mein and Fleming. was a worthy man, and a very good printer. Alexander was intelligent, well educated, and possessed some abilities as a writer.—Thomas, I., 192. Mrs. Emma Robertson, wife of James, died at Norwich, June 15, 1776, and is buried there. Further notices of the Robertsons will be found in the account of the press of New York.

- 1783, September—The Freeman's Fournal, or American Advertiser, at Hartford, by B. Webster, "at his office opposite the Court House." Continued about a year. -- Clark, as cited.
- 1784, May 13-The New Haven Gasette, at New Haven, by Meigs, Bowen & Dana. Ended February 9, 1786.--Atwater. (See 1786, February 16.)
- 1784, July 12-The American Mercury, at Hartford, by Barlow & Babcock.

Joel Barlow was its editor, and Elisha Babcock its publisher. It was anti-Federal in politics. Barlow retired from the paper before his departure for Europe in 1788. Charles Babcock succeeded his father as publisher. He was followed by G. F. Olmsted. The paper was continued until 1833, when it disappeared in the Internal ent Press. - Chas. Hopkins Clark, as cited.

1784, December 21, (Tuesday)—The Weekly Monitor; and American Advertiser, at Litchfield, by Thomas Collier and — Copp, "in the south end of the Court House." Copp retired Dec. 12, 1785, after which Mr. Collier continued the paper until 1806, when it was discontinued. In 1800 the paper was called The Farmer's Monitor.

In 1784 the first newspaper press was established in this County by Thomas Collier, and was continued under his superintendence for more than twenty years. It was called the "Weekly Monitor." It was a well conducted sheet, and it is refreshing now, after the lapse of many years, to look through its columns, as through a glass, and see the men of other days, as they have spoken and acted on the same ground on which we stand. Mr. Collier was an able writer, and his editorial efforts would have done honor to any journal. It is a Litchfield monitor now, and whoever shall look over its files shall see, at a glance, the great changes which have been introduced, in later days, into all the departments of business and of social and political life.—Chief Justice Samuel Church, in Litchfield County Centennial Celebration, August 13-14, 1851; Hartford, 1851, 44.

Yet have the laboring Colliers done their part, Thy head to enlighten and to warm thy heart, Their Sibyl leaves upon the winds were thrown, For others' benefit, if not their own.

-The Rev. John Pierpont, ibid, 81.

Thomas Collier, son of Richard, was born in Boston, Feb. 20, 1760, and served his apprenticeship with his uncle, Richard Draper, in that town. After the dissolution of his partnership with Copp, he appears in 1789 to have been associated with one Adam, books having been published at Litchfield with the imprint of Collier & Adam. On leaving Litchfield he resided for several years in Troy, N. Y. He died in Binghamton, N. Y., in 1844. Perhaps one cause of the discontinuance of the Monitor was the bitter rivalry it encountered from The Witness, a violent democratic paper started in August, 1805, by two young printers, Selleck Osborn and Timothy Ashley. Osborn was born in Trumbull, Conn., in 1783, and was talented, energetic, intensely partisan and bitterly satirical. He succeeded inside of two years in getting convicted and imprisoned (for a year) for libel and slander, and in June, 1807, figured up in his paper an aggregate of $1,474.44 of judgments and costs that had been entered up against him, including $522 for slander on Thomas Collier. His alleged sufferings in prison were used as party capital all over the country, and he was hailed as a martyr. He probably managed to kill off the Monitor, but his own paper did not survive the effort, being discontinued in the summer of 1807. His party zeal was rewarded by a commission as 1st lieutenant of dragoons in the U.S. army; he served in the war of 1812, but left the army in 1814 and edited papers in Bennington, Vt., Wilmington, Del., and in 1825 in New York city. He published a volume of poems at Boston, in 1823. After leaving New York he removed to Philadelphia, where he died October I, 1826.—Thomas, II., 88; Brinley, 8851, note, 6478, 7453; Caulkins's Hist. Norwich, 580; Hist. Middlesex County; Munsell's Typographical Miscellany, 106; Cyclopedia of American Literature, etc., by Evert A. Duyckinck and George L. Duyckinck, New York, 1866, II., 46.

- 1785, November 8-The Middlesex Gazette, at Middletown, by Woodward & Green; was published until May,
- 1786, February 16—The New-Haven Gasette, and The Connecticut Magazine, at New Haven, by Meigs & Dana; weekly.

The title of Vol. II. reads: "The New-Haven Gazette, and The Connecticut Magazine, Vol. II. For the year M.DCC.LXXXVII. Many shall run to and fro, and Knowledge shall be increased. Daniel, Chap. I. V. 4. [Seal of New Haven]. New-Haven: Printed by Meigs & Dana, at the South Corner of the Green." Vol. II, No. 1, is dated "Thursday, February 22, M.DCC.LXXXVII." The paper was published weekly, eight pages, the printed matter 7\frac{1}{2}x8\frac{3}{4} inches, paged consecutively. Vol. II. contains 360 pages. The colophon reads :- "New-Haven: Printed and Published by Meigs & Dana, at the South Corner of the Green, fronting the Market. Price Eight Shillings per Annum. Essays and Articles of Intelligence are gratefully received and Advertisements are inserted on reasonable terms." The number for August 2, 1787, announces the dissolution of the partnership of Meigs & Dana, and that the paper would be continued by Josiah Meigs. Volume II. concludes with No. 45, Thursday, December 27, 1787, in which paper the publisher announces: "Country produce will be received if delivered before the first of February. If this paper is continued, the size of it will probably be reduced." There is an index of two pages appended. This volume contains a number of instalments of the Anarchiad. It also contains reports of the progress of Shays's Rebellion, the debates on the proposed Federal Constitution, the organization of the Northwest Territory, etc. The paper was still published in 1789, Vol. IY., No. 23.

"The Anarchiad was published in portions, in the Connecticut Magazine, during the years 1786 and 1787. Dr. Hopkins was the projector of this work, and had considerable share in writing it. It was a mock critical account of a pretended ancient epic poem, interspersed with a number of extracts from the supposed work. By a fable contrived with some ingenuity, this poem is represented as known to the ancients, and read and imitated by some of the most popular modern poets. By this supposition, the utmost license of parody and imitation is obtained, and by the usual poetic machinery of episodes, visions and prophecies, the scene is shifted backward and forward, from one country to another, from earth to heaven, and from ancient to modern times. This plan is filled up with great spirit; the humorous is indeed much better than the serious part, but both have merit, and some of the parodies are extremely happy. The political views of the authors were to support those designs which were then forming for an efficient federal Constitution."—Analectic Magazine.

1788 (cir.)—American Musical Magazine, at New Haven, by Amos Doolittle and Daniel Read; monthly, quarto; ten numbers only issued.

Amos Doolittle was an engraver, and doubtless engraved the music for the periodical. In 1775 he engraved on copper four different views of the battles of Lexington and Concord, from "original paintings taken on the spot" by one Earl, a portrait painter. These engravings were 18x12 inches. Mr. Doolittle believed they were the first historical engravings ever executed in America. He died at New Haven January 31, 1832, aged 78 years, after having industriously applied himself to the business of engraving for more than half a century. By a curious coincidence, the last day he was able to perform any labor, he assisted J. W. Barber in engraving a reproduction of his view of the battle of Lexington, executed fifty-six years before. See Barber's Hist. and Antiquities of New Haven, 87, 111. Books of music, engraved by A. Doolittle, were printed at New Haven, in 1783 and 1793, and at Danbury in 1800. See Brinley, 5930, 5932, 5955.

- 1790, January 5—The New Haven Gazette, at New Haven; weekly; ended June 29, 1791.
- 1790, March 18—The Farmer's Journal, at Danbury, by Nathan Douglas and Edwards Ely, near the Court House. In June, 1793, the partnership was dissolved, the paper discontinued, and two rival papers were started by the former partners. (See 1793, June 17).

A Printing Office was established in this town in March, 1790. A weekly News-print has been regularly published from that time to this, on demy paper: it has generally been, as it is at present, respectable for good principles and information. The number of papers issued at first were but 100; there have been as many as 2,000; the usual number has been about 1,000. In June, 1793, a second paper was published in this town, which continued several months.—A Century Sermon, delivered at Danbury, January 1, 1801, etc., by Thomas Robbins, A. M., 3d ed., Danbury, 1846, 16.

1791, March 12 (est.)—The Phenix; Or, Windham Herald, at Windham, probably by John Byrne. In the title was a cut of a phænix, rising from the flames, with the motto, Conabimur, between the words The and Phenix.

Number 7, Vol. I., Saturday, April 23, 1791, has the imprint:—
"Windham: Printed by John Byrne, North of the Court House." The paper was printed on a folio sheet, four pages, three columns to the page.
With No. 372, Vol. VIII., April 19, 1798, the name was changed to Windham Herald. In No. 408, Vol. VIII., Thursday, December 27, 1798, the office of publication is announced to be "in the lower room of the Court House." It was then still printed with three columns to the page. From a copy of No. 488, Vol. X., Thursday, July 10, 1800, we learn that the paper was still "published by John Byrne, in the lower room of the Court House." It then had four pages, 10\frac{1}{2}\text{x17} inches, four columns to the page.
It continued until December, 1804, and perhaps longer.

Ebenezer Bushnell; Thomas Hubbard, his brother-in-law, appeared as joint publisher June 7, 1792.

No. 3 is dated December 13, 1791. October 1, 1793, Bushnell retired from the paper, and Hubbard conducted it alone. Discontinued in 1796, when Hubbard removed to the Landing, then called Chelsea Landing, and began the publication of the Chelsea Counier.\(^1 - Caulkins.\)

The printing office was "24 rods west of the Meeting House," and nearly opposite the Packet office. Mr. Bushnell was a man of quick wit and varied information, ready with his pen, and with a talent for poetical composition. He was a native of Windham, graduated at Yale in 1777, and settled at Norwich as attorney. After leaving the Register he entered the paper making business in connection with Andrew Huntington, but a few years later enlisted in the U. S. navy, and was made purser of the ship Warrer, in which position he died, at Havana, in July or August, 1800, aged 43. Caulkinis Norwick, 581.

In the issue of the paper for June 7, 1792, Bushnell announces that he has associated with himself Thomas Hubbard, "in the Printing and Stocking Weaving business"—a curious combination of professions.

1793, June 17 (Monday)—The Farmer's Chronicle. "Published by Edwards Ely, at his Office, near the Court-House, in Danbury, (Connecticut) Where Useful Essays and Articles of Intelligence are Thankfully Received. * * * Advertisements inserted on reasonable terms." An outgrowth of The Farmer's Fournal, started March 18, 1790, which see. The issue for Monday, July 20, 1795 (Vol. III., No. 29, Whole No. 110), is "published by Ely & Nichols, at their office south of the Court-House, in Danbury, (Connecticut.)" It was published under the same title June 27, 1796. A paper called the Farmer's Fournal, No. 13, July 2, 1800, was published by Stiles & Nichols—probably a reversion of the Chronicle to the original name.

1793, June 17 (Monday)—The Republican Fournal, at Danbury. "Printed and published by Nathan Douglas, near the Court-House." An outgrowth of The Farmer's Fournal, started March 18, 1790, which see. Probably lived but a few months. In 1800 Douglas & Nichols had a printing office in Danbury; in 1803 S. Nichols carried on the business alone. See Brinley, 5526, 5930.

1794, January.—The Hartford Gazette: and Universal Advertiser, at Hartford.

"Printed and published (Mondays and Thursdays) by Beach & Storrs, opposite the Court-House;" afterwards¹ by L[azarus] Beach & Co. On Oct. 13, 1794, the name was shortened to Hartford Gazette, and Ira Jones being taken in partnership the paper was printed by Beach and Jones. On Dec. 4, 1794, the place of publication was changed to "nearly opposite the loan office." This was the first semi-weekly in the State. There is a No. 116, March 5, 1795, probably near the last, as Mr. Webster says the Gazette did not reach its second volume, the publishers removing to Newfield. (See next title.)

Lazarus Beach came here from Redding and carried on the business of printer, bookseller and stationer, on the corner of Wall and Water streets, opposite the old Washington hotel. The paper was printed upon what would now be called fair wrapping paper, and circulated about 800 copies, which were distributed by post-riders throughout the whole of Fairfield county. The subscription price-was $1.50 per annum, and it continued to be issued by Mr. Beach and his successor, Samuel Mallory, for nearly ten years.—Hist. of Fairfield County, Conn., compiled by D. Hamilton Hurd, Phila., 1881, 87.

- 1795, in the Spring—The American Telegraphe, and Fairfield County Gazette, at Newfield, a village three miles from Stratford, by Lazarus Beach and Ira Jones; in 1800 it was conducted by the former; still published in 1804. In 1800 Newfield was incorporated as a borough, and was called Bridgeport.
- 1795, March 2 (est.), Monday—The New-London Advertiser. "Printed by Thomas C. Green, South of the Parade, New-London."
- 1796, February—The New Haven Gazette, at New Haven; weekly; ended August 9, 1802.
- 1796, February—The Federal Gasetteer, at New Haven; weekly; ended August 9, 1802.
- 1796, October—The Weekly Oracle, at New London; "printed and published by James Springer, at his Printing-Office, opposite the Market."

No. 86, Vol. II., Saturday, June 9, 1798, has the title Springer's Week-ly Oracle, which perhaps was the heading from the beginning. It gives the following imprint and prospectus:

- "Printed and Published by James Springer, at his Printing-Office, opposite the Market, where Subscriptions at Nine Shillings per Annum, Advertisements &c. are thankfully received for this Paper, and all Manner of Printing Work is performed with Care, Fidelity, and Expedition.
- " * The editor has removed to the dwelling house and store lately occupied by Dr. Pelouze, opposite the market; where he continues his business as heretofore. A box for the reception of manuscripts will be affixed to the front door, so that communications for the Oracle may at any hour, be conveyed to a secret and safe deposit. The lucubrations of gentlemen of abilities are solicited; and a continuance of advertising favors would form an essential and beautiful appendage to the useful and ornamental part of his paper:—Advertising friends might promise themselves a rich return for this trifling expense; as the Oracle has an extensive circulation, having trebled the number of its patrons since the publication commenced; the efforts of "Frenchmen, Jacobins and Disorganizers," not-withstanding."

The printed page was 12½x6½ inches. In the issue for July 8, 1799 (Vol. II., No. 138), the subscription price was stated to be seven shillings and sixpence per annum—a reduction of one shilling and sixpence. The title and imprint were unchanged. The paper was still published in 1800.

- 1796, November 30 (est.)—Chelsea Courier, Norwich: (Chelsea Society,) Printed and Published by Thomas Hubbard, Vol. I., No. 9, Wednesday, January 25, 1797. Vol. II., No. 1, is dated November 30, 1797. The Courier, Vol. III., No. 39, Norwich, is dated August 21, 1799. Hubbard relinquished the business to his son, Russell Hubbard, November 13, 1805, who changed the name to The Norwich Courier, by which title it was still published in 1859.
- 1797, June 14—The Bee, at New London, by Charles Holt; discontinued June 30, 1802. "So fully did the Greens possess the field that it was seriously inquired of Mr. Holt if he had obtained permission of them to publish a paper there. Holt removed to Hudson, N. Y., in 1802."—Thomas, II., 88, note.

On the 17th August, 1802, Charles Holt commenced the publication of The Bee, at Hudson, N. Y. It had been published by him, with some interruptions, during the five years previous, at New London, Conn., where he incurred fine and imprisonment under the sedition act. The expenses of his trial and fine, and loss of business by imprisonment, rendering it expedient to close up his affairs in his native city and seek another location, he accepted an invitation from the republicans of Hudson, and transferred his paper and printing materials to the latter place. The circulation of the Bee had never been above 800 or 1,000 copies, and is supposed to have been about the same in the new location. * * In 1810 he sold his establishment and removed to New York, where he printed the Columbian, daily and semi-weekly. He finally left the business, accepting the office of ward justice, and afterwards a place in the custom-house. He now [i e., about 1850] resides at Jersey City, feeble and paralyzed, at the age of 76, having recently obtained from government the remission of his fine, with interest, it is believed .- The Typographical Miscellany, by J. Munsell, Albany, 1850, 148.

This paper was a prominent organ of the democratic party, and under the administration of the elder Adams, the editor was arrested for a libel, tried by the United States Court then sitting at New Haven, and under the provisions of the sedition law condemned to six months' imprisonment, and to pay a fine of $200. He discontinued his paper June 30, 1802, and immediately issued proposals for publishing a paper with the same title at Hudson, N. Y. Charles Holt was a native of New London; he died at Jersey City in August, 1852, aged 78 years.—Caulkins's New London, 657.

1797, June 14 (Wednesday)—Impartial [figure of Justice surmounted by an Eagle] Herald. "A Periodical Register of the Times. Beneath the Eagle's Wings Columbia rise—Say, Wisdom's Goddess, where the balance lies." Published at Suffield, by H. & O. Farnsworth.

The first number contains the following prospectus:

"Conditions.

"The Impartial Herald shall be published every Wednesday, on a royal paper, and with an elegant type.

"The price will be One Dollar and Fifty Cents per annum, delivered at the Printing-Office.

"Quarterly payments will be required. Published at Suffield, Connecticut—By H. & O. Farnsworth, a few rods south of the Meeting-House, where Printing, in its variety, is executed with elegance, accuracy, and dispatch.

In No. 18, Wednesday, October 11, 1797, the publishers declare that "The Impartial Herald has an extensive circulation in the States of Massachusetts and Connecticut." The price remained at $1.50 per annum, "Thirty-Eight cents to be paid at the close of each quarter." Discontinued before 1800.

II. & O. Farnsworth published the Impartial Herald probably one year, and Edward Gray continued its publication in 1798, at Suffield. I have one copy printed by Gray, November 27, 1798; how long he continued cannot say. I have two books printed by H. & O. Farnsworth at Suffield in 1797, namely: "Sir Charles Grandison," and "Charity Rewarded." Also Gideon Granger's [4th of July, 1797] oration, and Ebenezer Gay's sermon printed the same year by Havila & Oliver Farnsworth for Oliver D. & I. Cooke, Booksellers, Hartford.—H. S. Sheldon, of Suffield. (MS.)

Edward Gray was a printer and newspaper publisher at Springfield, Mass., 1793-98. See under head of Massachusetts, 1787, January 1; and 1795, August. He is understood to have removed from Suffield to Hartford.

- 1798, October 9 (est).—Fournal of the Times, at Stonington Point, by Samuel Trumbull. Vol. I., No. 35, is dated June 4, 1799.
- 1799, October 8 (Tuesday)—Impartial [figure of Liberty] Fournal, at Stonington, by Samuel Trumbull. Motto—"Open To All Parties, But Influenced By None." It was still published, Tuesday, September 1, 1801, Vol. III., No. 48. Evidently a continuation of the Fournal of the Times, under a new name, but consecutively numbered.
- 1800, January 1—The Messenger, at New Haven; weekly; ended August 9, 1802.
- 1800, March 31 (est)—Rural Gazette, at Sharon. "Published by E. Hopkins, a few rods North of the Meeting House." No. 39 is dated December 22, 1800, and is printed on a page 11x18 inches.
- 1800, July 14 (est.)—The Sun of Liberty, at Norwalk. "Printed every Tuesday by Samuel Morse." No. 35 is dated March 17, 1801.

The finest work of the kind printed in this country, and an invaluable contribution to American bibliography.

The Charlemagne Tower Collection of American Colonial Laws. Privately printed for the Historical Society of Pennsylvania. [Philadelphia.] 1890. 4º Pp. 298. This sumptuous volume, printed on hand-made linen paper, was compiled by Charles R. Hildeburn. The Tower Collection is the completest of its kind in the country. The first volume of the compilation of Delaware Laws was printed by B. Franklin, and D. Hall, Philadelphia, 1752.

The most precise information about the newspapers of Delaware has been obtained from the few numbers in the Harvard University Library, and in the Ridgway Branch of the Library Company of Philadelphia, James Adams was born in Ireland about 1730, and learned the art of printing in Londonderry. When of age he came to Philadelphia, and was there employed for seven years by Franklin & Hall. He began business for himself in that city about the year 1760; but in 1761 removed his press to Wilmington. Several works on religious subjects came from his press, and he published annually one or more almanacs, and bound and sold books. He was a good workman, an exemplary Christian, and much esteemed. When the British army were approaching Philadelphia in 1777, he removed his printing materials, family, etc., to the vicinity of Doylestown, Bucks County, Penn. There he printed an almanac, but otherwise his press was idle. In 1778 he moved back to Wilmington. He died near the close of 1792, aged 68 years. He left a large family, four sons and six daughters. His sons were all brought up to printing. Two of them succeeded their father, but were not successful in business. Adams was the only printer who settled in Delaware before 1775. - Thomas, I., 318-319.

HISTORY AND CHRONOLOGY OF NEWSPAPERS.

1762—Wilmington Chronicle, established at Wilmington, by James Adams. Not meeting with any encouragement, it was discontinued after being published six months.

1785, March (est.)—The Delaware Gazette, at Wilmington, established as a weekly.

Now published as the weekly edition of Every Evening, the full title being Delaware Gazette and State Journal. No. 327, Saturday, July 2, 1791, has the imprint: "Printed and sold by Peter Brynberg and Samuel Andrews in Market-street, where Advertisements are thankfully received; Likewise, Subscriptions for this Paper, at Two Dollars per annum. One half to be paid at the time of subscribing, and the remainder at the end of the year." The price of the paper was six cents. The issue for Saturday, August 15, 1795 (No. 542) has the same imprint. No. 598, dated Tuesday, March 8, 1796, was "Printed for Robert Coram, by Bonsal & Starr," and announces that the paper was "published every Tuesday and Friday, price Three dollars and a half per annum." In March, 1796, the name of Robert Coram was dropped, and Bonsal & Starr appeared as the printers for a year or more thereafter. No. 672, Tuesday, November 1, 1796, has the imprint: "Printed by W. C. Smyth, rear of the New Fire-Engine, Shipley-street, opposite Capt. O'Flinn's Tavern, Wilmington." In the following January, Smyth had removed the printing office to "Two doors below Mr. Brinton's Tavern, High-street, Wilmington," and the paper was then published on Wednesdays and Saturdays, and continued to be so published as late as Saturday, June 23, 1798, No. 842, at "Four Dollars per annum." It may be noted here that the firm of Bonsal & Starr was succeeded in 1797 by Bonsal & Niles, who were still in the printing business in 1801. W. C. Smyth had been a partner in the publication of the Maryland Journal, at Baltimore, for a few weeks before coming to Washington.

1787—The Wilmington Courant, at Wilmington, by James Adams; published two or three years.

1794—The Delaware and Eastern Shore Advertiser.

No. 85, Wednesday, March 4, 1795, has the imprint: "Wilmington: Printed on Wednesdays and Saturdays, by Sam. & John Adams, & W. C. Smyth. Corner of King & High-streets; where Advertisements, Essays, Letters of Intelligence (Post Paid) and Subscriptions for this Paper are taken in, at Four Dollars per ann one-half to be paid on subscribing and the remainder at the end of the year. (A Letter-Box on the Window.)" Smyth withdrew from the firm in March, 1795, and the paper was published by Samuel and John Adams. No. 196, for Thursday, March 24, 1796, announces that the paper was printed on Mondays and Thursdays, by Samuel and John Adams, as above. No. 536, Thursday, August 1, 1799, gives no publisher's name. In 1797 Samuel and John Adams appear to have been located in New-Castle, where they "published by authority" a compilation of Delaware laws, 1700–1797, in two stout octavo volumes. This was one of the earliest of New-Castle imprints, if not the first.

No. 33 of Vol. II., Saturday, November 26, 1791, Whole No. 85, bearing the same title and imprint as No. 75.

1793, December (est.)—The Columbian Chronicle, at George-Town.

No. 120, Tuesday, February 3, 1795, has the imprint, etc.: "Printed every Tuesday and Friday by Hanson & Priestley, opposite Dr. Smith's. 'Let it be impressed on your minds—let it be instilled into your Children—that the Liberty of the Press is the Palladium of your Rights.'—Junius. 'For a People to be Free, it is sufficient that they Will it.'—La Fayette. Price six cents." The issue for Tuesday, August II, 1795 (No. 174), names Samuel Hanson alone as publisher. No. 251, Tuesday, May 10, 1796, is the same. This was probably the last number, the paper being succeeded by The Centinel of Liberty, May 24, 1796. (See under that date.)

Was Dr. Joseph Priestley one of the publishers? He arrived in America in June, 1794, but proceeded directly to Northumberland, Penn.

1795, May 22 (est.)—Impartial Observer and Washington Advertiser, at Washington, by T. Wilson.

No. 5, Friday, June 19, 1795, Vol. I., has the imprint: "City of Washington. Printed (every Friday) by T. Wilson, at the Corner of $4\frac{1}{2}$ & P streets, Greenleaf-Point. The price of the I Observer, &c. is Two Dollars per annum—One to be paid at the time of Subscribing and the other at the expiration of six months."

1796, May 24—The Centinel of Liberty and George-Town Advertiser, at "George-Town on the Potomak."

The prospectus reads: "The Following are the Terms. It shall be Printed twice a week on good paper, and for the present of the same size of the late Columbian Chronicle, and forwarded to subscribers at Three Dollars a year, exclusive of postage. The price of six months to be paid in advance. Green, English & Co. George-Town, May 24, 1796." No. 33, Vol. II., Friday, September 15, 1797, has this imprint: "From the Press of Green, English, & Co. George-Town, (Potomak) every Tuesday and Friday at 4 Dollars per annum," and this motto: "Liberty is a right of doing whatever the laws permit; and if a citizen could do what they forbid he would no longer be possessed of liberty, because all his fellow citizens would have the same power.—Montesquieu." No. 77, Vol. II., Tuesday, Febr uary 20, 1798, substitutes for the quotation from Montesquieu, this from Washington: "Every portion of our country finds the most commanding motives for carefully guarding and preserving the Union of the whole."

1796, May (est.)—The Centinel and Country Gazette, at George-Town.

No. 6, Vol. II., Friday, June 30, 1797, has the imprint: "George-

In the issue for Friday, March 2, 1798 (Vol. II., No. 41), Montesquieu gives way to this quotation from Washington: "Every portion of our country finds the most commanding motives for carefully guarding and preserving the Union of the whole."

This was apparently a weekly edition of The Centinel of Liberty and George-Town Advertiser, issued by the same publishers.

the figure of an eye and the motto "Nunquam Dormio;" on one side figure of Liberty, and on the other figure of Justice] Gazette, at Washington, by Benjamin More.

Number 1 of Volume I., "From Saturday, June 11, to Wednesday, June 15, 1796," has the imprint: "City of Washington. Published by Benjamin More, every Wednesday and Saturday, price 4 dollars per ann. at the house next west of the Hotel, where subscriptions will be thankfully received. Hand-bills, &c. printed at the shortest notice." In his prospectus the publisher candidly announced that his object was, first, "to obtain a living," and second, "to amuse and inform his readers." In Number 4 and thereafter it is provided in the terms "one dollar to be paid at the end of every quarter." The experiment of a semi-weekly was evidently not a success, for Number 10 of Volume II., "From Saturday, September 9 to Saturday September 16, 1797," announces that the paper is "Published by Benjamin More, every Saturday, price Two and a Half Dollars per ann.," and it was so published up to Number 35, Volume II., "From Saturday, March 3, to Saturday, March 24, 1798," when the paper was discontinued.

1800 (cir.)—Washington Federalist, at George Town, by Charles Prentiss and A. Rind.

Charles Prentiss was born in Reading, Middlesex County, Massachusetts, in October, 1774. He was a son of the Rev. Caleb Prentiss. He graduated at Harvard in 1795. After leaving Washington, he published in Baltimore, in 1800, a literary paper, "Child of Pallas, devoted mostly to the Belles-Lettres." On Friday, February 1, 1802, the first number of The Republican or Anti-Democrat, was published (at Baltimore), by Messrs. Prentiss & Cole, No. 14 South Charles street, Monday, Wednesday and Friday. This paper ceased December 30, 1803. In 1804 he went to England. In 1809 he published, in Boston, a few numbers of "The Thistle," a dramatic paper. In 1812-14 he was a Congressional correspondent. In 1813, he published a life of General Eaton, and edited the Virginia Patriot, at Richmond, in 1818. He died at Brimfield, Mass., October 20, 1820.—Buckingham, II., 273-75; The Chronicles of Baltimore, etc., by Col. J. Thomas Scharf, Baltimore, 1874, 89; Catalogue of The American Books · · · in the British Museum at Christmas, 1856, by Henry Stevens, . . . London, 1866, 115.

1800, October 31—The National Intelligencer and Washington Advertiser, at Washington City, by Samuel Harrison Smith, New-Jersey Avenue, near the Capitol. Five Dolls. per Ann. Paid in Advance. A tri-weekly.

Vol. I., No. XXIII, is dated Monday, December 22, 1800. By Wednesday, Nov. 11, 1801 (Vol. I., No. CLX.), Smith had removed to Pennsylvania avenue. The publisher was from Philadelphia, where he had issued The New World, 1795-97. (See under head of Pennsylvania, the date 1795.)

For thirteen years it was published three times a week, and since that time it has been a daily paper. During the first of its years, there was a weekly paper connected with it, and growing out of it, called the United States Gazette. Since it has been published daily there has been a triweekly paper for the country, bearing the same name, and containing all the best matter of the daily.—Knapp, as cited, 129.

In 1807, Joseph Gales, Jr., entered the office of the Intelligencer as a reporter. He became a partner of Smith in 1810, and in that year the name of Washington Advertiser was dropped. Shortly after, Smith retired from the business and connected himself with the United States Bank, and was president of a branch of that institution in the National Capitol for many years. He died in Washington, in 1845. In October, 1812, William Winston Seaton became a partner with Gales. For many years these two men were the only Congressional reporters, and in the columns of the Intelligencer preserved the debates of Congress.—Hudson, 232-33.

Florida.

1784 (cir.)—Printing introduced.

Probably the first book:

The Case of the Inhabitants of East Florida. With an Appendix, containing Papers, by which all the facts stated in the Case, are supported.

St. Augustine, John Wells, 1784.

8º Pp. — Brinley, 4346.

John Wells, the eldest son of Robert Wells, was born in Charleston, and served an apprenticeship at Donaldson's printing house in Edinburgh. He succeeded his father as a printer and bookseller in Charleston, in 1775. Although his father was a zealous royalist, his son took a decided part in favor of the country. He printed and fought in its defence, until the city fell into the hands of the British in 1780. Wells belonged to a military company in Charleston, which marched to assist in the siege of Savannah, by the allied American and French armies, in 1779, and during this unsuccessful campaign, he acquired the reputation of a brave and vigilant soldier. When Charleston fell into the possession of the British, he, with many others, to save his property, signed an address to the British commarder, and he printed a Royal Gazette, which he continued until December, 1782. For these offences he was proscribed by the state government, at the close of the war. Apprehending that he could not safely remain in Charleston when the British surrendered the place to the American government, he left the city, and went with his press to Nassau, New Providence, and published The Royal Bahama Gazette. Wells was not contented to remain on the island; but had a strong desire to return to the continent, and had attempted several schemes to effect that purpose, which proved unsuccessful. He was still endeavoring to arrange his business in such a manner as to permit him to revisit his native country, which he had left with great reluctance, when he was summoned to the world of spirits. He married at Nassau, and was highly esteemed for his many amiable qualities.—Thomas, I., 351; II., 194.

From the imprint of the book given above, it appears that Wells set up his press at St. Augustine for a time, after leaving Charleston. It is not probable that any other printing press was set up in the State until after its accession to the United States, in 1819. The oldest newspaper now in the State was established in 1762—Printing introduced at Savannah.

A printing house was opened early in 1762, by James Johnston, who was born in Scotland, and there served a regular apprenticeship. After his establishment in Savannah, he printed for the government. The government of the colony gave Johnston a handsome pecuniary consideration for settling in that place. He printed an edition of the laws; and, in 1763, began the publication of a newspaper. This newspaper, and printing for the colony, was the chief employment of his press. He did some business as a bookseller; was a very honest, reputable man, acquainted with the art he professed to practice; and in his general conduct was a good and useful member of society. He died in October, 1808, aged seventy years, leaving a widow and six children.—Thomas, I., 352.

One of the earliest books printed in the State was:

The Nature of that Faith without which it is impossible to please God. A Sermon . . Also, An Appendix . . against some Animadversions of the Rev. Joseph Bellamy, D. D. By J. J. Zubly, Minister of an English and German Congregation at Savannah.

Savannah, James Johnston, 1772.

- 1763, April 17—The Georgia Gazette, at Savannah. Imprint: "Savannah: Printed by Fames Fohnston, at the Printing-Office in Broughton-Street, where Advertisements, Letters of Intelligence, and Subscriptions for this Paper are taken in.—Hand-Bills, Advertisements, &c., printed on the shortest notice."

It was printed in a new long primer type, on a foolscap sheet, folio, two columns to a page, on Wednesdays. After a few years it was enlarged and printed on a sheet of crown size. The publication of this Gazette was for some time suspended, like that of several others on the continent, when the British American Stamp Act was to take place in 1765; but it was, at the end of seven months, revived, reappearing in May, 1766; and, in September of that year, a cut of the king's arms was introduced into the title. It was again suspended for some time during the war. The Gazette was published twenty-seven years by Johnston, and continued by his successors. It was the first and only newspaper published in the colony, before the Revolution.—Thomas, 11., 174.

The latest issue known is No. 644, February 7, 1776. The paper was not published between 1776 and 1783.

1783, February 6 (est.)—The Georgia Gazette, at Savannah. A revival of the original Georgia Gazette, after the Revolution, with a new series of numbering.

No. 435, Thursday, May 26, 1791, has the imprint: "Savannah, Printed by James and Nicholas Johnston, Broughton-Street." They carried on the publication through 1796, and probably longer; but No. 805, Thursday, March 28, 1799, is printed by N. Johnston & Co., who continued the paper as late as No. 956, February 18, 1802, at "Four Dollars per annum." In 1800 they added the cut of an eagle to their heading. The publication was suspended in 1802.

1786, October 2 (est.)—Georgia. The Augusta Chronicle, and Gazette of the State, at Augusta.

The issue for Saturday, October 9, 1790, Vol. IV., No. CCIX, has the motto and imprint: "'Freedom of the Press and Trial by Jury shall remain inviolate.—Constitution of Georgia.' Augusta: Printed by John E. Smith, Printer to the State: Essays, Articles of Intelligence, Advertisements &c. will be gratefully received and every Kind of Printing performed. (Price Three Dollars per annum.)" The number for Saturday, June 9, 1798 (Vol. XII., No. 609), has the same motto and imprint as above. Smith printed at Augusta, in 1789, the constitution of Georgia, adopted May 6, 1789, a pamphlet of twenty-four pages. Early in the present century the Chronicle absorbed the Southern Centinel and Universal Gazette (see below, 1793, May 30), and the paper was known as the Chronicle and Sentinel, until February, 1877, when it absorbed the Georgia Constitutionalist, the name being then changed to Augusta Chronicle and Constitutionalist. In May, 1885, the latter part of the title was dropped. The Augusta Chronicle is still published, an eight-page quarto, with all the characteristics of modern metropolitan journalism; it is published daily (morning) and weekly. It claims to have been established in 1785, and in May, 1885, issued a centennial edition, giving a history of the paper for one hundred years, from which some of these particulars have been gleaned. If it was published regularly from the first, the number (209) of the copy dated October 9, 1790, which is the earliest copy known, would indicate that it had then been in existence just four years and one week. In any event it is one of the oldest newspapers in the country, having preserved its identity for nearly one hundred and ten years.

1793, May 30 (est.)—Southern Centinel and Universal Gazette, at Augusta.

Vol. I., Number XXVII, Thursday, November 28, 1793, announces that it was "Printed by Alexander M'Millan, Printer to the State, near the Market, Broad Street." "Price 4 Dol. per Ann." No. LXXXVII, Vol. II., February 5, 1795, shows a change in the title, to Southern Centinel and Gazette of the State, with the same imprint. Number 178, Vol. IV., Thursday, November 3, 1796, has the same title and imprint. Still published so late as November 7, 1799 (Vol. VI., Number 338). In 1798 M'Millan appears to have had his printing office at Louisville, Jefferson county, the capital of the State from 1795 to 1804, where he printed in that year "The Constitution of the State of Georgia, as revised, amended and compiled, by the Convention of the State, at Louisville, 30th of May, 1798," twenty-four pages, quarto.

1793, December 4 (est.)—The Georgia Fournal: and Independent Federal Register, at Savannah. "Printed by James Carey, on the Bay, near the Coffee-House. Pub. twice a week. 6 Dollars per Ann." Motto—"Where Liberty Dwells, There Is My Country."—Franklin.

No. 7, Vol. I., is dated Wednesday, December 25, 1793; No. 8 is dated Dec. 28, 1793.

1796, March 4 (est.)—Columbian Museum & Savannah Advertiser. "Reason and Truth impartial guide the Way. Savannah: Published on Tuesday and Friday, by Powers & Seymour, corner of St. Julian Street, opposite the Church: where Advertisements, and Pieces of Intelligence are gratefully received, and all orders executed with accuracy and punctuality."

The Number for Tuesday, March 15, 1796, Vol. I., No. 4, announces: "This paper will be published regularly twice a week on Tuesday and Friday. Subscribers in town will have their Papers delivered at the moderate price of Six Dollars per annum for two papers. It is expected that Three Dollars will be paid on the delivery of the First Number, and the residue at the expiration of the year." No. 79, Vol. I., Tuesday, December 6, 1796, states that the publication office is "in Market-Square, opposite Mr. Hill's Tavern, where Advertisements, and Pieces of Intelligence are gratefully received, and all orders executed with accuracy and punctuality." In May, 1797, the office was "on the Bay." In the ensuing Octoher the publisher was Gurdon I. Seymour, who in the following December had Philip D. Woolhopter as a partner. They continued in partnership, as Seymour and Woolhopter, so late as Tuesday, September 29, 1801, Vol. VI., Whole No. 380, the publication office being still "on the Bay." Still published November 25, 1813 (Vol. XVII., No. 78). Mr. Woolhopter died at Savannah in February, 1818, having been, said the papers of the day, "for twenty-one years one of the editors of the Savannah Museum."

1798—The Savannah Republican, at Savannah, by Lyon & Morse.

This title is from North. It is probably an error for the Georgia Republican and State Intelligencer, of which Vol. I., No. 28, is dated January 1, 1803, indicating a commencement in the summer of 1802, instead of in 1798. This paper was published by Lyon and Morse. The issue for March 6, 1807 (Vol. V., No. 19, Whole No. 460), has the name of John F. Everitt as publisher. It was continued, with some intermissions, under the name Savannah Republican, until about 1877 or 1878.

- in February, 1877, with The Augusta Chronicle.
- 1800—The Washington Gazette, at Washington, by Alexander M'Millan. In 1801 changed to The Monitor, and in 1820 to The Washington News. Still published.

1828, February 21, Thursday—Cherokee Phænix, at New Echota. A four page super royal weekly newspaper, partly in Cherokee and partly in English; Elias Boudinot, editor; Isaac N. Harris, printer. In the title was one line of Cherokee characters, and a cut of an eagle. In No. 48, Vol. I., February 11, 1829, the eagle was removed, and the words And Indian Advocate were added to the title. Though claiming to be a weekly, it was issued irregularly, sometimes two weeks, and in one case nearly a month, intervening between issues. Discontinued May 31, 1824, Vol. V., No. 52.1

This was one of the most remarkable journalistic productions ever known. It was undoubtedly the first newspaper ever published by an aboriginal tribe in their own language, and in characters invented by one of themselves.

Sequoyah, called George Guess, by the English, was born in the Cherokee Nation in the State of Georgia, in 1770, the son of a Dutch pedlar named George Geist, and a Cherokee woman. Learning that the English were able to communicate with each other by means of written and printed characters, he conceived the idea that similar means of communication might be adopted by his own people. Although he is said to have had an English spelling book in his house, it is believed that he never learned to read, even the English alphabet. But he pondered over his idea from 1809 until 1821. He collected all the syllables in his own language, which after much study and trial he could recall to his memory, and found the number to be eighty-two or eighty-six. In order to express these he took the letters of our alphabet for some of them, with various modifications, and some letters of his own invention for the rest. With these symbols he set about writing letters, and very soon a correspondence was actually maintained between the Cherokees in Wills Valley and their countrymen beyond the Mississippi, five hundred miles apart. Missionaries who have lived among ¹ Although not pertaining to the Eighteenth Century Newspaper Press, this paper was so remarkable in its history and character that it seems proper to introduce an account of it here, especially as chronologically it forms an introduction to the history of the newspaper press of Indian Territory. the Cherokees say that a few hours of instruction are sufficient for a Cherokee to learn to read his own language intelligently. He will not, indeed, learn to read fluently so readily, but when he has learned the art of reading, fluency will be acquired by practice. The Cherokee nation is very proud of this alphabet, and has voted a subsidy to the newspaper printers within the nation to encourage them to print newspapers and books in their own characters. Sequoyah has been appropriately styled the American Cadmus. He died near San Bernardo, Cal., about the year 1842.

Having become convinced of the practical importance of Sequoyah's invention, the Cherokee Council resolved in November, 1825, to procure two sets of type, one fashioned in the new characters and the other in English, and also to procure a printing-press, and the general furniture necessary for a printing office. By November 2, 1826, the work had so far assumed shape that the Council resolved to erect "a printing office 24x20 feet, one story high, shingle roof, with one fire-place, one door in the end of the house, one floor, and a window in each side of the house two lights deep and ten feet long, to be chincked and lined in the inside with narrow plank; with the necessary water benches and type desks requisite for a printing office."

The press and type for the paper were brought from Augusta, Georgia, in wagons, a distance of over two hundred miles. The paper was brought from Knoxville in a two-horse wagon, a week being required for the journey. Stands had to be made, a bank, and cases for the Cherokee type. The latter was something entirely new, as no pattern for a case or cases to accommodate an alphabet containing 86 characters could be found, and cases had to be made for the purpose, one case being about three by three and one half feet. This brought all the vowels, six in number, in the lower or nearest boxes, but the letters in the latter part of the alphabet were in the upper boxes and hard to reach. It took over 100 boxes for figures, points, etc., to each case. There were no capitals. The Cherokee font was cast on a small pica body, and as several of the Cherokee characters were taken from the English caps, the small caps of pica were used. The press, type, etc., arrived about the middle of January. The press, a small royal size, was of cast iron, with spiral springs to hold up the platen, at that time a new invention. Says the first printer: "We had no imposing stone, and had to make up each page of the paper on a sled (?) galley, put it on the press, and take proofs on slips of paper, and then correct it on the press, a very fatiguing way of correcting foul proof, which was the case with my first efforts at setting Cherokee type. It was a very foul proof, and a very troublesome and fatiguing job to correct it, as I did not know or understand a word of it. But after a few weeks I became expert in setting up Cherokee matter, and as every letter or type had a thick body, it mounted up pretty fast. Translation from English into Cherokee was a very slow business; therefore we seldom had more than three columns each week in Cherokee. The first number of the Cherokee Phanix was issued and sent out through the mails to subscribers and to the leading papers in the country, as it contained matter in the Cherokee alphabet, printed with characters invented by an Indian who could not speak English, or any other language but his own native Cherokee tongue; besides, the invention was of a very recent date."

The Phanix was not only the first aboriginal newspaper on this continent, but it was printed in the most perfect orthography. It was the average size of the newspapers of the day, and one-half of it was printed in the Sequovah alphabet. By resolution of the Council, the printers' apprentices were boarded and clothed at the expense of the Council, and the editor was forbidden to publish scurrilous communications, or anything of a religious nature that would savor of sectarianism. The first prospectus read as follows: "The great object of the Phanix will be to benefit the Cherokees, and the following subjects will occupy the columns: First, the laws and public documents of the nation; second, accounts of the manners and customs of the Cherokees, and their progress in education, religion, and arts of civilized life, with such notices of other Indians as our limited means of information will allow; third, the principal interesting events of the day; fourth, miscellaneous articles calculated to promote literature, civilization, and religion among the Cherokees." "No publication was ever received with such profound wonder by the world as this, Copies were ordered from all parts of the country, and the London Times exchanged with it on equal terms. The publication of the Phænix seemed to be the key which was to unlock the intellectual faculties of the Cherokees." In November, nine months after the first copy of the Phanix was published, a missionary wrote from among them, that in his opinion at least three-fourths of the nation could read and write in their new alphabet. Publications from the press at New Echota were eagerly sought. "Their enthusiasm is kindled," wrote Mr. Worcester, a devoted missionary among them; "great numbers have learned to read and write, and are circulating hymns and portions of the Scriptures; they are eagerly anticipating the time when they can read the white men's Bible in their own language." Within five years of the adoption of Sequoyah's alphabet, the press at New Echota had turned off 733,800 pages of good reading, which was eagerly read and re-read by the Cherokees. Two years after the number had increased to 1,513,800 pages, and before Sequoyah's death, more than 4,000,000 pages of good literature had been printed in Cherokee, and that not including the circulation of the Phanix.

Elias Boudinot, known among the Cherokees as Ka-la-ki-na (Buck, the male of the Deer), an Indian whose father and mother could not speak English, was the editor of the paper. He was a very promising Indian lad, whose native name was Weite, but on being sent to the Mission school at Cornwall, Conn., he was given the name of Elias Boudinot, after the distinguished New Jersey statesman and philanthropist. At Cornwall he married Hattie Gold, who accompanied him to Georgia, where he aided the missionaries in their work of translating portions of the Scriptures and hymns. During the contest between the Cherokees and the authorities of Georgia and of the United States, Boudinot and others stood firmly by their people, but ultimately and somewhat suddenly signed the treaty of 1835, providing for the surrender of their lands and the removal of their people to the far west. They were suspected of treachery, bribery and corruption, and on June 22, 1839, were cruelly assassinated, Boudinot being decoyed from the house he was erecting a short distance from his residence, and fatally slashed with knives and hatchets.

A contemporary account of the assassination, by a competent authority, 1 says it grew out of "an angry discussion, in June, 1839, in a general council, respecting the future organization of the Cherokee government, between the original settlers (including those who had yielded to the treaty last held between them and the United States) and the majority, which embraced the later immigrants, Boudinot being a distinguished member of the smaller party."

Idaho.

1863, September 29—Boisé News, at Boisé, by T. J. & J. S. Butler; the first newspaper.

T. J. Butler, with the assistance of Henry H. Knapp of The Statesman office, at Walla Walla, Oregon, bought the old press on which the Oregonian was first printed, and which was taken to Walla Walla in 1861. Printing paper cost enormously, and a pine log covered with zinc was used as a composing stone, with other contrivances to supply lacking material. But men were willing to pay $2.50 for one number of a newspaper. The News was independent in politics during a most exciting campaign. The Butlers had recently published The Red Bluff Beacon, at Red Bluff, Cal.—History of Washington, Idaho and Montana, by Hubert Howe Bancroft, San Francisco, 1890, 420.

The first book probably was the following:

Laws | of the | Territory of Idaho, | First Session; | convened the 7th day of December, 1863, and adjourned | on the 4th day of February, 1864, at | Lewiston. | Also, containing the | Territorial Organic Act, | Declaration of Independence, the Pre-emption, and | Naturalization Laws, etc., etc. |

180), Fall—The Illinois Herald, at Kaskaskia, by Matthew Duncan, the public printer.

Matthew Duncan was a son of Major Joseph Duncan, who was of Scottish ancestry, but a native of Virginia, and in 1790 had removed from Virginia to Kentucky. One of his sons, Joseph, a brother of Matthew, was afterwards Governor of Illinois. Matthew Duncan came to Illinois from Kentucky, where he had published a newspaper for some years. The Herald passed out of his hands, probably in 1816 or 1817, and with the change in ownership came a change in name, to the Illinois Intelligencer. In 1816 it was the only newspaper and printing office in the Territory. Daniel Pope was then the editor and joint owner with Robert Blackwell. Pope was a native of Kentucky, and emigrated to Illinois in 1815. In 1819 Pope had been succeeded by Elijah C. Berry, and the firm was Blackwell & Berry, who were then the State printers. In 1820 the office was removed to Vandalia, which had become the State capital, where it was carried on later by Messrs. Brown & Berry. Miss Josephine P. Cleveland, Librarian of the Illinois State Historical Library, at Springfield, furnishes the following data of later Illinois newspapers:

- 1818 Illinois Emigrant, at Shawneetown, by Henry Eddy and Singleton II. Kimmell; changed in 1824 to Illinois Gazette.
- 1819 Edwardsville Spectator, at Edwardsville, by Hooper Warren.
- 1822 The Star of the West, at Edwardsville, changed in 1823 to Illinois Republican.
- 1823-Republican Advocate, at Kaskaskia, by R. K. Flemming.
- 1826-Illinois Journal, at Galena, by James Jones.
- 1826 Sangamo Spectator, at Springfield, by Hooper Warren.
- 1828- Illinois Corrector, at Edwardsville.
- 1829—Galena Advertiser, at Galena, by Newell, Philleo & Co.
- 1830-Alton Spectator, at Alton, by Edward Breath.
- 1831 Alton Telegraph, at Alton, by Parks & Treadway, who were succeeded by John Bailheche.
- 1831-Sangamo Journal, at Springfield, by Simeon Francis and ---; now the Illinois State Journal.
- 1833-The Chicago Democrat, at Chicago, by John Calhoun.

The Illinois State Historical Library has no files of these early newspapers of the State.

The act of Congress erecting the Territory of Illinois out of Indiana Territory was approved February 3, 1809, to take effect March 1, 1809; the seat of government was established at Kaskaskia, on the Mississippi, an old mission station of the Jesuits. The Legislature first met on November 25, 1812. The laws enacted at that and the succeeding sessions were not gathered together until 1815. On July 4, 1815, Matthew Duncan, printer to the State, issued from his office in Kaskaskia, the Revision of Nathaniel Pope. It was in two volumes. The first had 304 pages and an index; the second was paged from 308 to 710, and also contained a copious and careful index.

The first book printed in Illinois after its admission to the Union, was doubtless the following:

Laws | passed by | The First General Assembly, | of the | State of Illinois, | at their second session, | held at Kaskaskia, 1819. | Published by Authority. |

Kaskaskia: | Printed by Blackwell & Berry | printers to the State. | 1819. | 80 Pp. 388, 58, 2, 22.

The first session of the Legislature began October 5, 1818, but no laws were passed at that session, as the formal resolution for the admission of Illinois into the Union was not passed by Congress until December 3, 1818.

HISTORY AND CHRONOLOGY OF NEWSPAPERS.

The first newspaper:

1844, August—The Cherokee Messenger, at the Cherokee Baptist Mission press; edited by the Rev. Evan Jones, and published by H. Upham.

A sixteen-page paper, two columns to the page, issued irregularly, mainly devoted to religious and temperance topics, in which cause it did an important work for several years in the Cherokee country. Another series was begun in 1858.

The second newspaper was published by the Cherokee Nation, to take the place of the Phænix, long deceased. The National Council, on October 25, 1843, passed "An Act to establish a printing press and to regulate the National newspaper."

1844, September 26—Cherokee Advocate, at Tahlequah, Cherokee Nation. "Published every Saturday morning, both in the English and Cherokee languages, by William P. Ross, editor." The law fixed the name of the paper, and provided that the subscription price should be "three dollars per annum, except to those persons who read only the Cherokee language, and they shall pay two dollars."

It was a four-page paper, six columns to the page. Probably discontinued September 28, 1853. A second series was started about May, 1870, and a third series March 1, 1876, "Published by the Cherokee Nation, W. P. Boudinot, Editor, William E. Ewbanks, Translator." An editorial in the first issue explained its purpose: "The object of the Council in providing for the publication of the Advocate is the physical, moral and intellectual improvement of the Cherokee people. It will be devoted to these ends, and to the defense of those rights recognized as belonging to them in treaties legally made at different times by the United States, and of such measures as seem best calculated to secure their peace and happiness, promote their prosperity, and elevate their character as a distinct community." Since February, 1881, the editor is required to have one whole page of the paper printed in Cherokee, and for this purpose is authorized to employ two Cherokee boys as apprentices for the term of two years, who read and write Cherokee and English, and to pay them during that time a sum equal only to the cost of their board and clothes, which sum is paid quarterly by the Cherokee Nation. The editor is chosen by joint vote of both branches of the National Council, and is paid $600 yearly. His powers and duties are carefully prescribed by law, and he is under the constant supervision of the Chiefs of the Nation.

1872—The Vindicator, at New Boggy, Choctaw nation, by Dr. J. H. Moore.

It was a weekly paper, four pages, five columns to the page, folio, devoted to the interests of the Choctaws and Chickasaws. Afterwards it was united with the Oklahoma Star, which had been established by G. McPherson, at McAlester, about 1877, the united paper being called The Star-Vindicator. This was a folio, four pages, seven columns to the page, published by G. McPherson & Co; G. McPherson, editor. One or two columns were published in Choctaw in each number, edited by E. W. Folsom.

1873, January—Our Monthly, at Tullahassee, Creek Nation.

A four page, quarto paper, issued irregularly, but usually at intervals of one month; the Rev. W. S. Robertson and Miss A. A. Robertson, editors; Mrs. A. E. W. Robertson, manager and chief contributor in the Muskhogean languages. Vol. I., beginning in 1870, was in manuscript. The first printed issue consisted of two pages only. It was continued for about four years. It was printed on a hand press by Mr. Robertson's young son, aided by one or two Indian school boys, and it gave the young Creeks a very strong stimulus towards reading their own language.

1876, May—Indian Fournal, at Muskogee, by M. P. Roberts; Col. William P. Ross and M. P. Roberts, editors.

A weekly newspaper, at first a folio, four pages, six columns to the page, but in December, 1877, changed to quarto form, eight pages, six columns to the page. It has been the official organ of the Creek nation. Still published in 1887.

It seems an anachronism to read the imprint: "The Indian Journal Steam Job Office."

Indiana.1

1804, July 4—Indiana Gazette, at Vincennes, by Elihu Stout.

In 1804 Elihu Stout came here from Lexington, Kentucky, and commenced the publication of The Western Sun newspaper,2 This was the first newspaper published in the Indiana Territory, and its publication has been continued with only slight interruptions to the present time. Its establishment was attended with great difficulties. The material for the paper was transported from Louisville, Kentucky, down the Ohio river, and up the Wabash in what were then called "piroques." For many years after, the supplies for the paper were brought here on pack-horses, over the old buffalo trail. The first issue of the paper appeared on the fourth day of July, 1804. Mr. Stout was elected Territorial printer, and was continued in that position as long as the Capital remained there, and for some years he published all the acts of the Territorial Legislature, and the official documents of the Territorial Government, and in book form, two compilations of the Territorial Laws. The issues of the paper from 1804 to 1806 were destroyed by fire in the latter year. The files of the paper which have been preserved date from 1806 to 1845, when Mr. Stout sold the establishment on being appointed Post Master here. Mr. Stout was my grandfather, and from him I have in my possession the files of the paper. — Venable (quoting Cauthorn), 259.

He says the office was burned out early in ₇₈₀₆, but Stout immediately procured new materials and resumed the paper under a new name. Mr. Clarke's statement is confirmed by the little work mentioned on page 13, ante, "The Spirit of the Public Journals; or, Beauties of the American Newspapers, For 1805," which quotes from the Indiana Gazette.

1834—Printing introduced.

1836, May 11—The Dubuque Visitor, at Dubuque Lead Mines, Wisconsin Territory, by John King. Motto—Truth our Guide—The Public Good Our Aim.

The editor was John King, who came from Ohio to Dubuque in 1834, bringing with him a printing press. This newspaper was the first paper printed west of the Mississippi River, north of the boundary line of Missouri. It was printed by William C. Jones on a Smith press, manufactured in Cincinnati, by Charles Mallett. The following is a copy of the contract between King and Jones:

"Articles of Agreement, made this 31st day of March, A. D. 1836, between John King of Dubuque, Michigan Territory, and Wm. C. Jones, of Chillicothe, Ohio, witnesseth: that the said John King hereby binds himself to pay to the said Wm. C. Jones the sum of three hundred and fifty dollars, fifty dollars of which to be in hand paid, and the balance in sums as they become due on demand; and further, to provide the said Wm. C. Jones with suitable boarding and lodging during one year, from and after the 20th day of April proximo—in consideration that the said Wm. C. Jones do go to the town of Dubuque, in Michigan Territory, with the said John King, and there for the term of one year as aforesaid, do faithfully perform the duties of foreman in the printing office of the said John King, and likewise such other duties in superintending the publication of the newspaper as may be required.

John King. Wm. Cary Jones."

Mr. Jones subsequently became a ready writer and successful editor and publisher in New Orleans, and died prior to 1880, in San Francisco. Mr. King was the presiding Judge of one of the first two courts ever established within the limits of the present State of Iowa. This pioneer printing press, after remaining at Dubuque for about six years, was sold and taken to Lancaster in Wisconsin. After having been used there a while, it was taken to St. Paul, Minn., and in 1858 it was again removed to Sioux City Falls, Dacotah, so that on this press was printed the first paper in Iowa, the first paper in Western Wisconsin-The Grant County Herald, by Gen. H. A. Wiltse; the first paper in Minnesota-The St. Paul Pioneer, by J. M. Goodhue; and the first in Dacotah—The Dacotah Democrat, by Samuel Albrecht. In March, 1862, after the press had been used at Sioux City Falls about four years, a band of Sioux Indians made a raid upon the place, set fire to the town and killed a large portion of the inhabitants. The press was irreparably injured in the fire. The first type setter, who also acted as pressman in working off the first paper, was Andrew Keesecker. born at Shepherdstown, Virginia, January 29, 1810; died at Dubuque, 1870. - Springer, 12-17.

1838, August 4—Iowa Sun and Davenport and Rock /sland News, "published simultaneously at Davenport [Iowa] and Stephenson [now Rock Island, Illinois], by Andrew Logan."

About this time, Mr. A. Logan made his appearance with materials for a printing office. There was no little strife between Rockingham and Davenport, as to which would obtain him. Extremely liberal offers were made him on both sides—such as now would gladden the heart of a printer with a joy unknown to modern supporters of these type-sticking pilgrims. Both places recognized the infinite benefit which such a paper would render them in building up the towns-of the emigration it would influence, and the reputation which it would give the place abroad. Another election was impending for County Seat, and the aid of a paper would be to either side invaluable. Whether Mr. Logan was influenced mainly by the liberal offers made him, or by the superior locality of Davenport-certain it is, however, that one fourth day of August, 1838, there appeared the first number of the "Iowa Sun and Davenport and Rock Island News;" whichas we learn from its salutatory, was designed "to cast its rays over the political and moral landscape, regardless of those petty interests and local considerations which might contract its beams." And in order to more readily accomplish this, we are further told that, "we have selected the center (Davenport) of the system around which all our territorial interests harmoniously revolve."-Wilkie, 59. The motto of the paper was: "And men went forth to till the ground." It should be noted that in the Annals of Iowa (Vol. I., 1863) the date of publication of this first Davenport newspaper is given as September 17, 1838.

Logan was from Pennsylvania. His press was antiquated, and the type had done good service in other places. The paper was probably discontinued after three or four years.

The Winter session was held at Burlington, November 6, 1837, to January 20, 1838; the Special Session, June 11-25, 1838. It was directed that the Pamphlet Laws should be printed by Jas. G. Edwards, p. 361; 1465 copies were ordered distributed to counties, p. 329. James Clarke & Co. were required to print the laws of the annual session in pamphlet form, to be ready by May 15, 1838, p. 326. The volume also mentions the following newspapers, forming a contribution to the early history of the press in that region: Wisconsin Territory Gazette, at Burlington; Wisconsin Democrat, at Green Bay; Iowa News, at Dubuque, John B. Russell, editor; Milwaukee Advertiser, at Milwaukee; Milwaukee Sentinel, at Milwaukee; Miner's Free Press, at Mineral Point, Wm. S. Hamilton, editor; Racine Advocate, at Racine; Fort Madison Patriot, at Fort Madison, James G. Edwards, editor; Racine Argus (pp. 323, 325, 357-8).

In Iowa the first book was no doubt the volume of Laws of Wisconsin Territory, of which I enclose my old catalogue card. There is another volume of Laws with a Burlington, 1838, imprint, but it was printed in Pennsylvania, as I show by my article in Wisconsin Historical Society Coll., Vol. 12, p. 383. James Clarke had moved his press from Belmont (Wis.)—where he had a newspaper in 1836, and had printed the Laws of Wisconsin Territory, 1st Session, 1836—to Burlington (now Iowa)—when the 2nd Session was to be held in 1837, and had continued the publication of the "Wisconsin Territory Gazette" there, but had printed no book there as far as known, and when he had a book to print he went east to do it; his foreman gives as one reason—"the impossibility of procuring paper in season for the execution of the work at this place" [Burlington]—see House Journal, June, 1838, p. 25. I have some doubt whether the Burlington imprint on the Edwards book is not a fictitious one, as on the Clarke book, for Edwards's press was at Fort Madison (now in Iowa), where he was publishing the "Patriot," and the committee report of June 22, 1838, as to his contract to print this book, speaks of him as of Fort Madison (ib., p. 54), and the contract calls for delivery of the books to be made at Fort Madison (ib., p. 95). Of course this affects only the town of publication, as both Burlington and Fort Madison are now in Iowa. - Cole (MS., January 26, 1894).

1834—Printing introduced.

Bibliography of the Algonquian Languages, by James Constantine Pilling, Washington, Government Printing Office, 1891. This gives the titles, collations and history of the earliest printing, by the missionaries. 80 Pp. 614.

Manuscript material gathered by Richard Baxter Taylor (born in Buckland, March 22, 1822; died at Wyandotte, March 26, 1877), for the Annual Address before the Kansas Editorial Association, in 1870, and published in the Transactions of the Kansas State Historical Society, Vol. I.–II., Topeka, Kansas, 1881, 164–182. This is the best account of the newspapers of 1854–56.

Geary and Kansas. Governor Geary's Administration in Kansas, with a complete history of the Territory until July, 1857, etc., by John H. Gihon, M. D., Private Secretary to Governor Geary. Philadelphia, 1857. 12° Pp. 348.

History of Kansas, etc., by J. N. Holloway, Lafayette, Indiana, 1868. 80 Pp. 584.

History of Baptist Indian Missions; embracing remarks on the former and present condition of the Aboriginal Tribes; their settlement within the Indian Territory, and their future prospects. By Isaac McCoy. [Quotation, 4 lines.] Washington, New York and Utica, 1840. 80 Pp. (10), 3-611. This remarkably interesting work, besides much valuable information regarding the Indians, the hardships of the missionaries, and the organization of the Indian Territory, describes the earliest printing, and gives the best account of Mr. Meeker's peculiar system of writing.

Mr. Jotham Meeker joined the Baptist Missionaries at Cary Station, Michigan Territory, in November, 1825, when about 21 years of age. He was from Cincinnati, Ohio, and a printer by trade. For awhile he assisted in teaching the Indian children. In August, 1827, having been licensed to preach, he was placed in charge of the Mission among the Ottowas, at Thomas Station, on Grand River. In September, 1830, he was married, and in the following year he returned to Cincinnati with the intention of going into the printing business, but was persuaded to resume his Indian work. In September or October, 1833, he arrived at the Shawnee Mission station, Kansas, with his wife. By direction of the Board he had brought with him a printing press and type, which he had bought in Cincinnati. On March 9, 1834, with the assistance of William Ash, he commenced printing, first printing fifty copies of the alphabet for several tribes, and on March 21, 1834, he completed the first book printed in the Territory,—a primer, 24 pages in the Indian language (title given above).

By May 19, an elementary book in Shawnee, prepared by the Rev. Johnston Lykens, a Baptist Missionary, was also printed. Other works in the Delaware, Shawnee, Putawatomie, Otoe, Choctaw, Muscogee or Creek, Wea and Kansas languages were printed by Mr. Meeker during the next three years, besides a number of pamphlets in English. Mr. Meeker devised a system of characters designating certain positions of the organs of speech, instead of letters or syllables. All the books printed in the Shawnee language by him were printed in a modification of this system, or a combination of it with the syllabic system of spelling.—MeCoy, 471-7; Pilling, 351-6; Taylor, 166.

The handsome appearance of this large volume, and the date of the editor's prefix, tend to throw doubt on the genuineness of the imprint, and make it probable that the book was actually printed at St. Louis.

HISTORY AND CHRONOLOGY OF NEWSPAPERS.

1835, March I—Shau wau-nowe Kesauthwau ("Shawanoe Sun"), at the Shawanoe Baptist Mission, edited by the Rev. Johnston Lykins, and printed on the Mission press in the Shawanoe language, by Jotham Meeker, until 1837, and by J. G. Pratt from 1837 to 1839, when it was discontinued on account of the illness of the printer and his family.

This was the first newspaper ever published exclusively in an Indian language. It was small—only a quarto sheet, the characters being the new system devised by Mr. Meeker. It was published semi-monthly at first, afterwards monthly.—McCoy, 486, 567; Pilling, 322, 355, 459.

In the Spring of 1837, Mr. Meeker removed his establishment to the Ottowa Mission in Franklin County, where he continued his work until January 12, 1854, when he died.—Taylor, as cited, 166, 275.

The press was an old fashioned jews-harp press. It was used for the printing of the Freeman's Champion, first issued June 25, 1857, at Prairie City, Kansas, in a tent erected by the ladies for that purpose. After the publication of eleven numbers, the Champion suspended. In 1869, the press was in use at Cottonwood Falls, in the Pioneer office.—Taylor, 176.

Upon the settlement of Kansas by the whites, there was a lively journalistic competition, and the following papers were started, and took an active part in the exciting times that followed:

1854, September 15—Kansas Weekly Herald, at Leavenworth, by Osburn & Adams.

This paper was issued before a single building was completed at Leavenworth, the printing being done under an old elm tree near the corner of Cherokee street and the levee, under the management of Osburn and Adams. William II. Adams and William H. Osburn projected the Herald, but Osburn had no money, and Lucian J. Eastin furnished the necessary capital and took his place, and the firm was Eastin & Adams, Eastin being the editor. Henry Smith was one of the first journeymen. H. Rives Pollard, from Virginia, was editor in 1855. It was the first paper published in the Territory after the settlement by the whites. In 1859 it became a daily, and in 1861 it ceased publication upon the death of its then proprietor. A file of the paper for 1854–59 is in the possession of the Kansas State Historical Society.—Taylor, 167; Holloway, 583.

"We find in the very first issue of the first Kansas newspaper [that is, by the whites], a newspaper whose type was set from cases put up under a tree, for want of a roof in the projected town in which the paper was established, words of cheer and encouragement of the most stirring character; a little extravagant may be, but words which seem to have been as a clarion note: as the bugle blast which has sounded all along the line ever since, inspiriting the Kansas hosts to this very day. The first editor introduces the Kansas settler to his work, by telling him that he had enlisted in, and had become one of that band of gallant western pioneers possessed of that unconquerable spirit destined to annihilate time and space; to surmount every obstacle, and to accomplish the most herculean undertakings; before whom everything is made to yield, forest and wilderness alike to disappear, and in whose continual and onward march cities, towns, churches, school houses, academies and colleges are to spring up as if by magic, and at a rate to actually astonish the most progressive. In this march railroads are to be substituted for the winding foot path of the burdened pack horse, and the iron steam steed is to be seen traversing the same track, richly laden with commerce and with the inexhaustible productions of the country, before time has had a chance to obliterate the moccasined footprints of the aboriginal red proprietors of the soil. Such, said the first Kansas editor, is to be the history of Kansas, such is the spirit which has seized upon her pioneers, and which is destined, in brief time, to raise her to a position among her sister states, which will be truly enviable in the highest degree."1

- 1855, January 5—Kansas Tribune, at Lawrence, by John Speer. In November it was suspended for a few weeks, and removed to Topeka, when W. W. Ross became a partner, and this firm continued the publication until February, 1857, when it was sold out to Ross Brothers.
- 1855, January 6—Herald of Freedom, at Lawrence, by George W. Brown.

The first number was printed at Wakarusa, Penn., October 21, 1854. Immediately after, Brown removed to Lawrence, and with the help of others, had timber cut and a log printing office erected for his paper. On May 21, 1856, the office was destroyed by the Border Ruffians, and the publication was suspended until the following September, when it was resumed. It finally suspended in 1860, being succeeded soon after by the Kansas City Journal.

1855, February 3—Squatter Sovereign, at Atchison, by Dr. John H. Stringfellow and Robert S. Kelly.

It was first published by Kelly, under the name of the Democratic Platform, at Liberty, Missouri, where, despite the name of the place of publication, the paper was ultra pro-slavery. In the Fall of 1854, Kelly removed to Atchison with his press, where he was joined by Dr. Stringfellow in the publication of the Squatter Sovereign. During the exciting times which followed it was the semi-official organ of the Border Ruffians, and bitterly opposed to the Free State men. In the Summer of 1857, it passed into the hands of S. C. Pomeroy, Robert McBratney and F. G. Adams, who changed its name and politics.—Taylor, 164, 172; Geary, 74; Holloway, 583.

- 1855—Kansas Free State, at Lawrence.
- 1855, early Summer—Territorial Register, at Leavenworth, by M. W. Delahaý. Destroyed by a pro-slavery mob, December 22, 1855.
- 1855, October 24—Daily Kansas Freeman, Shawnee County. Published only until November 7. This was

The Lexington Board of Trustees, in July, 1786, voted to give the use of a public lot to John Bradford free, on condition that he establish a printing press in Lexington. He immediately sent to Philadelphia for the material, but it did not arrive until the following summer; having to be transported overland from Philadelphia to Pittsburgh, and thence down the Ohio River to Limestone (now Maysville). In his first issue Bradford excuses the printing of his paper, explaining that a great part of the type fell into pi in the cartage from Limestone to Lexington, and his only assistant had been ill for ten days. Bradford's office was a rude log cabin, one story high, and covered with clapboards. He printed his paper on an old-fashioned hand press which he had bought in Philadelphia second-hand, and which, when pushed to its full capacity, might turn out fifty or seventy-five sheets an hour. When he wrote at night it was by the flickering, sputtering light of a buffalo tallow candle, or a greasy lamp, fed by bear's oil, or perhaps by fire light. There was not another paper published within five hundred miles of Lexington. The paper was taken to the different settlements by the postriders, and when it arrived, the best reader among the inhabitants would mount a stump and read the paper, never stopping until he had read it through, advertisements and all. John Bradford was born in Virginia, in 1749; he served in the Revolutionary war, and removed to Kentucky in 1785, settling in Lexington in 1786. He was a practical printer, as were his father before him and his sons after him. He was the first public printer of Kentucky, 1792-98. In 1802 he turned the Gazette over to his son Daniel, but in a few years resumed control, selling out again in 1809, to Thomas Smith. In 1814 it again passed into the hands of the Bradfords. John Bradford died in 1830. The Gazette ceased in 1848 .- Perrin.

1795, February 17 (est.)—Stewart's Kentucky Herald, at Lexington, by Thomas H. Stewart; title afterwards changed to The Kentucky Herald.

The issue for Tuesday, July 14, 1795 (Vol. I., Numb. 22), the earliest copy known, has the name Steam is in the line above Kintucky Herald, and the imprint: "Lexington: Printed by James H. Stewart; where Advertisements, Essays, Articles of Intelligence, &c. will be thankfully received, and every kind of Printing executed in the neatest manner." Vol. V., No. 231, is dated July 23, 1799. No. 235, Vol. V., Tuesday, August 20, 1799, contains the Constitution of the new State of Kentucky, filling the second and third pages of the paper, and a page and a half of a supplement, the latter having three columns to the page. The imprint, at the bottom of the last column of the fourth page, reads: "Lexington, Printed by James H. Stewart, Main-Street." The Herald was continued ten years, when it was merged in the Kentucky Gazette. In 1802 it passed into the hands of John Bradford. There are only six copies of the paper known; Perrin knew of but two. It had four pages, four columns to the page.

1795, November 7 (est.)—The Kentucky Fournal, at Frankfort, by Benjamin J. Bradford.

The imprint of Vol. I., Numb. V., Saturday, December 5, 1795, is: "Frankfort: Printed by Benjamin J. Bradford, at the Capitol." This is the only copy of the paper known to exist. It is not mentioned by Perrin.

1797, May 31 (est.), Wednesday—Rights of Man or the Kentucky Mercury, at Paris, by Darius Moffett.

The imprint of the issue for Wednesday, August 30, 1797, Vol. I., Number 14, is as follows:

-"Libertas et Natale Solum-

-"Liberty and our Free Born Rights. -

"Paris: (Bourbon County) Printed by Darius Moffett. Where Advertisements, Essays, Articles of Intelligence &c. will be thankfully received, and every kind of Printing executed with neatness, elegance, and dispatch."

The issue for Wednesday, October 11, 1797 (No. 20), omits the translation of the motto. Mr. Perrin has no account of this paper.

1797, August 26 (est.)—The Mirror, at Washington, about four miles from Maysville, by Hunter & Beaumont; four pages, four columns to the page; motto—"Firm, Free, and Temperate." Vol. I., No. 3, is dated September 9, 1797.

SATURDAY, JULY 21st, 1798.

Washington, (K.) Printed and published (weekly) by Hunter & Beaumont.—Subscriptions and Advertisements are received by Mr. John Waller, Millersburg; John Armstrong, Esq., Columbia; Mr. Nat. Patterson, Brackin; and by the different Post-Masters in Lexington, Frankfort, Danville, Harrodsburg, Bairdstown, Bourbon, Louisville, and Cincinnati.

In the issue for Friday, December 14, 1798, Vol. II., No. 66, the name of Mr. Nat. Patterson, Brackin, is omitted, and "Geo. Mountjey, Esq., near Riddle's Mill," is inserted instead.

The paper was discontinued in 1798, when the publishers removed to Frankfort.

1798, April—The Guardian of Freedom, at Frankfort, by John Bradford & Son (Daniel Bradford).

In 1803 it was conducted by James M. Bradford. It was really a branch office in Frankfort of the Kentucky Gazette, opened for the purpose of securing the public printing; but the Bradfords had passed the zenith of their popularity, and were not elected to the office of public printer after 1798. The Guardian of Freedom, however, continued on for about six years, and then died a natural death.—Perrin, 18.

1798, August 9—The Palladium, at Frankfort, by Hunter & Beaumont, on their removal from Washington.

It was a folio in size, four pages, II by I8 inches, four columns to the page, and printed on a good paper in the usual old fashioned type. The motto was from Junius: "Let it be impressed upon your minds, let it be instilled into your children, that the Liberty of the Press is the Palladium of all the Civil, Political, and Religious Rights of Freemen." The Palladium was but a continuation in Frankfort of the Washington Mirror. The paper was still in existence in 1826.

Col. William Hunter, one of the founders of the Mirror, and of the Palladium, was a man of considerable local prominence. He was born in New-Jersey, and when quite young was captured by a French man-of-war, and with his parents taken to France. Being early left an orphan, he learned the printing business, returned to this country in 1793, and at Philadelphia established a French and American newspaper. He emigrated to Kentucky in 1797, and became noted as a publisher of books as well as of newspapers, and was for several years a formidable rival of the Bradfords. He was a popular editor, but not a brilliant writer. He removed to Louisville, and on March 13, 1826, established the Gazette; but the venture proved unsuccessful. He was then given a clerkship in the Treasury Department, which position, or a similar one, he held until his death, in 1854, at the age of 84 years.—Perrin, 24-26.

1798—The Kentucky Telegraph.

Nothing is known of this paper further than a mere mention of it in an act of the Kentucky Legislature, approved December 22, 1798. No copy of the paper is known to exist.

1803, January 25—The Medley, or Monthly Miscellany, at Lexington, by Daniel Bradford.

This is believed to have been the first literary periodical published west of the Alleghanies. Only twelve numbers were issued, the publication ceasing in December, 1803. The subscription price was one dollar per annum, or six pence per number. The twelve numbers aggregate 276 pages, about the size of the old Webster's spelling book. The contents comprised essays, sketches, short stories, poems, and miscellaneous articles, original and selected.

1826, April 4—Public Advertizer, at Louisville, by Shadrach Penn.

The first daily newspaper of Kentucky; started in 1818 as a weekly, after some years continued as a semi-weekly, and then as a daily.

1763, or earlier—Printing introduced.

The headquarters of the French government having been removed from Biloxi to New Orleans in 1722, it would seem highly probable that there must have been a printing press established at the latter place long prior to 1763, but no record of the fact has been found. In that year the King's printer was arrested for having printed a seditious proclamation, no copy of which is known to exist.

Louisiana was ceded by France to Spain by treaty signed November 3, 1762, but which, however, was kept secret for more than a year, so that it

Alexander O'Reilly, born in Ireland about 1735, but who had won such fame in the Spanish army that he had attained to the rank of Lieutenant-General, and afterwards to Inspector-General of the King's Infantry, after considerable experience as Governor of Havana was sent to succeed D'Ulloa in the government of Louisiana. He arrived in the river below New Orleans, July 14, 1769, and reached the town August 17. The leading citizens who had taken an active part in the expulsion of D'Ulloa were promptly arrested, and six of them were imprisoned and six shot. The printer Braud was arrested for having printed the Decree of the Council, and the Memorial, mentioned above. He admitted the printing, but pleaded that he was King's printer, and therefore was obliged to print whatever was handed to him by the King's Commissary, and on this ground he was acquitted.

The next earliest printing of which there is any mention is a broadside proclamation, dated New Orleans, September 11, 1769.

The first book printed in Louisiana of which we have any account is without a title page, and contains the Ordinances of Governor O'Reilly, in a small quarto volume of 32 pages. These Ordinances were promulgated under date of November 25, 1769. The book was probably printed by Braud. Translated the title runs:

"Don Alexander O'Reilly, Commander of Benfayou, of the Order of Alcantara, Lieutenant General of the Armies of his Majesty and Inspector General of the Infantry, and, by commission, Governor and Captain-General of the Province of Louisiana." It is reprinted in full in American State Papers, I. (Miscellaneous), 363-369.

About the same time, or soon after, Governor O'Reilly promulgated a series of instructions for procedure in the courts.

The first book printed in Louisiana after the United States acquired the Province, probably was the following:

Esquisse de la situation politique et civile de la Louisiane depuis le 30 Novembre 1803 jusqu'au 1^{er} Octobre 1804, par un Louisianais. Diverso interea miscentur mænia Luctu. Virg. Aneid.

A la Nouvelle Orléans, de l'imprimerie du Télégraphe, chez Beleurgey et Renard, rue Bourbon. [1804.]

This was a very full review of the grievances of which the Louisianians complained, attacking severely the conduct of the American government, and some of the acts of Governor Claiborne.

The following are the next earliest titles known:

Acts | passed at the | first session | of the | Legislative | Council | of the | Territory of Orleans, | begun and held at the Principal, in the City of | New-Orleans, on Monday the third day of | December, in the year of our Lord, one | thousand eight hundred and four, | and of the Independence of the | United States the twenty-ninth. | Published by Authority. |

New-Orleans: | printed by James M. Bradford, printer to the | Territory. | 1805. | 12° Pp. xxxiv, 461.—Cole (MS.).

The laws were approved between Dec. 13, 1804, and May 4, 1805. 500 copies of the Laws of this and future sessions were ordered printed.

Acts Passed at the First and Second Sessions of the Legislative Council of the Territory of Orleans, begun and held at the Principal, in the City of New Orleans, on Monday, the third day of December, 1804; and on Thursday, the 20th day of June, 1805.

HISTORY AND CHRONOLOGY OF NEWSPAPERS

1785, May 26 (est.)—Le Courrier du Vendredi, at New. Orleans.

No. 62, 4 Août, 1786, shows that the paper was a small folio, the pages $9\frac{7}{8}$ x $7\frac{1}{2}$ inches in size, two columns to the page. The printed matter was but 8 x $5\frac{1}{4}$ inches on each page. No printer's name is given. The paper appears to have been paged consecutively from the beginning, the first page of this issue being numbered 249—probably an error of the printer, as it should be 245, unless there had been some "extras." It is not known how long this Friday Courier was published. The author has only been able to learn of the existence of a single leaf (pp. 249-250) of the paper. It was probably the precursor of the Louisiana Courier mentioned by Thomas as published in 1810.

- 1794 (?)—Moniteur de la Louisiane. No early copies are known to exist.

Jun., who established the first printing press in Maine, at Falmouth (now Portland), in 1784, or possibly earlier.

In that year, Thomas B. Wait, who had been previously concerned in the publication of the Boston Chronich, came to Falmouth and opened a stationery store. Finding Benjamin Titcomb already established there he entered into partnership with him, and they issued the first newspaper in Maine, as mentioned below. This partnership continued from January 1, 1785, until February, 1786. It is very probable that some pamphlets were printed by Titcomb, or by Titcomb and Wait, but the earliest Maine book known is as follows?

HISTORY AND CHRONOLOGY OF NEWSPAPERS.

1785, January 1 (Saturday)—The Falmouth Gazette and Weekly Advertiser. Colophon: "Falmouth: Printed by Titcomb and Wait, Middle-Street."

Four pages, three columns to the page; about the sixe of a sheet of foolscap.

Titcomb was the fourth son of Deacon Benjamin Titcomb and Anne, daughter of Moses Pearson. He was born in Portland, July 26, 1761. He learned the printer's trade at Newburyport, Mass. About 1798 he left printing and entered the Baptist ministry. He retired from the pulpit at the age of eighty-three, and died September 30, 1848, at Brunswick.

Thomas B. Wait was born in that part of Lynn, Mass., called Saugus, in 1762, and served an apprenticeship at the printing business in Boston. He was in the book publishing and selling business at Portland, and was burnt out in 1786, losing everything. In 1807 he published an edition of Blackstone's Commentaries, in four volumes. About 1814 he returned to Boston, where he died in 1830. Mr. Wait is described by Willis as "a man of ardent temperament, strong mind, great firmness and independence of character." He was earnest and persevering in whatever he undertook, and honest in his purposes. In connection with John P. Sawin, "a very ingenious mechanic," he invented a circular power printing press, patented February 10, 1810, which is very fully described by Thomas (Hist. Printing, 1st ed., II., 540-544). Munsell says he was at the time of his death a member of the firm of Lilly, Wait & Co.

One of the objects of the Gazette was to advocate the erection of Maine into a separate State. The expenses of the new government were estimated at $\pounds 3,500$, which, if raised by a poll tax, would amount to six shillings on a poll. Wait published several pamphlets relating to the subject.¹

The arrangement of the title of Maine's first newspaper was as follows:

THE

 AND

WEEKLY ADVERTISER.

(No. 1) Saturday, January 1, 1785. (Vol. 1)

An Address to the Inhabitants of the District of Maine, upon the Subject of their Separation from the Present Government of Massachusetts. By One of their Fellow Citizens. Printed at Portland by Thomas B. Wait. 1791.

The day of publication of the paper was changed, February 2, 1786, to Thursday. In March, or about the first of April, 1786, the partnership between Titcomb and Wait was dissolved, and The Falmouth Gazette discontinued, being succeeded by, or the name changed to 1786, April 6 (Thursday)—The Cumberland Gazette, "Printed and Published by Thomas B. Wait, in Middle-Street, Falmouth." Motto: "Impartial and Free."

The paper was continued under this name and with this motto until December 26, 1791, when it underwent another change, as follows:

1792, January 2 (Monday)—The Eastern Herald, "Printed and Published By Thomas Baker Wait, At His Office In The Main Street, Opposite The Hay-Market, Portland (District of Maine.) (Massachusetts.)"

Printed on a sheet 17 x 21 inches, four pages, four columns to the page. In February, 1795, the office was in Fish street. The paper was continued without further change until September 3, 1796, when it was consolidated with the Gazette of Maine (see 1796, September 3). In the issue for the date just mentioned, Wait announces his withdrawal in a manly but pathetic letter.

The second paper in Maine was the following:

1790, October I (est.)—Gazette of Maine, at Portland, by Benjamin Titcomb, Jun.

Printed on a sheet 17 x 11 inches, four pages, four columns to the page. The issue for Thursday, January 19, 1792, Vol. II., No. 16, has the imprint: "Portland, (District of Maine) Printed and Published by Benjamin Titcomb, Jun." The number for Monday, October 14, 1793, Vol. IV., No. 158, has the same imprint. The issue for Monday, February 16, 1795, Vol. V., No. 226, has the same imprint, with the addition of "Middle-Street." In No. 245, Vol. V., Monday, June 29, 1795, it was announced: "The price of the Gazette is Nine Shillings per annum, exclusive of postage, and Six Cents single. Advertisements inserted reasonably." In No. 264, Vol. VI., Thursday, November 12, 1795, the price is changed to "One Dollar 50 Cents per annum," and it is modestly suggested, after the advertising rates: "The increased circulation of this Paper, renders it advantageous for this business." The paper was now a triffe larger, 18 x 111 inches. The issue for Monday, July 4, 1796, Vol. VI., No. 300, has the same imprint, etc., but No. 307, Vol. VI., Monday, August 22, 1796, gives the publisher's name as John K. Baker. On September 3, 1796, when it was consolidated with The Eastern Herald, it had 1700 subscribers.

1794, August 4—The Eastern Star, at Hallowell Hook, by Howard S. Robinson.

Four pages, $15\frac{1}{4} \times 9\frac{3}{4}$ inches, four columns to the page. The issue for Tuesday, February 17, 1795, Vol. I., No. 29, has the following motto and imprint:

"The Public will, our guide.-The Public good, our end."

"Hallowell-(District of Maine)-Printed by Howard S. Robinson."

"Printed and published at the Hook, Hallowell (Massachusetts) by Howard S. Robinson, at nine shillings per annum, exclusive of postage, where useful Essays, articles of Intelligence, &c., &c., are thankfully received.

"*Advertisements conspicuously inserted on reasonable terms—and every kind of printing executed with neatness, fidelity and dispatch."

This was the first paper published on the Kennebec. Robinson was probably an apprentice of Wait, and the Star was under Wait's patronage, and in the interest of the new State project. It maintained a feeble existence for about a year (the last number known is Vol. I., No. 51, Tuesday, July 21, 1795), passing meanwhile into the hands of Nathaniel Perley. It was succeeded by the paper next mentioned:

1795, August 4 (Tuesday)—The Tocsin, at Hallowell, by Thomas B. Wait, Howard S. Robinson and John Kelse Baker, the last-named being a former apprentice of Wait.

Four pages, 18 x 11 inches, four columns to the page.

The following is the title and imprint, together with the salutatory of the first number:

The Tocsin.

Published By Wait, Robinson & Baker, at The Hook, Hallowell.

(District of Maine.) Tuesday, August 4, 1795. (Massachusetts.)

"The Public are now presented with the first number of the Tocsin, agreeable to the Proposals lately published. We hope it will answer the expectations of our Readers.—We solicit the patronage of the Literati, without whose assistance we can promise but little. Speculations of a philosophical, political, agricultural and mechanical nature shall ever be attended to: And whatever may concern the public in general, or our readers in particular, we shall feel a peculiar satisfaction in communicating. We profess Impartiality; and as our object is to be useful, we shall study to make the Tocsin the vehicle of truth and knowledge.

"THE EDITORS."

The Tocsin was well printed, but on poor paper, folio, and was furnished to subscribers at "One Dollar & 50 Cents, 6 Cents Single." By Friday, May 20, 1796, Robinson had retired. Wait and Baker sold out, September 15, 1796, to Benjamin Poor, when the imprint was: "Published By Benjamin Poor, at the Hook, Hallowell." On assuming control Poor announced: "The frequent change of editors since the first publication of the Eastern Star has among other things given the paper an enviable [sic] aspect." However, he consoled himself with the reflection "That if his paper has merits it will rise in the estimation of the public and have an extensive circulation, otherwise it will sink, where it ought, into oblivion." He changed the day of publication to Friday. The paper ceased about June or July, 1797, the last number known being that for Friday, June 30, 1797.

1795, November 21—Kennebeck Intelligencer, in the northern part of Hallowell, then called the Fort Western Settlement, now Augusta, by Peter Edes. Four pages, 18 x 11¼ inches, four columns to the page, running title to each page, The Kennebeck Intelligencer.

The following is the title and imprint, with the Prospectus, of the first number:

No. I.

Hallowell, November 21, 1795.

Proposal

For publishing a weekly Newspaper near the Court-House, in the town of Hallowell, under the title of the Kennebeck Intelligencer.

The Intelligencer shall be printed on a demy paper, with a fair type, every Saturday, (unless an alteration in the Post should take place) and delivered to the subscribers as soon as possible after publication.

The price to subscribers will be One Dollar and Fifty Cents per annum, exclusive of postage; one half to be paid on delivery of the first paper, the remainder at the expiration of the year.

The paper shall contain a collection of the most useful information—essays that are instructive—paragraphs—extracts—communications from correspondents—and ingenious lucubrations of every kind, so far as the paper will admit; but all personalities will be avoided. .

From the encouragement which the editor has already received, and the favourable opinion of a number of gentlemen respecting the utility of such an undertaking, induces the printer to commence the publication.

As it will be the object of the printer to make his paper as useful as may be to every class of citizens, he most respectfully solicits the patronage of the public. Every valuable communication from the Literati—the Farmer—the Merchant—the Statesman—the Ingenious—or the Sons of Apollo, will be received with grateful acknowledgements.

The public may be assured, that no industry, attention, or punctuality, shall ever be found wanting in their

Most obedient,
Humble Servant,
PETER EDES.

Peter Edes was the second son of Benjamin Edes, publisher of The Boston Gazette (see Massachusetts, April 7, 1755). He was born in Boston, December 17, 1756. In September, 1775, one Peter Edes was sentenced to seventy-five days' imprisonment, by the British, for having firearms in his house, but this could scarcely have been the young printer, who was then but a lad of eighteen. Besides printing in Maine, he also printed at Haverhill and Newburyport, Mass., and at Newport, R. I.

In No. 15 of the Intelligencer, "Sylvia" launches forth into rhyme after this fashion:

"We have had such papers within several months past, As greatly disgusted our rude rustic taste; But since the Intelligencer has come upon the stage 'Tis read and admired by simple and sage: 'Tis almost adored by the nymphs and the swains Who live in the adjacent hamlets and plains,"

On October 29, 1796, the day of issue was changed from Friday to Saturday. With the issue for Saturday, March 25, 1797, Vol. II., No. 69, the name of the place of publication was changed to Harrington. The issue for Friday, June 30, 1797, Vol. II., No. 84, gives the place of publication as Augusta. On October 10, 1797, the day of publication was again changed to Tuesday; on June 18, 1798, to Monday; July 13, 1798, to Friday; on November 3, 1798, to Saturday. No. 179, Vol. IV., Friday, July 26, 1799, is published at Hallowell. With No. 184 the final & is dropped from the title.

In the issue for June 6, 1800, Mr. Edes announces: "That for want of due encouragement and punctuality in payments, the Kennebec Intelligencer ceases this day." It was revived, however, a few months later, under the title of Kennebec Gazette (see 1800, November).

1796, September 3—The Eastern Herald [Cut of an angel blowing a trumpet] and Gazette of Maine. "Published Wednesdays and Saturdays, by John Kelse Baker, in Fish Street, Portland. (District of Maine.) (Massachusetts.)"

Baker had just bought the two previous establishments at Portland, The Eastern Herald and the Gazette of Maine, and consolidated them into the new paper, which he started as a semi-weekly, the first in the State, the subscription price being $2.50 per annum. In October the days of publication were Mondays and Thursdays, and in the following April, 1797, it was issued on Wednesdays and Saturdays again. By September, 1797, Baker had abandoned the effort to keep up a semi-weekly, and the paper was "Published every Saturday." In October the day of issue was Monday. Baker continued the paper alone as a weekly for a year and a half, when he took in as a partner, Daniel George, who had come from Newburyport in 1784 or 1785. The title of the paper remained the same, but there was added the motto: "The People and The Government." The issue for Monday, April 16, 1798, has the following imprint:

Published By Baker & George, Fish Street,

Vol. XIV) Portland (Price I Dollar & 50 Cents.

[District of Maine] Monday, April 16, 1798. [Massachusetts].

On May 28, 1798, there was added to the title the quotation:

Who is so vile as not to love his Country?—
If any, speak, for him shall we offend.—Shakespeare.

There was no other change until Monday, December 24, 1799, or perhaps at the beginning of 1800, when Baker retired, and the paper was continued by Daniel George. Willis says that George was a remarkable character. He was a man of genius, but was exceedingly deformed, so much so that he had to be moved from place to place in a small carriage drawn by a servant. He had previously published almanaes at Apgusta, and published several at Portland, the first being for the year 1786. He died in 1804. Under various names the paper has been continued to the present day.

1796, December 3—Wiscasset Telegraph, at Wiscasset, by Russell and Hoskins.

The issue for Saturday, December 10, 1796, Vol. I., No. II., has the following motto and imprint:

"'The Wilderness shall bud and blossom like the Rose."

"Printed and Published by J. N. Russell and H. Hoskins, Corner of Main and Fore-Streets, Wiscasset, [District of Maine]." The subscription price was "I doll. 75 cts. per annum." The paper was well printed, on a sheet 21 x 18 inches, four pages, four columns to the page. The publishers were young men from Boston. Joseph N. Russell, the senior partner of the firm, was a brother of Benjamin Russell, of the Boston Centinel, in which office he was employed for some time, and was one of the publishers of the Boston Price-Current and Marine Intelligencer, begun in September, 1705. He left Wiscasset a few weeks after the Telegraph was started, and the issue for April 25, 1797 (when the day of publication was changed to Tuesday), bears the name of Henry Hoskins alone as the publisher. No. XXIX, Vol. I., Tuesday, June 20, 1797, is issued from "corner of Main and Water-streets, Wiscasset, (District of Maine.)" In the following November the day of publication was changed to Friday, probably at the beginning of the second volume. No. 2, of Vol. II., is dated Friday-Noon, November 24, 1797, and shows a slight change in the title to The Wiscasset, Telegraph; also a change in the publishers, the imprint of this number being as follows:

"Wiscasset:—(District of Maine.) Printed by Henry Hoskins and John W. Scott, at their Office Corner of Main and Water Streets, where Subscriptions for this Paper, Advertisements, and Articles of Intelligence are thankfully received."

The subscription price remained unchanged. No. 48, Vol. II., Tuesday, October 23, 1798, has the same title and imprint. Hoskins died in the winter of 1804, whereupon the paper was discontinued.

1796, December 15 (Thursday)—Oriental (Cut of angel standing in the clouds blowing one trumpet and holding another in the hand) Trumpet. Four pages, 18 x 11 inches, four columns to the page.

The exact title, imprint and salutatory of the first number are given herewith:

To the Public.

The Editor of the Oriental Trumpet, thinks it proper, upon the first publication of this Paper, gratefully to acknowledge his obligations to those who have generously offered to become its Patrons. His aim shall constantly be to instruct and amuse his readers. With this view, his assiduity shall be exerted to collect and procure in addition to Articles of Intelligence and of public importance for which a newspaper is principally designed, the most useful and entertaining pieces on every subject, and as far as possible, meet the wishes of every class of his fellow-citizens.

Portland, Dec. 15, 1796.

Rand was another apprentice of Thomas B. Wait.

The second number changes the imprint slightly:

"Portland:—(District of Maine.) Printed By John Rand, At His Office In Middle Street, Where Subscriptions For This Paper, Advertisements, and Articles Of Intelligence are Thankfully Received."

With No. 92, Vol. 2, Wednesday, September 12, 1798, the heading has the addition: "Or, The Town and Country Gazette."

"Devoted to Public affairs, to Trade, to Husbandry, to Literature, and all the other branches of useful Information.

"Portland—(Dist. of Maine)—Published By Rand and Burdick, at their Office In Middle Street, near the Head of Fish Street."

At the foot of the last page:

"Less Advertisements inserted conspicuously, on the lowest terms. To those who may wish their notices to receive general perusal, this paper is particularly advantageous, as it has an extensive circulation throughout this District and the States.

"Pamphlets, Hand-Bills, Blanks, and all other Kinds of Printing executed with accuracy and dispatch."

The title and imprint remained substantially the same so late as No. 158, Vol. 3, Thursday, December 19, 1799. The paper continued until November 5, 1800.

1797, December 23 (Saturday, est.) — The Wiscasset Argus, at Wiscasset, by Laughton & Rhoades. Four pages, 19 x 11 inches, four columns to the page.

The third number has the following imprint, etc.:-

"Wiscasset—(Maine.)—Printed and Published every Saturday, by Laughton & Rhoades, at their Printing-Office, near the Court-House, Main-Street.

"Vol. 1. Num. 3. Saturday, January 6, 1798. 1 Dollar 75 Cents.

"of the Publication of this Paper.

"The Argus will continue to be published every Saturday, on paper of its present size, and the type which is now exhibited.

"Payment is requested quarterly, except where, for mutual convenience, stipulations to the contrary are made.

"Subscriptions for this Paper will be gratefully received. Advertisements inserted reasonably."

It cannot be told how long the Argus was continued, only the first four numbers being known.

1798, February 15 (Thursday, est.)—Russel's Echo: Or, the North Star, at Fryeburg, by Elijah Russell. Four pages, 17½ x 10¾ inches, four columns to a page.

The second number has the following title, imprint and terms:

In No. 14, Wednesday, July 11, 1798, the terms were slightly modified, as follows:

"Three Shillings per year in cash, at the beginning, and Six Shillings in Produce, delivered in the month of January annually. Punctuality in each customer, will keep the Echo alive in future."

The Echo was printed on a sheet 24 x 18 inches, from type very much worn, probably the same as had been used on the Boston Centinel. The printer was Elijah Russell, who had formerly printed two papers in Concord, N. H. He was a brother of Benjamin Russell, of the Boston Centinel, and learned his trade there. The public patronage in Fryeburg was but slight, and the printer was obliged to appeal frantically to the people to pay up their subscriptions: "Pay in anything or cash," he implored. He discontinued the paper in 1799 or 1800, and returned to Concord,

The last number known is Vol. I., No. 27, January II, 1799. As the paper had then been published almost a year, it is evident that it had been issued very irregularly.

1798, April 16, Monday—The Gasette, at Portland, by Elezer Alley Jenks. Appended to the title was the cut of an eagle, bearing a shield inscribed with the word "Union." Above the cut were the words "National Concerns," below it the words "Truth—Argument—Patriotism." Four pages, 20 x 124 inches, four columns to a page.

In his first number the publisher gave the following Prospectus:

To publish a paper weekly, on a sheet of this size and quality, and on a type of which this is a specimen; at the moderate price of One Dollar and Fifty Cents a year, exclusive of postage. No objection to receiving the Fifty Cents, on delivery of the first paper.

Every measure will be taken to collect the earliest and most important information of every kind.—Original and selected essays, political and speculative, will be assiduously sought for.

The pages of The Gazette, shall ever be shut to the enemies of order and government; and to the defamers of our laws and country.

Its politics to be Federal—that is, such as will accord with the feelings of every American, solicitous for his country's welfare.

The Editor, will hold himself personally responsible for whatever The Gazette shall contain.

These are my proposals. Should they be sanctioned by your name; or a sufficient number of them to furnish a support, my pride will be, to become

E. A. Jenks.

Portland, April 16, 1798.

In No. 45, Vol. I., Monday, March 4, 1799, the title was the same, but Jenks made this announcement:

"This Gazette

"Is published every Monday, at E. A. Jenks's Office, Middle-Street, near the head of Fifth-Street, Portland—where Subscriptions, Advertisements, and Communications, are received with attention.

*The price is One Dollar & Fifty Cents a year, Exclusive of Postage. & Parentual payments are requested.

"GT The extensive and rapidly increasing circulation of The Gazette, renders it highly advantageous for Advertisements, which will be inserted reasonably, and in a conspicuous manner."

No. 74, Vol. II., Monday, September 23, 1799, has this title and imprint:

Jenks' Portland Gazette.

Published on Mondays, By Elezer Alley Jenks, Printer Of the Laws Of The United States For The District of Maine.

(Number 74.) Monday, September 23, 1799. (Volume II.)

In November, 1799, the publication office was "next door to the Portland Bank, Middle-Street." The paper was continued to December 28, 1801. Jenks was an apprentice of Thomas B. Wait. He was drowned in 1804.

1799, January 2 (Wednesday)—The Castine Fournal and Universal Advertiser, at Castine, by David J. Waters. Four pages, 18 x 11 inches, four columns to a page.

The following is the exact title, imprint and prospectus of the first number:

Universal Advertiser.

No. 1 of Vo. 1.] Castine, (mouth Penobscot River, [1 Dol. & 50 Cets District of Maine.) pr. ann.
Printed by David J. Waters.
Printing-Office—Jan. 2, 1799.

To the Public.

The Editor of this Paper, almost unknowing and unknown throws himself on the patronage of a generous Public. Nothing on his part shall be wanting to render the Castine Journal as worthy of attention as any weekly publication of the kind. As an American, his steady and undeviated principles shall be to Support the Federal Government and Constitution of his Country. Articles of intelligence, Foreign and Domestic, shall be carefully selected. Agriculture, Commerce & Trade patronized. Pieces of wit, humour, entertainment, &c., thankfully received; also such extracts as shall possess merit, and be thought beneficial to the interest of the United States.

David J. Waters.

With the issue for Wednesday, May 1, 1799, Vol. I., No. 18, the heading was changed as follows:

Castine And Eastern

Eagle with U. S. on shield, branch in talons and scroll with E. Pluribus Unum, in beak. Journal, The Advertiser.

The fourth page of the third number had the following heading, which was continued until No. 5, Vol. II., February 4, 1800:

The Medley, or a Dish for every Palate.

From our own vintage will the gleaner bring, Whate'er the sage shall write, or poet sing.

The paper had four pages, each about 11 inches by 18, with four columns to a page; the reading matter was in small pica; the advertisements in bourgeois. As with other early printers, the publisher was discouraged by the lack of patronage, and under date of December 19, 1800, gives notice that "If patrons do not pay the bills which are about to be presented to them better than heretofore (not a sixth part of what has become due having been discharged) the Journal will be discontinued after the expiration of the next quarter." The fourth page was altogether literary—poetry, selected or original, essays, anecdotes, etc. The paper was Federalist in its politics. The day of publication, which was at first Wednesday, was afterwards varied to Tuesday, and again to Friday, being changed to correspond with the date of arrival of the weekly mails. Messrs. George II. Witherle and William H. Witherle, of Castine, Maine, have two bound volumes of the Castine Journal, No other file of the paper so complete is known to exist. This file begins with Number one, slightly imperfect, and concludes with Volume II., No. 52, December 26, 1800.1 No later copies are known. In the library of the Maine Historical Society is a single number of the Columbian Informer and the Eastern Advertiser, Vol. IV., No. 2, Castine, Thursday, April 29, 1802, by David J. Waters & Co. It contains an address to the public, signed Waters & Rust. From this it would appear that with the beginning of Vol. IV., the Castine Journal underwent a change in name and proprietorship. It is not known how long the Columbian Informer was published.

David J. Waters, the publisher, was a son of William Waters, of Boston, and learned his trade as printer with Adams and Rhodes, of that city. Having changed the politics of his paper and come out as a supporter of Jefferson, he became obnoxious to the people of Castine, and removed his establishment to Hampden. Shortly after he went to Richmond, Virginia, where he died in a few months, probably in 1802 or 1803, at an early age.²

² Willis, in his History of Maine, gives the name of this paper incorrectly as the Castine Gazette, and the name of the publisher as David S. Waters. He says that Isaac Story, a young lawyer in that town, was the principal contributor.

1800, November 14 (est.) - Kennebec Gazette, at Hallowell, by Peter Edes.

As stated above, this was a revival or continuation of the Kennebeck Intelligencer, under a new name and with a new series of numeration, by Edes. In February, 1810, the name was again changed to The Herald of Liberty, and it was published under that title until the removal of the paper to Bangor, in 1815.

"Edes was an ardent Federalist, and in high party times was threatened with personal violence for the manifestation of his zeal in the cause. He was spirited, energetic, industrious, small in stature, with spindle shanks, his legs being quite deficient of calves, and as he dressed, according to the fashion of the time, in small-clothes, with long stockings to the knees, this defect was quite noticeable. When he removed to Bangor, he took his types and press with him. They were removed by Ephraim Ballard with a team of six oxen. The load is said to have weighed four tons, and on account of the weakness of the Kennebec bridge it was taken across a part at a time. The trip to Bangor proved quite difficult, occupying the team three weeks in going and returning. The expense of removal was $143, which Edes considered moderate."-North, Hist. Augusta, 384. At Bangor he published the Bangor Gazette for many years. His daughter Maria worked regularly at the case in her father's office. He died at Bangor, March 30, 1840. His son, Peter Edes, printed at Baltimore.

² In Scharf's History of Maryland, I., 190, is the following remarkable statement, which has been widely copied: "One fact of interest in connection with the work of the Jesuit missionaries in Maryland deserves to be placed conspicuously on record. The first printing press ever worked in any British Colony, was set up in Maryland by the Jesuit Fathers. Father [Andrew] White, after he had acquired sufficient knowledge of the Indian tongues, composed a catechism in several dialects, and the press was, no doubt, ordered for the purpose of printing it. Copies of this work are very rare; but Mr. McSherry found one in the Archives at Rome. Father White also compiled an Indian grammar and dictionary, but no copies of these are known to exist. The press was probably destroyed when the missionaries were attacked and their property plundered in 1765; but the fact remains that Maryland, first of all the colonies, introduced this great agent for the diffusion of knowledge."

No specimen of the product of Nuthead's press is known to exist. The only evidence, indeed, that there was such a press in Maryland at this early day is in the colophon to a folio pamphlet, with the following title:

The | Declaration | of the | Reasons and Motives | For the Present | Appearing in Arms | of | Their Majesties | Protestant Subjects | In the Province of | Maryland. | Licens'd, November 28th 1689. J. F. |

The earliest specimen of Maryland printing known to be extant is the following:

Col. Scharf does not give his authority for this statement, but it is doubtless based upon the fact that in 1832, the Rev. William McSherry found in the Archives of the Society of Jesuits at Rome, the catechism prepared by Father White; that is, not a printed copy, but the original manuscript.—See article in Metropolitan Catholic Almanac for 1841. Father Andrew White, born in London, it is said, in 1579, came to Maryland in 1634 and labored diligently among the Indians. In 1645 he was forcibly sent back to England, where he died December 27, 1656.

There is not the slightest ground for the supposition that the Jesuits had any printing press in Maryland.

¹ The Declaration is dated "Maryland the ^{25th} day of July ¹⁶⁸⁹," and is printed in Md. Archives, as cited, pp. ¹⁰¹⁻¹⁰⁷. During the revolution of ¹⁶⁸⁹, a warrant was directed to William Nuthead and two others requiring and authorizing them to search the lodging room and closet of Sir Thomas Lawrence, Baronet, who had been adjudged guilty of aiding and abetting the enemies of the King and Queen of England.

² Dr. Bray came to Maryland in 1700, as Commissary of Bishop Compton, of London, to investigate and arrange the affairs of the English church in the Colony, and remained in this country several months.

The next earliest Maryland imprint is the following:

The | Power | of the | Gospel, | in the | Conversion of Sinners, | in a | Sermon | Preach'd at | Annapolis In Maryland, | by George Keith, M. A. | July the 4th |

Sm. 4° Pp. (2), 19.—Sabin, 37206; Brinley, 3672; Stevens's Hist. Nuggets, I., 433.

The earliest Maryland book known to Thomas was this:

HISTORY AND CHRONOLOGY OF NEWSPAPERS.

1727, August—The Maryland Gazette, at Annapolis, by William Parks, printer to the Province of Maryland.

It was printed on a sheet a little larger than foolscap, four pages, two columns to the page. On either side of the paper was an excellent cut, and below the caption was a space left in which were written the names of the subscribers, for the convenience of the post riders. At the bottom of the page was the announcement: "Annapolis, Printed by William Parks, by whom Advertisements and Subscriptions are taken." The price of the Gazette was 15 shillings per annum, and advertisements were to be "inserted in it at three Shillings for the first week, and Two Shillings for every week after." No. LXVI is dated "From Tuesday, December 10, to Tuesday, December 17, 1728," and has the motto: "Cujus vis est hominis errare: Nullius nisi insipentis, perseverare in errare. Cicer. Philip." It was probably discontinued in a few years. Parks remained Public Printer until 1740.—Riley, 94-96.

William Parks, it has been said, was born and bred to printing in England. He set up his press at Annapolis in 1726, prior to which time the printing for the colony was done at Philadelphia, by Andrew Bradford. In 1729, he printed, at Williamsburg, the Laws of Virginia, etc. During several years he printed for both the Colonies, and had a press in each. He was the first public printer of Maryland. According to Samuel Keimer, Maryland and Virginia each paid Parks a salary of two hundred pounds per annum, in country produce. About the year 1733, he left Annapolis, and made Williamsburg, Virginia, the place of his permanent abode. 2

The "Freshest Advices" from London were in the August preceding; from Boston, November 14; from New York, November 21—nearly two months old.

In his first number, Green published the following Prospectus:

"The Advantage of a NEWS-PAPER, whereby whatsoever is useful and entertaining, at home or abroad, is communicated to the Public, being so universally known, renders it unnecessary to recommend a Thing of the Kind; however, since it might be look'd upon as unfashionable to usher one into the World, without a World or two by way of Introduction, we shall, without tiring the Reader's Patience, and in as concise a Manner as possible, give some Account of our Design, which, however laudable in itself, we must submit to the Candour of the judicious Reader.

Samuel Keimer, in the Barbados Gazette, May 4, 1734.

In Maryland's Province, as well as Virginia To Justice and Honour, I am, Sirs, to win ye, Their Printer Im sure can make it appear, Each Province allows two Hundred a Year, By Laws they have made for Typograph's Use, He's paid 50 Thousand Weight Country Produce.

² In a letter dated Annapolis, 22d November, 1737, to James Logan, of Philadelphia, Gov. Sam. Ogle, of Maryland, wrote: "As we have not a Press here at present, I have given Directions to the Bearer of this to get a good Number of Proclamations printed in Philadelphia."—Penn. Col. Knords, IV., 253.

"OUR Intent therefore, is to give the Public a Weekly Account of the most remarkable Occurrences, foreign and domestic, which shall from time to time come to our Knowledge; having always a principal Regard to such Articles as nearest concern the American Plantations in general, and the Province of Maryland in particular; ever observing the strictest Justice and Truth in Relation of Facts, and the utmost Disinterestedness and Impartiality in Points of Controversy.

"AND in a Dearth of News, which, in this remote Part of the World, may sometimes reasonably be expected, we shall study to supply that Deficit, by presenting our Readers with the best Materials we can possibly collect; having always, in this Respect, a due Regard to whatever may conduce to the Promotion of Virtue and Learning, the Suppression of Vice and Immorality, and the Instruction as well as Entertainment of our Readers.

"WE take this Opportunity of making Application to our Learned Correspondents, whose ingenious Productions, if with such we shall at any Time be favoured, will ever find a Place in this Paper, and lay the Printer under greatest Obligations; provided whatsoever is transmitted of this Kind, be consistent with Sobriety and good Manners.

"TO render our GAZETTE useful, as well as entertaining, we shall present our Readers with the best Directions in the Culture of Flax and Hemp, especially the former, in the plainest Manner; which we hope will be of public Advantage to the Community in the present Situation of Affairs, when we can't always be certain of Supplies, and they are not to be had at all but at such Prices as the Generality of the People are not able to give for them.

"AS the prosecuting and carrying on an Undertaking of this Kind has been much wished for, and long desired, and must necessarily be attended with considerable Trouble and Expence; we doubt not of meeting with a due Encouragement from the good People of this Province, in a sufficient Number of Subscriptions, whereby the Printer may be enabled to carry on and continue it's Publication.

"THOSE Gentlemen who are pleased to commence Subscribers, may depend on the most safe and speedy Conveyance of their respective Papers, by having them forwarded to the Court-Houses, and other the most public Places, of the several Counties in which they reside; especially where Want of Opportunity renders it impracticable to send them to the Houses of such Subscribers.

"THE Price of this Paper to Subscribers, will be Twelve Shillings, Maryland Currency, per annum, unsealed; or Fourteen Shillings if sealed and directed. It will be Printed on good Paper, and a beautiful new Letter, the same with this Specimen.

"ADVERTISEMENTS, of a moderate Length, will be taken in at the Printing-Office in Annapolis, and carefully inserted in this Paper, at Five Shillings each, the first Week; and One Shilling for every succeeding Week, so long as continued therein."

The Gazette was published weekly, on Thursday, on paper of foolscap size, folio, but it was enlarged some years after to a crown sheet. The typographical features of this Gazette, says Thomas, were equal to those of any paper then printed on the Continent. After it had been published several years, the imprint was as follows: "Annapolis: Printed by Jonas Green, at his Printing-Office in Charles-Street; where all persons may be supplied with this Gazette at 12 | 6 a year; and Advertisements of a moderate Length are inserted for 5s. the first week and 1s. each time thereafter: and long ones in Proportion."

Jonas Green was born in Boston, in 1711, being a son of the elder Timothy Green, who removed from Boston to New London in 1714. He served his apprenticeship with his father, in New London, and after becoming of age went to Boston, where he was for several years in the printing office of his brother Timothy, who was then the partner of Samuel Kneeland. Subsequently he went to Philadelphia, where he worked for several years for Bradford and for Franklin. In 1739 the Maryland Legislature employed an agent to secure a printer, and Green being well recommended by his employers, received the appointment of public printer to the Province in 1740, 1 an office he held for the remainder of his life—a period of nearly twenty-seven years.

In 1752 a street was named after him, and in 1755 he was elected to the common council. In the fall and winter of 1756-7, the small-pox was epidemic in Annapolis, and the family of Jonas Green fell victims to the disease, whereupon many of the subscribers were afraid to take the infection from the paper, although Mr. Green expressed "doubts about the paper carrying the disease." He subsequently assured his readers that "people need not fear to catch the small-pox from the paper, as it is kept all the time a good distance from the house; besides, the disease is now eradicated from his premises." For a few years before 1765 William Rind, who had learned his trade with Green, was associated with the latter in the publication of the Gazette.

In common with all the American printers he was greatly exercised over the obnoxious stamp act, as the issues of his paper for the following dates show:

¹ Chapter IV of the Laws of 1740 was "for the speedy and effectual publication of the Laws of this Province, and for the encouragement of Jonas Green, of the City of Annapolis, printer." By this act he was required to print, stitch and deliver a copy of the public laws, speeches and answers made at the various sessions, and was directed to make marginal notes to the laws. He was also required to reside in Annapolis. Each county court was required to lay a tax of \mathcal{L}_{15} yearly in its county for the support of the public printer, who was appointed for two years.

The Maryland Gazette,

Second Supplement to the Maryland Gazette, of the Week before last.

Annapolis: Printed by Jonas Green, at his Printing-Office in Charles-Street.

Third and Last Supplement to the Maryland Gazette, of the Tenth Instant.

Annapolis: Printed by Jonas Green, at his Printing-Office in Charles-Street.

This "Third and Last Supplement" appeared in deep mourning, and the proprietor announced his intention of suspending publication rather than submit to the "intolerable and burdensome terms" imposed on newspapers by the stamp act. On December 10, 1765, Green issued a paper called The Apparition of the Maryland Gazette, which is not Dead but Sleepeth. At one corner of the sheet of the Apparition was, as a substitute for a stamp, the figure of a death's head, about which were arranged the words: "The Times are Dismal, Doleful, Dolorous and Dollar-less." The publisher declared that he was determined to resurrect his paper, "under the firm belief that the odious stamp act would never be carried into operation." He moreover declared that the Gazette "shall be as it has been, sacred to Liberty, and consequently to Virtue, Religion, and the good and welfare of its Country." The publication of The Maryland Gazette was resumed January 30, 1766.

Green was a man of handsome talents, ready wit, much benevolence, good character, and successful enterprise. He married, in Maryland, a young lady born in Holland, who had come when an infant, with her parents, to that Province. He died April 7, 1767, aged fifty-six years. After his death, the paper was issued from April, 1767, to December of that year by his widow, Anne Catharine Green, and from January, 1768, to August, 1770, by Anne Catharine Green and William, her son. William died in August, 1770, and Anne Catharine Green published the paper until her death, March 23, 1775, aged forty-two years. It was then continued by her son, Frederick, and about two years later he was joined in the business by his brother Samuel Green. Under their management, the Gazette gave loyal support to the country during the Revolution, although in 1778, "in consequence of the high price of provisions," the subscription price was raised to five pounds per annum. In January, 1780, the size was reduced to a half sheet. The paper was discontinued in 1839.

1773, August 20 (Friday)—The Maryland Journal; and Baltimore Advertiser, at Baltimore, by William Goddard; folio, 18 by 24 inches; four pages, three broad columns to the page.²

It was printed from a new and very beautiful Elzevir type, on heavy book paper, and the presswork was admirable. The armorial bearings of the Province, engraved by Sparrow, at Annapolis, formed the device of the title. The motto was the familiar couplet, from Horace:

> "Omne tulit punctum qui miscuit utile dulci, Lectorem delectando, pariterque momendo."

It has been translated:

"He carries every point who blends the useful with the agreeable, Amusing his reader while he instructs him."

² Nicholas Hasselboct, born in Pennsylvania, of German ancestry, was taught printing by Christopher Sower, in Germantown, and set up the first printing press in Baltimore, about 1760. Going abroad on business, he was lost at sea, and his widow, in 1773, sold his printing materials to William Goddard. Enoch Story, jun., who had learned his trade with Hall and Sellers, Philadelphia, printed in Baltimore for a short time, and in 1773 sold out to Goddard, and returned to Philadelphia. In 1772 Hodge and Shober opened a printing office in Baltimore, and issued proposals for a newspaper, but before the end of the year removed to New York.—Thomas (1st ed.), II., 131-3.

The paper was published every week, at first on Saturdays, and afterwards on Thursdays.

Imprint: "Baltimore: Printed by William Goddard, at the Printing-Office in Market-street, opposite the Coffee-House, where Subscriptions, at Ten Shillings per Annum, Advertisements and Letters of Intelligence, are gratefully received for this paper; and where all Manner of Printing Work is performed with Care, Fidelity and Expedition. Blanks and Hand-Bills in particular are done on the shortest Notice in a neat and correct Manner."

In his salutatory "To the Public," Goddard remarked:

"The great Difficulty and experience of Speedily obtaining a proper Assortment of Printing Materials, an inadequate Number of Subscribers to defray the charge of printing a weekly News-Paper, added to several unfortunate Events which have happened to me, have been the Reasons why the Maryland Journal and Baltimore Advertiser, so long expected, hath not before made its appearance. This, I flatter myself, will be considered an ample Apology, in the Minds of the Candid, for the long Delay in publishing it.—Many Gentlemen, however, encouraged me to hope for a considerable Addition to my List of Subscribers, I now venture to send the first Number abroad; and while I solicit the further Encouragement of the Public, I humbly bespeak a candid Reception for this Beginning, which, I am sensible, must appear under many Disadvantages, as I have not yet been able to establish a special Post from this Place to Philadelphia, for the Purpose of bringing down, in due Season, the latest Papers.

"I was aware when it was first proposed to me to undertake a News-Paper in this Town, that although it possessed many Advantages in Point of Situation, yet it was impracticable to print such a one as would suit this Part of the Country, without establishing a Rider from Baltimore to Philadelphia, to set out from the last mentioned Place early on Monday Morning, and to arrive here on Tuesday Evening, whereby I should receive the Massachusetts, Connecticut, New-York, Pennsylvania, and sometimes the British and Irish Papers, and be enabled to publish the Journal, with the Freshest Advices, deliver it to the Customers in Town, and forward it to Annapolis, and the Lower Counties, on Thursday Morning, several Hours before the Arrival of the King's Post.—This was a Plan I had contemplated (in order to render this Paper of great and extensive Utility) and had determined some Time ago, with the Assistance of the Public-spirited, to have carried it into Execution; but I have been prevented making the necessary Trial by a severe Indisposition.—I have not, however, given over my Scheme, but shall persevere to the utmost to accomplish it, knowing that on the Success of it depends the Credit—and indeed the very Existence of this Paper.

"I shall always publish with Pleasure whatever is sent me in Favour of Liberty and the Rights of Mankind, provided the Language is decent and compatible with good Government; but I am resolved that my Paper shall be FREE and of NO PARTY. And as Agriculture and every branch of Husbandry ought, in this Country, to be a primary Object of Attention, and forasmuch as printed Books on such Subjects, adapted to Climates different from ours, are apt to mislead rather than instruct, our own Experiments in these Matters, on which alone we can rely with Safety, may be better communicated, and the Knowledge thereof spread amongst us by the Channel of a weekly News-Paper than by any other, wherefore I shall always be careful to find a place a Place¹ in my Paper for whatever may be sent me that is new and useful on such Subjects."

The mails being under government espionage Mr. Goddard announces in his paper for July 2, 1774, a plan for a new American post office, which within a year was well under way from Maine to Georgia.

His sister, Miss Mary Katharine Goddard, was appointed Post Mistress at Baltimore, which position she held for fifteen years. Owing to financial difficulties of her brother, the paper was published much of the time in her name, or with her as a partner. On June 8, 1779, Col. Eleazer Oswald became a partner of Goddard, but this connection was of very short duration. The issue for January 2, 1784, announced that the paper was published by William and Mary K. Goddard; January 25, 1785, Edward Langworthy became a partner, retiring January 1, 1787. On August 7, 1789, James Angell "embarked his all" in the establishment as co-editor and partner. Goddard sold his interest to Angell, August 14, 1792, and removed to near Providence, R. I., where he died December 30, 1817. Thomas says that "as a printer he was ingenious and enterprising, but his plans frequently failed of success. Few could conduct a newspaper better than Goddard: he was a capable editor, and his talents were often drawn into requisition" for the benefit of others.2 Miss Goddard remained in Baltimore, where she kept a book store till 1802; she died August 12, 1816, aged 80 years. On November 1, 1793, Paul James Sullivan bought an interest in the paper from Mr. Angell, when the Journal became a tri-weekly. Sullivan retired on June 11, and Angell carried on the publication alone until October 21, 1794, when Francis Blumfield bought the establishment, which he conducted until January I, 1795, on which day Philip Edwards, editor of the Baltimore Daily Advertiser, bought an interest and consolidated his paper with the Journal, which thereupon became a daily, under the name of the Maryland Journal and Baltimore Universal Daily Advertiser. Blumfield sold out, June 18, 1795, to John W. Allen; the new firm of Edwards and Allen dissolved partnership, June 18, 1796, Allen retiring; on August 2, 1796, W. C. Smyth became associated with Edwards under the firm name of Edwards and Smyth, but Smyth withdrew within a few weeks, the paper for August ² Further notices of William Goddard will be found under Pennsylvania, 1767, and Rhode Island, 1762.

8 being published by Edwards alone. On December 4, 1796, the office was destroyed by fire, and the paper suspended publication until January 2, 1797, when it re-appeared with D. Finchette Freebairn as editor and proprietor, who gave up the enterprise February 28, when the paper was again suspended. On Tuesday, March 21, 1797, Philip Edwards revived the Journal, but it was finally discontinued June 30, 1797.

1775, May 2 (Tuesday)—Dunlap's Maryland Gazette or The Baltimore General Advertiser, at Baltimore. "Printed by John Dunlap, once a week, at his printing office in Market street at ten shillings per annum."

On Tuesday, September 15, 1778, Dunlap sold out his interest in the paper to James Hays, Jr., who changed the name to The Maryland Gazette and Baltimore General Advertiser. The paper was discontinued for want of support, January 5, 1779.

1783, May 16 (Friday)—The Maryland Gazette, or The Baltimore General Advertiser, at Baltimore. "Published by John Hayes, every Friday, in Market street, opposite the dwelling of Mr. Archibald Buchanan. Terms Fifteen Shillings per annum."

No. 170, Vol. III., Tuesday, January 3, 1786, is "Printed by John Hayes, in Bight Lane, next door to Mr. Grant's Fountain." No. 172, January 10, 1786, shows a slight change in the title, omitting the word General. The paper was now a semi-weekly, published Tuesday and Friday, at 20s. per annum. In 1787 Hayes carried on a spirited newspaper war with Goddard's Maryland Journal. The Gazette was still published in 1791.

1786, January 4—The Maryland Chronicle, or the Universal Advertiser, at Frederick, by Matthias Bartgis.

The exact title, etc., of the third number is as follows:

UNIVERSAL ADVERTISER.

Qui nova desiderat, pervolvat viscera nostra: affero delicias, fortuitosque casus.

WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 18, 1786.

¹ The town of Frederick was laid out in September, 1745, and in 1748, on the formation of the new county, it was made the county town.

The colophon reads: "Frederick-Town: Printed by Matthias Bartgis, at the English and German Printing-Office; Where Subscriptions at Eleven Shillings and Three Pence per Annum, Essays, Articles of Intelligence, &c. for this Paper, are gratefully received."

"Advertisements, of no more Length than Breadth, are inserted, the first Three Weeks for One Dollar, and for every Continuance after, One Quarter of a Dollar; those exceeding a Square are inserted in the same Proportion."

In his prospectus, the editor announces: "I propose, should sufficient encouragement offer, to establish a Post from this place to Winchester to carry my English and German News-papers to Funks-Town, Hagers-Town, Sharpsburg, Shepherdstown, Martinsburg, and Winchester."

Bartgis had served his apprenticeship with Bradford in Philadelphia, and established his printing press in Frederick in North Market-Street, in 1779. Having the approbation and encouragement of Governor Thomas Johnson, Governor Thomas Sim Lee, General Roger Nelson, and others, he established his paper in 1786 with the above title. In 1787 the price was reduced to four pence. With the issue for May 22, 1792, the title was changed to The Maryland Gazette, or Frederick County Advertiser. The paper was on a sheet of four pages, the size of letter paper. Price 7 | 6 per annum. In 1794, the name was changed to Federal Gazette. The following is the exact title and imprint of a number of the paper in 1796:

In lependence, 20th Year.]

BARTGIS'S [Federal Government, 7th year.

FEDERAL GAZETTE,

Frederick-Town and County Weekly Advertiser.

[Price 15 | s. per annum.] Thursday, April 21, 1796. [No. 206—Vol. IV.]

Frederick-Town, Printed by M. Bartgis.

No. 350, Vol. VI., Wednesday, January 23, 1799, changes the latter part of the title by omitting "Town and." A cut is inserted in the heading, of an eagle with streamer from his beak inscribed "e pluribus unum." This number had the following imprint: "Printed every Wednesday, by Matthias Bartgis, at his English & German Printing Office, the upper end of Market Street, Frederick-Town, where Subscriptions, Advertisements, Essays, Articles of Intelligence, etc. are thankfully received, and where Printing & Bookbinding in general are executed with neatness and dispatch. A Letter Box is fixed at the upper door."

In 1801 the title underwent another change, to Republican Gazette, under which name it continued until 1820, when Bartgis sold out his interest in the paper and retired. During his connection with this newspaper he published for a number of years, the "Poor Robin's Almanac," Lutheran Hymn and Prayer Books, History of the Revolution in Scriptural style, and other books and pamphlets. He was not a brilliant writer, but a good printer, and conversant with the English, German, French and Latin languages. He was a liberal-hearted man, a little eccentric at times. He was extensively acquainted in Frederick county, but did not accumulate great wealth during his connection with the printing business. He died about 1825, at his residence near the old paper mill on the Tuscarora, and was buried about three miles north-west of Frederick, in the old Trout (now Cronise) burying ground.

1790, January 1—The Washington Spy, at Elizabeth (Hager's) Town, by Stewart Herbert.

It was handsomely printed on stout paper, four pages, 15 x 10 inches in size, three columns to the page, without rules, in good clear type. It was published weekly by Herbert, who had opened a printing office in Queen street, Lancaster, in 1774. He died probably early in 1795, for No. 241, Tuesday, March 10, 1795, is printed by Phebe Herbert, his widow. In the following June she had John D. Cary associated with her as printer, but in No. 304, Wednesday, June 1, 1796, it is announced that the partnership is dissolved, and the paper was again printed by Phebe Herbert alone, at 15 | s. per annum. The issue for June 22, 1796, No. 307, has this imprint: "Elizabeth (Hager's) Town. (Maryland) Printed by Phebe Herbert, at her Printing-Office, in the main street leading to the Western Country, where Subscriptions, Advertisements, Essays, Articles of Intelligence, &c., are thankfully received, and Printing in general executed with neatness and dispatch." No. 339, February I, 1797, omits the printer's name. In December, 1796, Mrs. Herbert married Thomas Grieves, who continued the paper for a few weeks under the same name, when he changed the title to Maryland Herald (see under date of 1797, March 2).

"At Hager's-Town, a place of about two thousand inhabitants, they have a weekly newspaper. About two hundred and fifty copies are sold; besides about fifty German newspapers from Lancaster and fifty from Baltimore."

1790, March I (est.)—The Maryland Gazette, and Frederick Weekly Advertiser, at Frederick, by John Winter.

The following is the precise title and imprint of an early number:

An early Hagerstown imprint is mentioned by Sabin (42308):

Printed for Jacob D, Dietrick, Hagerstown, Md. 1803.

The Maryland Gazette and Frederick Weekly Advertiser.

(Vol. I.) Saturday, December 18, 1790.

Frederick-Town: Printed by John Winter, at the Printing-Office in Patrick Street, where Essays, Articles of Intelligence, Advertisements, etc., for this Paper, are gratefully received.

It is not known how long this paper continued, as only three copies have been discovered. It is possible that it was published until merged in or changed to the Rights of Man, in 1794. (See 1794, January 30, for a further notice of John Winter.) The latter paper was issued from the same office.

1790, May 16 (est.)—The Maryland Herald, and Eastern Shore Intelligencer, at Easton, by James Cowan; four pages, 17 x 10\frac{1}{4} inches, three columns to a page.

The arrangement of heading, etc., was as follows:

(Vol. II.) The

The (No. 56.)

Maryland Herald and Eastern Shore Intelligencer.

Tuesday, June 7, 1791.

Easton: Printed by James Cowan.

It is a remarkable fact that this paper was published for seven years, at least, without a change in title or publisher, or in the day of publication. No. 351, Vol. VII., is dated Tuesday, February 28, 1797. The Herald was still in existence in 1804.

1791, October 24 (Monday)—The Baltimore Daily Repository, at Baltimore, by David Graham, in Calvert street, between Market street and the Court House. This was the first daily paper published in Baltimore. After April 29, 1793, the paper was published by Messrs. D. Graham, Z. Yundt, and W. Patton. On October 28, 1793, Graham retired, and the paper was continued as The Baltimore Duily Intelligencer, by Messrs. Yundt & Patton, at Four Dollars per annum, or Two Pence for a single copy, "at their Printing Office in Calvert street." On October 30, 1794, Patton retired, and the paper was continued by Yundt & Brown, the name being changed to Federal Intelligencer and Baltimore Daily Gazette, which name was again changed on January 1, 1796, to Federal Gazette and Baltimore Daily Advertiser. It was afterwards known as The Baltimore Gazette. Yundt & Brown continued the publication of the paper until January, 1807, when one Hewes became the owner. After various changes in ownership, the paper ceased publication December 30, 1837.

The issue for February 7, 1799, Vol. III., No. 145, is styled The Baltimore Intelligencer.

1794—January 30 (est.)—Rights of Man, at Frederick-Town, by John Winter and John D. Cary; four pages, 14½ x 85 inches, three columns to a page.

The arrangement of the heading, etc., was peculiar, being after this fashion:

Rights Of Man: -By Winter and Cary.

Frederick-Town: (State of Maryland)

Printed by John Winter, and John D. Cary, at their Office, in Patrick-Street; where Printing, in all its Variety, is performed with Care, Neatness, and Fidelity. (Price—Fifteen Shillings per year.) Wednesday, March 4, 1795. (Published every Wednesday morning.)

Number 68, Vol. II., Wednesday, May 13, 1795, is "Printed by John Winter at his Office, in Patrick-Street; (near Mr. Samuel Duvall's)." It has a running head, "Fights Of Man. —(Page Two Hundred and Seventy)" on the second page, and so on numerically. Number 142

(should be 143), Vol. III., Wednesday, October 12, 1796, has substantially the same heading, imprint, etc., as No. 68.

John Winter was a practical printer, who combined that business with the profession of school master and other useful occupations. He taught school in Bentztown, near the old Market House. He was a Washingtonian Federalist of the old school. He had a son, also named John Winter, as eccentric as himself, who carried around the Rights of Man and delivered the paper to subscribers. He generally went around bare headed and bare footed. Winter discontinued his paper in 1802, and left Frederick-Town for several years, but returned in 1806.

1795, March 2—Fell's Point Telegraph, at Fell's Point, Baltimore, by John W. Allen.

This was a tri-weekly paper, published Monday, Wednesday and Friday, at $2.50 per annum. The paper was probably discontinued when Allen, on June 18th following, bought out the Maryland Journal.

1795, March 23 (Monday)—The Baltimore Telegraph, at Baltimore, by Messrs. Clayland, Dobbin & Co., "from their printing office on the northwest corner of Market and Frederick streets."

Afterwards continued by Thomas Dobbins in the rear of No. I Light Street, under the name of The Telegraphe and Daily Advertiser. Still published in 1802.

1795—The German Washington Correspondent, at Hager's-Town, by John Gruber.

This was a German paper, and the title is probably the English translation. It was continued for a number of years, but was not a permanent success. Gruber came from Philadelphia to Hager's-Town at the suggestion of General Ringgold. The Correspondent was at one time published under the manangement of Gruber's son-in-law, Samuel May. It was discontinued early in the present century.

While he was publishing his German paper, General Ringgold suggested that he should publish an English paper to support the Republican government, which he did. (See next title).

1795 (cir.)—The Centinel of Liberty, at Hager's-Town, by John Gruber.

It was not at all successful, and in a very short time it was discontinued. John Gruber was born in Strasburg, Lancaster County, Penn., October 31, 1768, the grandson of German immigrants. He learned his trade as printer in Philadelphia. He was not a violent politician, but was distinguished by marked and uniform courtesy and equanimity of temper.

He had a heart and a hand for everyone in affliction and distress that came within the range of his charity, but so quiet and unostentatious were his deeds of benevolence that none but those who were relieved knew of them. He died December 30, 1857, and was buried in the German Reformed Burying Ground, at Hager's-Town.

The German Almanac, afterwards changed to The Hager's-Town and County Almanac, begun by him in 1812, gained a very wide circulation.

1796—The Eagle of Freedom, or the Baitimore Town and Fell's Point Gazette, at Baltimore, by Pechin & Wilmer, four pages, each 16 x 9 inches, three columns to the page.

The following is the exact title, etc., of one of the earliest numbers:

THE Eagle of Eglewith U. S. shield on breast.

E. Plurhous Column issuing from month.
Olive branch in right claw, bunch of arrows in left claw. Around and above eagle's head are 16 starts surmounted by a circle of clouds, and outside of that, a circle of (probably) sun's rays.

Pechin was afterwards engaged in the publication of a newspaper in Virginia.

1797, March 2—The Maryland Herald, and Elizabeth-Town Advertiser, at Frederick-Town, by Thomas Grieves; four pages, each 15 x 8\frac{1}{2} inches, four columns to a page.

The title, prospectus, imprint, etc., are shown herewith:

No. 1.

To The Public.

Proposals,

For continuing the Publication of a Weekly Newspaper in Elizabeth-Town, entitled The Maryland Herald and Elizabeth-Town Advertiser. In The Room Of The Washington Spy.

The Maryland Herald will be published regularly once a week, viz. on Thursday at an early hour.

The Annual Subscription will be only Two Dollars:—the first half-year's Subscription to be paid at the time of subscribing, or in three months from the commencement of the Paper; and thenceforward to be paid half-yearly in advance.

Advertisements will be thankfully received, and inserted on the usual terms. The Paper will be regularly delivered to Subscribers in Elizabeth-Town and forwarded elsewhere agreeable to directions.

Tho. Grieves.

Subscriptions will be received by Mr. Samuel Porter Inn-Keeper, Williamsport: Capt. George Clarke & Mr. Robt. M'Culloch Greencastle; John Donovan Esqr. Hancocktown; Mr. Frederick Rohrer, Greensburgh; Mr. F. Brodhag Postmaster, Cumberland; and at the English Printing Office Elizabeth town, where the Printing Business in all its branches is attended to with the utmost accuracy and expedition.

Elizabeth-Town, (Maryland) Printed and Published By Tho. Grieves.

As stated above, this was a continuation of The Washington Sty. (See 1790, January I.) At the beginning of the year 1804, the Herald discontinued the use of the long "s." Two months later the name was changed to Maryland Herald and Hager's-Town Weekly Advertiser. The issue for Wednesday, March 31, 1802, has the imprint: "Printed by Thomas Grieves, near the Court-House. Open to All Parties—Influenced by None." In February, 1813, Mr. Grieves associated with himself his stepson, Stewart Herbert, a son of the founder of the Washington Spy, and who was a popular young man. After thirty years' connection with the paper, Mr. Grieves sold out and removed from Hager's-Town. His parents were natives of Scotland, and he himself was born in that country.

He died at Cumberland, in 1840. Stewart Herbert, Jun., died April 13, 1853.

1798, January 13—The Key, at Frederick-Town, by Dr. John D. Cary.

This was a small octavo paper of eight pages, printed weekly by John D. Cary, at the office of the Federal Gazette, in Market-Street. It took its title out of compliment to General John Ross Key. "Terms of The Key—Two dollars per annum—One Half to be paid at the time of subscribing and the rest at the expiration of six months." It was discontinued with No. 27, July 14, 1798, with which number a good index was given.

1799, May 14—Baltimore American and Daily Advertiser, at Baltimore, by Alexander Martin.

The imprint announced: "Subscriptions, Advertisements and Communications for this paper received at No. 15 Baltimore street, where all business connected with this establishment will be attended to with the same promptitude as at the office of the publisher, No. 39 Bond Street, Fell's Point." Martin sold out January 1, 1803, to Pechin and Frailey. The paper was afterwards known as the American and Commercial Advertiser; later as the Baltimore American and Commercial Advertiser. It is still published.

1800—The Daily Advertiser, at Baltimore, by John B. Colvin.

Colvin was a native of Albany, and started the Daily Advertiser in the interest of Jefferson for President. In 1803 he began the publication, in Frederick-Town, of The Republican Advocate, which was still issued in 1805. In 1807 he removed to Washington, where he published The Monitor, The National Register, and other papers. He was a brilliant and forcible writer, and on account of his linguistic abilities was employed for a number of years in the State Department. He died in Washington, in 1827. It is probable that this paper was identical with that just mentioned, and that Colvin was the editor, and Martin the publisher.

1800—Child of Pallas; Devoted mostly to the Belles Lettres, at Baltimore, by Charles Prentiss. Motto: "Quid sit pulchrum, quid turpe, quid utile, quid non, docet.—Horace."

This was a small 12mo., published at Baltimore, weekly, by Warner & Hanna, issued in numbers, the first probably about December first, 1800. Eight numbers were issued, of thirty-six pages each, the complete volume containing 288 pages. The subscription price was one dollar per volume. The last number contains this announcement:

cxxii NEW JERSEY COLONIAL DOCUMENTS.

"The Editor of the Child of Pallas commenced the publication, not too sanguine of success, yet with a strong presumption that the Citizens of this Metropolis, would yield him sufficient patronage to pay the Printer's and Paper-maker's bills, and leave him something, more nourishing than air—on which to subsist.—He has been but partially disappointed: The encouragement received, has been such as to cause a determination to proceed, confident that in the progress of years, that which is now a "Child," may attain the stature and strength of age.

"It has, however, been suggested, that if published monthly, totally divested of political information, and containing the same number of pages which 4 of the present numbers do, it would probably be more convenient, both to the Publisher and his Patrons. To this amendment the Editor accedes—and the Work will hereafter be published on the first day of every month, the second volume commencing on the first of March next. Should sufficient additional support be given, Cuts will accompany each volume."

He also adds that in accordance with the suggestion made he would thereafter publish the work on the first day of every month, the second volume to commence on the first of March ensuing. It is believed, however, that this project was not carried into effect.

1800, April 26—Baltimore Weekly Magazine, at Baltiz more, published by William Pechin, and edited by John B. Colvin.

This was also a small 12mo. magazine. It was continued until May 27, 1801, the complete volume containing 312 pages.

1819 (cir.)—American Farmer, at Baltimore, by John S. Skinner.

This was a quarto in size, issued weekly, at five dollars per year, and is said to have been the first agricultural journal published in the United States, if not in the world.

1836, March 10, Thursday—Baltimore Daily Transcript, at Baltimore, by S. P. Kinney and A. G. Tenny.

This was the first one-cent daily paper published in Baltimore.

Boston. Cleared outwards. Ebenezer Dearby for West-Fersey.

New York, July 10. His Excellency has Adjourned the Assembly of New-Fersey to the 4th of September next.

The Boston News-Letter. July 10 to July 17, 1704. No. 13.

Amboy, June 29 On Wednesday last by an Express from Monmouth sent to His Excellency my Lord Cornbury, we were informed of a French Privateer that lay at Sandy-hook, who the night before had landed 24 men at Neversinks, & plundered two Houses; upon which news Cap. Hamilton ordered a strict Watch to be kept here, to prevent a surprize; & on Thursday night several Gentlemen came here, viz. Messeurs Philip French, Glencross, Gordon, Richards, & Cap. Perkins, who were Passengers on Board of Cap. Sinclare that came from London, & were that morning about 4 a Clock standing a long the side of the Hook when they saw this Privateer whom they took to be an Outward bound Vessel from New York.

² These gentlemen were all New York Merchants. Philip French was Speaker of the New York Assembly, and Mayor of New York in 1702. His son, Philip French, settled at New Brunswick, N. J.

³ Humphrey Perkings, commander of the sloop Frederick.

The Privateer fired two shots at them, having English Colours out; Cap. Sinclare endeavour'd to get from him and run his Vessel on shore, but the Wind prevented, a man upon Shore pull'd off his Shirt, & made signs that the Privateer was a Rogue, upon which those Gentlemen got in to the Boat and escap'd and took in Cap. Sinclare who was extream ill, & landed at the Highlands of Neversinks where was a strong Guard, his Mate staid on board with some of the Seamen endeavouring to get the Ship within the hook but could not, & so jumpt into the water, he & Capt. Perkin's Son, and swam on Shore when within Pistol Shot of the Privateer¹

New York, July 31. On 20 Currant, Simon Pasco from Antigua bound hither was taken by a French Privateer of 14 Guns, 120 men off of the Capes of Delawar lat. 45. The Privateer belongs to Bordeaux, unloaded at Martinico, and there fitted out; Cap. Davy is Commander, they took a Barrel of Sugar, and a Hogshead of Rum out of the Sloop, her Guns and Arms, & then burnt her with all her Loading; notwithstanding Mr. Pasco offered 300 Pound for her Ransom; afterward said Privateer Chas'd Mr. Sandiford bound hither from Carolina, who got into Sandy-hook before him.

On the 25. The Privateer came to an Anchor in Sandy-hook, and there took Eleazer Darby in a Sloop from Boston bound to Philadelphia, next day they took a Wood Boat & two Slaves, and that night gave Mr. Pasco and his men their liberty; who about ten a Clock got up to N. York.

On the 27 early in the Morning the Privateer took Capt. Sinclare, so soon as Mr. Pasco came with the News, the Gentlemen of Her Majesties Council met and sent for Capt. Claver Commander of the Dutch Privateer, and proposed to him to go out and take said Privateer, at least to retake the Prize whom we judged to be Sinclare; who offered his Service, and in two hours Sail'd with 150 men and 50 men on board his Sloop, and said day came up with the Privateer and her Prize, but return'd the 28th without effecting any thing. And on the 29th Capt Claver man'd off new again; Capt Evertson and Capt Penniston in two Sloops are gone well man'd a second time in pursuit of the Privateer.

On the 30th Instant the Fersey Man of War arrived at Sandy-hook, and 5 days before spoke with Capt. Puckle from London to Philadelphia: She also met a Sloop from Newfoundland bound hither, one Martin Master, which they seized having prohibited Goods on board. It's said the Fersey will Sail to-morrow, who lyes at Sandy-hook to recruit with Water &c.

The Boston News-Letter. July 31 to August 7, 1704. No. 16.

N. York Aug. 7. Yesterday our 3 Privateers return'd without seeing or hearing of the French Privateer, at the same time came in a Briganteen from Nevis, who on the last of July, 8 leagues off of Sandyhook was taken by the French Privateer, & Ransomed for 400 l St Thomas Mony., & say that the Privateer is gone for Tarpolin Cove, having sent Cap. Sinclare's Ship with 15 of his men to Martinico two days after they took her. The Fersey Man of War Sail'd on Thursday last & returned last night with Capt. Feffries from London, & tomorrow Sails again in pursuit of the French Privateer.

On Thursday last the Militia of this City and the Neighbouring Counties of this Province, appeared here under Arms, who with 700 Men (that were in Arms the day before in New Jersey, and designed to be here had not their Harvest obstructed) amount to about 3,000. The most of which can be here upon occasion in 12 hours time, and the furthest off in 24 hours times. A great many of the Country Militia appeared not, being necessitated to attend their Harvest, so that by computation we can have in Arms in 24 hours time in this City between 4 or 5 Thousand men.

New York, August 12. Last night the Rt. Hon. the Lady Cornbury departed this Life.

W Hereas Peter Sonmans, Son of Arent Sonmans Deceased, under pretext of being invested in several Proprieties and shares

¹ Peter Sonmans was the only son of Arent Sonmans. The latter was a Hollander, from Rotterdam, who afterwards was of Wallingford, Scotland. He became one of the Twenty-four Proprietors of East Jersey, Thomas Hart conveying to him one half of his interest by deed February 1-2, 1681-2. He was deeply interested in the settlement of the Colony, and contributed largely to the sending out of the ship Exchange, Captain James Peacock, which came over in August, 1683, with stores and settlers. On his way to London with his wife (Frances Hancock), Robert Barclay and another, to see the vessel sail, and perhaps to take passage in her, as they were coming through Huntingdonshire, Sonmans was shot in the thigh by a highwayman or by a political emissary from Holland. He died a few days later, from the wound, and was buried in Friends' ground at Hinton. He left three children: Peter, Rachel (married Joseph Ormston), and Joanna (married Joseph Wright). Peter was educated at Leyden, and held several offices in England under King William.—Whitehead's East Jersey, 136-7; Whitehead's Perth Amboy, 75; Smith's N. J., 425; Elizabethtown Bill in Chancery, 82; Brief Account of East-New-Jarsey in America (1683, reprint 1867), 17; N. J. Archives, XIII., 124. In 1685 Peter Sonmans, as heir of Arent Sonmans, was granted a patent for 2,500 acres of land at the Blue Hills. - Elizabethtown Bill in Chancery, 48-9. His right to his father's estates in New Jersey does not appear to have been questioned till fifteen or twenty years later. About the year 1700 he became bankrupt, and settled with his creditors for 7s 6d. in the pound. In 1705 he secured from many if not most of Proprieties of Lands, Quit-Rents and other Appurtenances thereunto belonging, purchased by his said Deceased Father in East and West New-Jersey in America: Hath already Sold a considerable quantity thereof, and (as I am informed) is about Selling other parcels thereof. These are therefore to give Notice, That Her Most Gracious Majesty, Queen Anne, by Her Letter dated at Windsor, the tenth day September, 1705, In the Fourth Year of Her Reign, to His Excellency Edward Viscount Cornbury, Governour of the Province of New-Jersey, and to the Council of the said Province directed: Hath been pleased to signify, that the said Proprieties and of the East Jersey Proprietors in London a commission to act as their agent for collecting the quit-rents due by the purchasers of lands in the Colony, and probably came over in that year. His office brought him into conflict with the people, who were reluctant to pay a yearly rent for what they had already paid a good price, and as he was evidently uncompromising he speedily stirred up a host of enemies. However, he seems to have won the good will of Lord Cornbury, the Governor, who, prior to 1708, appointed him a Judge of the Supreme Court and of the Common Pleas and Quarter Sessions. Before Sonmans left England his brother-in-law, Ormston, had twice filed a bill in chancery to test his title to his father's lands and had been defeated each time. When Sonmans came to New Jersey, Ormston brought the matter before the Queen, and secured the order he mentions in his advertisement. He straightway came to New Jersey and published his claim, but found Sonmans too strongly intrenched to be disturbed. The East Jersey Proprietors had in 1705 and again in 1706 urged that he be appointed to the Council in their interest, and on May 20, 1707, the Queen appointed him in place of Samuel Jennings, a Quaker, resigned, and he took his seat August 28, 1708, at Burlington. In the meantime Ormston laid the Queen's directions before the Governor and Council, in August, 1707. Sonmans argued by his attorney that the Queen had been imposed upon in his absense, and that the direction ought not to be observed till he could appeal to her Majesty. The Council thought this reasonable, and after Sonmans was seated in the Council, the Governor issued a proclamation, November 9, 1708, commanding all officers to aid Sonmans in the collection of the quit-rents. Ormston returned to England and stirred up all the opposition he could to Sonmans. The latter was regarded as responsible for much of Lord Cornbury's arbitrary conduct, and when Cornbury was removed the popular fury burst forth against his principal officers. The Middlesex grand jury indicted several of them for technical offences, and Sonmans for perjury (about some taxed costs) and adultery, at the May Term, 1708. Lord Cornbury ordered Attorney-General Alexander Griffin to enter a not. pros., which he was probably afraid to do. However, his enemies asserted that he resorted to various subterfuges by which the trial went off till the May Term, 1710, when it resulted in the acquittal of Sonmans by "a packed jury." Sonmans was again commissioned, April 5, 1710, an Associate Judge of the Supreme Court. When Governor Robert Hunter came over, June 14, 1710, he speedily allied himself with the anti-Cornbury men, and in 1711 and again in 1712 urged the removal of Sonmans and shares of Proprieties of Lands, Quit-Rents and other Appurtenances thereunto belonging, do belong unto Her said Majesty; for that the said Arent Sonmans Deceased was an Alien born, and uncapable of taking or holding any Land otherwise than to the use of the Crown, by reason he was not Naturalized, nor made a Denizon of England. And further, That Her said Majesty is graciously pleased to grant all Her Right, Title, Interest and Claim to the said Proprieties and shares of Proprieties of Lands, Quit-Rents, and other Appurtenances thereunto belonging, unto Joseph Ormston of London, Merchant, and Rachel his Wife. and their Heirs for ever, in trust for Peter Sonmans, Rachel Ormston, and Joanna Wright and their Heirs for ever. And therefore by the said Letter doth direct His said Excellency and the said Council, to cause Letters Pattents to be past under the Seal of the said Province, containing the grant aforesaid:

others from the Council. Sonmans was finally removed in 1713. In an address admirable in tone and singularly temperate, under great provocation, Sonmans in April, 1709, replied to the attacks of his enemies, explaining most of their charges, and denying flatly those offences for which he had been indicted; the latter he did not attempt to explain, saying, with dignity, that they were pending in the Court, which was the competent body to pass upon them. In 1717 he and others of the Cornbury regime were charged with having fled the Province with some of the public records. Then or later, prior to 1725, he went to England, but in 1726 was again collecting the quit-rents, and Governor William Burnet issued a proclamation forbidding his doing so. In 1727 and again in 1730 he was elected to the Assembly from Bergen County, and was a leader of the opposition. On February 2, 1717-18, by an order in Council, Sonmans was vested with the lands already patented to his father, and Joseph Ormston with the residue. In 1728 his claims to the right of collecting quit-rents for the Proprietors were tried on an information against him for a cheat in receiving improper quit-rents without power; the jury found a special verdict, that he gave himself out to be receiver, and produced Lord Cornbury's proclamation. When Sonmans came to America and took up his residence at Perth Amboy, he left his wife and family behind at Cheswick, Middlesex County, England. His second wife was Sarah, sister of Judge Samuel Nevill, of Perth Amboy, whom he married October 17, 1723. He died at Elizabethtown, and was buried there on March 29, 1734. A friend wrote of him: "He was justly esteemed for his Charity and Clemency, his sincerity in Friendship, Patience in oppressions, and undaunted Spirit in Dangers, manifested his first Merit of the Motto of his Arms-Patientia est Fide."-X. J. Archives, III., IV., V., XIII., XIV., passim; Whitehead's Perth Amboy, 75-9.

and that such Clauses be inserted in the said Letters Patents as shall be requisite for making Her said Majesty's Grant good and effectual to the said Joseph Ormston and Rachel his Wife, and their Heirs, in trust as aforesaid, as by Her said Majesty's Letter may appear.

All which I the Subscriber being Agent for the said Joseph Ormston and Rachel his Wife, have thought fit to publish, in order to prevent any persons being mistaken in purchasing any Right or Title to the aforesaid Proprieties and shares of Proprieties of Lands, Quit-Rents and other Appurtenances thereunto belonging, or any part thereof.

New-York, June 9. On the 2d Instant early in the Morning Her Majesty's Ship the Triton's Prize Sailed out of Sandy-hook, and that night about 10 o Clock she met with a Ship 20 Leagues S & E. off the Hook, and kept her Company all night, and early in the morning engaged her, being a French Privateer of about 150 Tuns, she had 10 Ports aside, and full of men, thought to be no less than 150 or 200 men. Triton's Prize Out-sailed her, and intended to run very close upon her and give her a broadside, but the Pri vateer prevented her by giving the first Broadside and Volley of small Shot, whereby we had 4 men kill'd, and 5 or 6 wounded, besides Capt. Davies who was shot just behind the Ear, and with the Fall bruis'd himself much upon the edge of a Shot Case, that rendere'd him unserviceable for some hours. which gave the Enemy a great advantage, yet notwithstanding the Fight was bravely maintained, and a great many Broadsides given, the Privateer made a running Fight, and the Triton's Prize every now and then upon the Chase came up with her, gave her a Broadside of Round and Partridge, several of the French men were seen to fall on his Deck, part of his Gunnel and Sp'r-sail Yard found swimming; at last the Gale slacking the Enemy threw some of their Guns Overboard and row'd away, and the Triton's Prize returned to Sandy-hook to repair her damage. And Yesterday morning put to sea again, being very well Man'd and Capt. Davies well recovered; if that unhappy Shot had not hit Capt. Davies the Privateer had certainly been taken.

East-Jersey, June 6.

To his Excellency Robert Hunter Esqr. Captain General and Governour in Chief of the Provinces of New-Jersey, New-York, Vice Admiral of the same, &c.

The Humble Address of the Grand-Jury for the Counties of Middlesex and Somerset, at the Sessions held at Perth-Amboy in the Province of New-Jersey, the fourth Tuesday in May, 1712, Sheweth,

That the sense of our Duty Excites our Thankfulness to Providence, and sincere acknowledgments to Her Majesty for the Felicity we enjoy under your Excellency's Administration.

Amongst the numerous Instances that could be given, we beg Leave to point out a few, without which the Province would have continued unhappy.

- 1. Your Excellency's early Care after your Accession to the Government in setling the Courts upon the surest Basis, by appointing Persons as well quallifyed for Judges, as the Infant Circumstances of the Country would allow, they are men of known Probity, whose Reputation have remain'd Unsullied with the Stains of Corruption.
- 2. Your Excellency Appointing Surrogates in remote parts of the Province, which gives a general ease to the Country, in preventing that great trouble and excessive charge to which many were formerly exposed in Travelling from the most distant Places of the Province to Burlington, for Probate of Wills, Letters of Administration and Licences of Marriages.
- 3. The Celerity of Justice which is equally to be valued with doing whereof we were so happy to have almost as many Actions Tryed of late in a little Time, as had been at the Supreme Court, since the Province happily fell under Her Majesties immediate Government.
- 4. The discouragement of harrasing Her Majesties Subjects after that violent way of procedure by Information, which rendred that ancient and happy constitution of Presentments by Grand Inquest useless. Its with the greatest joy we express our Felicity, that by Your Excellencies goodness we now see Justice flow in its proper channel, and firmly hope that neither crafty Artifices, nor subtil insinuations will be able to divert it out of its right current.

We pray Your Excellency to believe that we shall not be wanting in our Duty to lay hold of all opportunities to demonstrate our Loyalty to Her Majesty, and Gratitude to Your Excellency in rendring Your Administration easy over Her Majesties Dutiful Subjects, and Your Excellencies Obedient Servants.

[1720.] There are Letters from New York of the 30th of May last, that give an Account, that a Sloop belonging to New Jersey was taken about that Time off of the Cape of Virginia, by a Spanish Privateer of 4 Guns and 70 Men, belonging to St. Augustine, who, a few Days before, had taken a Vessel from London, bound to South-Carolina. The Spaniards put 3 Frenchmen on Board the said Sloop, and left the Mate and one more Englishman, and ordered them to follow the Privateer; but the Night coming on, and proving very dark, they soon lost Sight of one another. The Frenchmen, who were none of 'em Navigators, ordered the English Mate to steer towards St. Augustine; upon which he, and the other Englishman, attempted to carry the Vessel to some English Port, which brought on a Quarrel, wherein the three Frenchmen were too many for the two Englishmen, however, the former were very Civil, and gave the latter good Quarters. The next Day the Wind blew hard, and obliged them to go to the Northward, whereupon the Frenchmen agreed to put in at this Port, (New York) where the English have an Opportunity to return the Civilities they had received 1

Philadelphia, July 26. On Sunday the 22d arrived a small Sloop, Jonathan Swain Master, from Cape May, by whom we have Advice, That a Pyrate Brigantine and Sloop have been seen cruising on and off both our Capes for above Three Weeks. They several Times sailed up the Bay Ten or Twelve Leagues; and on the 8th Instant brought a large Sloop down with them, which they took up high in the Bay. That Night they anchored in the Bay about a League and Half off the Shore, beat Drums all Night, and seemed to be very full of Men. What Vessels they have took we do not yet understand, none of the Prisoners being set on Shore. Our Trade is entirely stopped by them, no Vessel daring to go out, and all took that offer to come in. They were both seen on Thursday last cruising about their old Station, not fearing disturbance from the Men of War, who, by dear Experience we know, love Trading better than Fighting. No Vessel has arrived here for a Week past; except Hargrave in the Sloop Little Joseph, who sailed from hence about two Months ago for the Island of St. Christophers, but was taken by the Pyrates three Times and rifled of most of her Cargo, so that she was obliged to return back.—New England Courant, from July 30 to August 6, 1722. Run away from William Yard of Trenton in West-Fersey, the Fifth Day of this Instant November, a Negro Man named Fransh Manuel, but commonly called Manuel, of a pretty tall Stature, and speaks indifferent English. He wears a dark coloured homespun Coat, an Ozenbrig Facket, old Leather Breeches, Sheeprusset Stockings, new Shoes and an old Beveret Hat. He pretended formerly to be a Freeman, and had Passes; but he did belong to one John Raymond of Fairfield in New-England, and I bought him of the said Raymond. And the said Negro has told since he has run away, That he had found a Body of Ore for his Master, and that his Master had given him free. Whoever takes up the said Negro, secures him and brings him to Mr. William Bradford of New-York, or to Mr. William Burge of Philadelphia, or to his said Master at Trenton, shall have Forty Shillings Reward, beside all reasonable Charges, paid by me,

William Yard.

—The American Weekly Mercury, November 15, 1722.

Publick Notice is hereby given,

That in or about the Month of August Anno, 1721. George Fraser then Master of the sloop William lying at Anchor at Amboy in New-Jersey, having one of his Men Run away who had received a Months pay, William Cox of the County of Middlesex, (who was part owner of said sloop) advised the said Master to leave a Power of Attorney to sue the said Sailor, if he could be found. Whereupon the said George Fraser being then just weighing Anchor in order to sail, had not time to make a Letter of Attorney, but Signed to a blank sheet of Paper with two Witnesses to it, to wit, Henry Longfield and Jacob Isleton, in order for the said William Cox to Write a Letter of Attorney above it, to Impower him to sue the said Sailor that was Run away. Upon the Return of the said Sloop, the said Fraser demanded his blank shete of Paper or Power of Attorney, but the said Cox put him off, pretending he could not find it, some time after he told him he had seen it among his Papers, and now again says he has lost it.

These are therefore to give Notice, that if any Person have found the said Paper (and not received it from the said William Cox) and will bring it to the said George Fraser or to Mr. Andrew Johnson in Amboy, they shall be very well Rewarded for the same.

These are also to advise and forewarn all Persons that they be carefull not to pay obedience to any Power of Attorney that the said William Cox may produce to recover any Debts &c. due to the said Fraser, and that if the said William Cox should offer to sell or dispose of any Land or part of Vessel or Vessels, belonging to the said George Fraser, that they desist buying of him the said Cox, he having no Power so to do, nor has he any Bill or Bond or other Paper of the said George Frasers, but only the Blank sheet of Paper above-mentioned, to which there are as Witnesses, Henry Longfield and Jacob Isleton, as above-mentioned. And it is to be hoped the said William Cox will not make any ill use of the said blank sheet of Paper altho' he does not deliver it up, nor give any Release or Acquittance of or for the same, upon earnest application to him for such Release or Acquittance.

¹ Cornelius Van Horne was a prominent New York merchant, a descendant of Cornelius Jansen, from Hoorn, in Holland. Having bought large tracts of land in central New Jersey, where he took up his residence, he was recommended by Gov. Burnet, December 20, 1726, to a seat in the Council; the King appointed him June 1, 1727, and he qualified and took his seat, August 25, 1727. - N. J. Archives, V., 130; XIV., 335-6. In 1736 he was opposed to Lewis Morris, but nevertheless when that gentleman was appointed Governor of New Jersey, Van Horne was reappointed a member of the Council. - Ib. V., 456; VI., 15. In 1739 he lived about twenty-two miles northwest from Amboy. - Papers of Lewis Morris, 54. On account of his business engagements, and doubtless because of difficulties with the turbulent Governor, Van Horne neglected the sessions of the Council in 1740, and on May 15 he was ordered to attend, and when he still failed to appear he was adjudged in contempt, whereupon he presented himself, made his submission, and was ordered to take his seat. On June 9, 1740, at his own request he was dismissed by the Governor, but his successor was not appointed until 1745. - N. J. Archives, VI., 106, 237; XV., 144-7, 120.

¹ William Trent was born in Inverness, Scotland, and came to America in 1682, soon becoming a prominent merchant in Philadelphia, importing goods in his own vessels, being in partnership with William Penn and James Logan. In 1703 he bought, for £850, the most elegant mansion in Philadelphia—a brick, slate-roof house on Second street, which he surrounded with a garden of rare plants and exotic trees. On February 9, 1704, he took his seat in the Council of the Governor of Pennsylvania, retaining his position so long as he resided in Philadelphia. In 1706 he was appointed one of the first four Judges of the Province, and soon after he was commissioned one of the first five Supreme Judges of Philadelphia. He was a member of the Assembly in 1710, 1715, 1717, 1718 and 1719, being chosen Speaker part of the time. He was a prominent Church of England man, and a generous contributor to Christ Church, Philadelphia, and St. Mary's church, Burlington. In 1714 he bought of Mahlon Stacy, Jr., a tract of 800 acres of land at the Falls of the Delaware, on both sides of the Assunpink and along the Delaware river, and in 1718 he bought 200 acres adjoining his former purchase, whence the place became known as Trent-town. On October 4, 1721, he took up his residence there; the same year he was elected to the New Jersey Assembly, was appointed a County Judge, and was commissioned by Gov. Burnet as Colonel of a Hunterdon regiment. He was re-elected in 1723 from Burlington, to the Assembly, and was in September chosen Speaker; in November he was appointed the first Chief-Justice of New Jersey (independent of New York), and filled the office with credit, until his death. He was buried in Friends' burying-ground, now a part of Riverview cemetery, Trenton.—Cooley's Genealogy of Early Settlers of Trenton and Ewing, 778; Hail's First Presbyterian Church, Trenton, 35, 52; Clement's First Settlers of Newton Township, 228; Smith's Hist, N. A Caution to the Publick, 'by the Printer.

In Order to prevent their being further imposed upon by the Counterfeit Fersey Bills, which have lately been discover'd, viz. Three Pound Bills, Twelve Shilling, Six Shilling, Three Shilling, and Eighteen Penny Bill. The Three Pound Bills are distinguisht by the misspeling the work Publick, wherein the (b) is wanting. The Twelve Shilling Bills, in the Flourish on the Top is the Representation of a Basket, the Chequers of which are much finer than those of the true Bills; and the Stars smaller, in the Six Shilling Bills, The Text Letters are considerably larger than those of the true ones. The Three Shilling Bills are distinguisht by the largeness of the Text Letters, when Compared with the true on's. The Eighteen Penny Bills are so well Imitated (as indeed are all the rest) that it's a Difficult matter to know the bad from the others, only by the following general Rules, which is thus:

The Paper is much Courser and Thinner, the Signers Names are made with faint pale Ink, inclinable to a red Purple, and at the end of R. L. Hooper, the Point is wanting, which may be generally observ'd in the true Bills, sign'd with that Name, and the Stars in all the Bills (which has them) are much smaller than in the true Bills.—The American Weekly Mercury, March 7–16, 1727.

On the 14th Instant in the Morning, one David Willson and one David Wallace, were apprehended and Committed to the common Goal of New York for Uttering Counterfeit Bills of Credit, made Current by Act of Assembly, of this Province, and of the Province of New-Yersey. Upon their Examinations before the Mayor and other Magistrates they Confess they brought about Eight Hundred Pounds of that Money from Maryland. David Willson denyed that he knew it to be Counterfeit, but David Wallace ingeniously Confessed, That about four Months ago, he brought about a Thousand Pound, of the Counterfeit Money, over in the Ship Richmond to Philadelphia from Dublin. That he had the said Money from one Thomas Morough (who lately lived at Elk River, in Maryland,) but was then in Dublin, and that the said Thomas Morough told him they were Counterfeit Bills, but that he knows not who Printed or Signed them. That he was to have a third of the said Counterfeit Money for putting it off. That the said Thomas Morough designs into North America (to Maryland as he believes) with more of that Counterfeit Money, not thinking it prudent to Venture the whole in one Vessel. The whole Counterfeit Money, that was made being Three Thousand Pounds or upwards. That the aforesaid David Willson was Employ'd by the said David Wallace to Exchange and put off the said Counterfeit Bills, for which he was to have Four or Five Shillings in the Pound. That there was some Pennsylvania Counterfeit Five Shilling Bills, among the Counterfeit Bills he brought from Dublin, some of which he burnt in Maryland, they not being well Signed. That he and the said David Willson had not fully Resolved how to steer their Course, but had some thoughts of going towards New England. That he paid to the said Thomas Morough in Dublin, about Ten Pound for his share of the Printing and Signing the said Counterfeit Bills, and was to pay him something more when he came over. When the said David Willson and David Wallace were taken, they had 184 Counterfeit Fersey Bills, at Three Pounds each, 93 ditto at Twelve Shillings, 244 ditto Six Shillings; 43 ditto at One Shilling and Six Pence, and Five ditto at Three Shillings They had also 23 Counterfeit Pennsylvania Bills at Five Shilling, and one ditto at One Shilling. And they had 646 Counterfeit New York Bills at Four Shillings each, and 3 ditto at Fifteen Pence each, which were Sign'd D. Provoost, Facobus Kip, G. Beekman, John Cruger. Besides upwards of 100 f. in Counterfeit Fersey Bills, which they pass'd here the Day before they were Apprehended, and one 4 s. York Bill.

The Counterfeit Bills may be known from the True, by taking Notice, That in the Counterfeit Three Pound Fersey Bills, the Letter b is left out of the Word Publick. That in the Counterfeit Twelve Shilling Fersey Bills, the Flourishing at the Top is handsomer and finer, and the Letter T Blacker. That in the Counterfeit Six Shilling Fersey Bills, the Word Six Shillings, at Top are larger, and the figure 4 in 1724 is larger, and the Down stroke of the great

T narrower. That in the 18d. Fersey, and Four Shillings, and 15d. New York Counterfeit Bills, the Figure 4 in 1724 is much larger and the Names of the Signers to all the Counterfeit Fersey Bills are sullied and rub'd, and writ with Ink inclineable to a red Purple, and the Paper Courser and Thinner than the true Bills.—The American Weekly Mercury, March 16-23, 1727.

Perth-Amboy, June 23. This Day was held a Special Court for Trying of Wegualia, an Indian King, he was found Guilty of the Murder of Fohn Leonard, late of this Place, and accordingly received Sentence of Death in the presence of a great number of Christians, and about 20 Indians, the latter of which were all well pleased at the justness of his Sentence, and says, That had he had his Deserts, he should have received a Reward like this long ago for the Murdering several of them. And the Interpreter being (two Days before the Tryal) in Company with three other Indian Kings, who were attended by 50 other of their most Principal Men; The said Interpreter desired to Know of them, What they intended to do for said Wegualia, or whether they had any Message to send by him or not, to whom after they had by themselves considered of the Affair, they said, We have thought of this matter, and desire you will tell Wegualia, That we neither have nor intend to do any thing in this Affair, it is he that has wronged the English, and not Us, and therefore he must himself make them Satisfaction without expecting any Assistance or hearing any more from us; which Message the Interpreter faithfully delivered unto the said Wegualia, at his Tryal not having an Opportunity to do it sooner, and on Friday next he is to be Executed at this Place, whose wretched Example we hope will deter all his Indian Spectators from committing any acts of the like kind. Perth-Amboy, July 8. On the 30th of the last Month Wegualia (the Indian King) was Executed according to Sentence passed against him, for the Murder of Capt. John Leonard. And as said Wequalia had lived a base Inhuman Life, and Murdered his own Brother and other Indians formerly, so he died a hardned and impenitent Wretch, not shewing the least Remorse for any the Actions of his Vile Life; nor would he own the Murder of said Capt. John Leonard, of which he was Notoriously Convicted, for and deservedly suffer'd Death. He saved us the Labour of Writing his Confession, having made none; he only bid Adieu to the few Indians that Attended him to the Gallows, which were only his near Relations, all the other Indians refused to shew him the least Regard. When the Sheriff ask'd him, If any of the Ministers should Pray with him before he died? He indifferently Answered, They might if they would; and being ask'd which of them? he named Mr. Morgan ¹ a Presbyterian Minister, and that because he was his Neighbour, which he implyed was all the Reason for his Choice. There was a great Concourse of People at the Execution,

Burlington, Dec. 18. A Petition was presented to the House, by Sanuel Keimer, representing the Charge he had been at in making their Money, and to prevent its being easily counterfeited.

Which Petition being read, a Committee was appointed to enquire into the Allegations of the said l'etition, and make a Report of the same to the House.

And then the House adjourn'd till the last Day of December.

We hear a Motion will be made to the House, to build a Bridge over Ancocas, which if granted, will be of great Service to the Country.—The Pennsylvania Gazette, Decemb. 24, 1728.

Whereas one George Gray a Fersey Man aged about Thirty Years, a Pale looking spare Man of a Middling Stature, having pretended to be a Stranger in the Frovince, and in an indigent and helpless Condition, and having been under Bodily Distempers, has impos'd himself first upon the Town of Bridgewater, and then upon the Town of Salem (from whence he is privalely gone off as Soon as his Stale of Health allow'd it) in which Towns a considerable Expence has arisen by his Dyet, Nursing and Cure, and a great Charge has been thereby brought upon the Province; And there is Danger that he may in further Instances impose upon Other Towns, and thereby occasion a further Charge to the Province; For provention whereof, This is to Notify and Direct the Select-Men of the several Towns, That in case Application should be made to them or any of them by the said George Gray, who is an Idle, Vagrant Fellow, or by any in his behalf for Relief and Maintenance, that they sccure him, and give Notice thereof to the Secretary of the Province, and Keep him in Custody, till they receive Directions from the Governour and Council concerning him.—The Weekly News-Letter, December 19-26, 1728. Burlington, 14th Jan. (so-called) We have an Account from that Place, that the Assembly of New Fersey, was dissolv'd on the 14th Instant by the Governour, occasion'd as 'tis said, by a Question proposed to the House, Whether the having a distinct Governour for that Province, might be for their Advantage or not? which it seems the House resolv'd in the Affirmative. And further, that they would enter into Consideration what might be the most effectual Method of obtaining that End.

And 'tis said, that divers of the Members of that House were ordr'd to wait on the Governour and Council with these Resolves, desiring their Concurrence therein, and a Conference touching the manner most likely to effect it; And withal to signify to the Governour and that Board, that it was not their Intention to give him the least Uneasiness (were it it in their Power) during the Time he might continue in Commission, but only to take such Measures as might best conduce to the End aforesaid, when his Commission might determine by the King's Pleasure or otherwise.

By his Excellency John Montgomerie, Esq; Captain General and Governor in Chief of the Provinces of New-Jersey, New-York and Territories thereon depending in America, and Vice-Admiral of the same. &c.

A PROCLAMATION.

Whereas the House of Representatives of the Province of New-Yersey have presumed to make some Resolves, in order, as they pretend, to obtain a distinct Governor, without taking any proper Measures to know the King's Pleasure as to the subject Matter of them: This I think is highly Disrespectful to his Majesty, who has it solely in his Power to Appoint a Governor of this Province. Therefore I have thought fit, by and with the Advice and Consent of his Majesty's Council for this Province, and by Virtue of the Powers and Authorities unto Me given under the broad Seal of Great Britain, to Dissolve this House of Representatives, and they are hereby Dissolved and Discharged to meet or act hereafter as a House of Representatives of the Province of New-Yersey.1 Given under my Hand and Seal at Arms at Burlington in New-Jersey, this 14th Day of January, in the Second Year of the Reign of our Sovereign Lord George the Second by the Grace of Gop, King of Great Britain, France & Ireland, Defender of the Faith, &c. Annog; Domini, 1728.

ADVERTISEMENTS.

Fune 30, 1729.

An Indented Servant Man, named James Roberts, is Run away from William Bradford's Paper-Mill at Elizabeth Town in New-Jersey. He is a middle-sized well set young fellow, about twenty years of Age, has dark brown Hair, some-what Curl'd, Round

Vissage, gray Eyes; one of his Fore-Fingers is crooked. He wears a brown Wastcoat with black Buttons, a Home-spun Linnen Jacket, a light coloured new Drugget Coat, lined with dark Shalloon, a pair of Leather Breeches, and a pair of New-home-spun Linnen ones, a pair of Thread Stockins, Pump-Shoes; a good Beaver Hat, two new homespun Shirts and an old one; His Hat has neither Buttons or Loops. He is a West-Country-man, has been about one year in the Country, and is a Paper-maker by Trade.

This James Roberts is supposed to be Run away in company with John Hill, a strong well set Fellow, who says he came from Boston, and has a Homespun Pea-Jacket with Mettle Buttons, a sort of Kersey, with an old Slouching Hat, and in a poor Habit.

Whoever can take up and secure the said Fames Roberts, and give Notice to William Bradford in New York, or to Andrew Bradford in Philadelphia, or to John Barclay in Perth-Amboy, they shall have Fifty Shillings, and all reasonable Charges.—The American Weekly Mercury, July 3–10, 1729.

An Extract of a Letter from the Agent¹ of the Province of New-Jersey, Dated from London, the 21st of the 2d Month, 1729.

There is at this Time a Bill depending in the House of Commons, for preventing the felling or cutting down any White Pine Trees (except such as are actually fenc'd) in the Plantations: And also a Clause in said Bill, prohibiting the maintaining or erecting any Iron-Forges for making Bar-Iron, or Iron-Rods, that they might send over their Sow and Pigg Iron here; which I apprehend would be of very ill Consequence to our Plantations, and therefore I have prepared a Petition this Day to the House of Commons against it, desiring to be heard by Council before the Bill pass'd, and the New-England Agents are doing the like, and don't much doubt but shall stop it. We petition separately, but a State of our Case we have got printed together, one of which comes enclosed

The 24th.

Yesterday my Petition was deliver'd and read in the House of Commons by Alderman Bernard, one of the City-Representatives, and is referred to a Committee of the whole House, to whom the Bill is committed, and I am to be heard by Council, &c.

The State of the Case mentioned in this Letter, is as followeth, viz.

The Case of the Provinces of the Massachusets-Bay, and New-Jersey, and the Colonies of Connecticut and Rhode-Island, and Providence Plantations, with respect to the Bill now in the honourable House of Commons, entitied, A Bill for Preservation of his Majesty's Woods in America, and for the Encouragement of the Importation of Naval Stores from thence, &c.

It is proposed to be enacted by the said Bill, That no Person in his Majesty's Colonies in Am rrica, shall cut or fell any white Pine Trees, except only such as are the Property of private Persons, and growing within some Fence or actual Inclosure.

To this it is humbly offered, for and on Behalf of the said Colonies, that their Lands are originally granted to the first Planters from the Crown, with all the Woods growing thereon (as is expressly mentioned in their Charters or Patents) and without any Reservation whatsoever.

That the present Occupants claim under those Patents; and therefore humbly hope they have good Freeholds, and that to strip them there of, without giving them any Equivalent, would be a great Infringement of their Charters, and inconsistent with that Equity and Justice ever observ'd by this honourable House.

That if this Bill should pass into a Law, the Colonies will be no longer liable to supply his Majesty's Islands in America, as now they do with Pine-Boards, and Pine-Timber, so necessary for their Houses and Sugar-works and other Occasions, which would very much hurt if not ruin those Islands.

And whereas there is an Exception for such Wood-Lands as are within an actual Fence or Inclosure; this will be no Relief; because none of their Woods are so inclosed; it being not only needless, but the charge of erecting such Fences would amount to as much or more than the Value of the Woods so inclosed.

And whereas it is further provided in this Bill, That no Forge going by Water, or other Work whatsoever, shall be erected or kept up, in any of the British Plantations, for converting any Sow, Piggs or cast Iron, into Bar or Rod Iron: And that all Governours are enjoined under a Penalty to demolish such Works, it is humbly represented in Behalf of those Colonies, that this would be to take away and destroy in a violent Manner the Estates of many of his Majesty's Subjects, without any Crime or Offence on their Part, and without furnishing them with any other Means to subsist themselves and Families: This (as it is conceived) would be a most extraordinary Proceeding any where, but especially in a Kingdom so renowned as this for Liberty and Justice.

For what relates to the making of Bar-Iron in the Plantations on the Continent, it is submitted to the Wisdom of the Honourable House, whether the refusing them that Liberty, may not be hurtful to the woollen Manufactures of this Kingdom. It is known that the Merchants here send so great a Quantity of those and other British Goods to the Plantations, that they are obliged to build Ships there for Returns. If therefore Iron should be render'd so dear, that the Merchants can't afford to build Ships there, they can't have Returns for their Goods as usual, and consequently the Exportations of our Manufactures would by very much lessen'd in those Parts.—The Pennsylvania Gazette, The 3d of the 5th Month, 1729.

Observations on the Case of the Provinces of the Massachusets-Bay and New-Jersey, and the Colonies of Connecticut and Rhode Island, and Providence Plantations, with respect to the Bill now depending in the Honourable House of Commons, entitled, A Bill for Preservation of his Majesty's Woods in America, and for the Encouragement of Naval Stores from thence, &c.

It is a fundamental Rule in all Nations to promote and encourage their own Fabricks and Products, so as to require the least that is possible from other Nations of such Commodities as their Native Country (or Plantations) will produce.

The British Plantations in North America, are found, by Experience, to produce sundry Mineral Ores; but the Bill depending before the House of Commons, relates only to Iron, the Improving where-of in those Colonies may be said to be as yet in its Infancy.

The Bill depending, prohibits entirely the converting any of the Iron-Ore into Bar or Rod-Iron; and this founded upon the keeping those Plantations as much as may be, upon a Dependance of Great Britian: But at the same Time, it ought to be consider'd, that we must depend upon other Countries for Supplies of Iron; for which Reason, it becomes the Interest of Great Britain rather to encourage than discourage the improving of the Iron-Mines in America, as well as all other Commodities those Countries can produce; which is, in effect, keeping in England so much Treasure as must go to purchase such Commodities in foreign Countries.

The Prohibition as to cutting or Felling any White Pine Trees in general, seems to be attended with still worse Consquences than that relating to Iron; the Bill prohibiting the cutting or felling any white Pine-Trees, but such as are within Fence or actual Inclosure.

It is to be observed, that those Countries abound chiefly in Pine-Trees and Oak, of which there are innumerable Quantities, sufficient not only to supply the Royal Navy; but moreover, for the furnishing of all the British Islands with Firr-Timber, and Boards for building their Houses and Fabricks for Sugar-Works, without which they could not subsist; and a very large Trade is continually carried on from New England to those Islands with the said Supplies, which employs a great Number of Men and Ships, and consequently promotes our Navigation to a very great Degree.

Without all Dispute, a due Care ought to be taken for the Preservation of the King's Woods, with regard to such Trees as are necessary for Masting the Royal Navy; but at the same Time, the Inhabitants ought not to be debarr'd from making Use of such Trees as they want, either for their own Use, or for the Supply of the British Islands in America; or lastly, such Trees as are requisite, and might be imported to Great Britain, for our own Use; it being very plain and evident, that we have now vast annual Supplies, both of Fir-Timber and Boards, as well as Masts, from other Countries, at very dear Rates; and by the Bill now depending, instead of Encouragement for the Importation of them from our own Plantations it totally defeats it.

The designed Provision in the Bill, which allows the Inhabitants to cut down Trees, that are within Fence or Inclosure, will be of very little or no Service, because the Charge and Expence of fencing the Lands, will be more than the Value of the Trees growing on them; and besides, whenever any Fences are made, 'tis done with those very Trees, which they are now prohibited by the Bill from cutting down; so that if it should pass into a Law, it would be divesting them of their Lands entirely.

This Bill seems intended, with regard to Pine-Trees, to supply the Deficiency of the Act relating thereto, passed in the 8th Year of the Reign of his late Majesty King GEORGE, in as much as it is said in the Bill, that large Tracts of Land have been, since the said Act, laid out into Townships only, with Intent to evade the Act, but instead of remedying that Evil, this Bill now extends to the whole Country: But in Order to see how far the said Bill is consist-tent with Justice and Equity, it will be proper to examine how these Colonies came at first to be possessed, and upon what Terms they are now enjoyed.

The original Possession of those Provinces was granted by Charter from K. Fames I. without any Reservation of Trees, which said Charter was vacated by a Decree in Chancery in K. Charles II's Reign; and afterwards a new Charter was granted by William and Mary, which is what they now enjoy; and in this last Charter the Inhabitants were expressly confirmed in all their private Properties, in the same manner as they before possessed them, only reserving to the Crown all white Pine-Trees of 24 Inches diameter and upwards, growing upon any Lands, not there to fore granted to any private Persons; so that all such Lands as were at that Time the Properties of Private People, are now their indisputed Right, together with all Trees whatsoever, without any Reservation: Wherefore if the Legislature should now think it for the Interest of Great Britain, to deprive the Proprietors of their Trees, most certainly Satisfaction ought to be made to the Persons injured for what is taken from them. And it is to be observed, that in many of those Parts, the only Produce and Profits of the Lands are the Pine-Trees annually cut down and sold, and in lieu whereof, in a Course of Years, new Trees grow up, which is the Case of all Pine-Grounds, if not otherwise manured or improved.

But in regard there are still very large Tracts of Land undisposed of, sufficient to furnish the Royal Navy with Masts, it is not to be presumed the honourable House of Commons will any ways injure, or take away the Properties of private Persons, nor put them under the Burden of fencing their Wood-Lands, which would be equal to taking them away.

Another Hardship in the Bill is, that for any Person importing Masts into Great Britain, to be intituled to the Bounty or Præmium, must produce a Certificate from the Surveyor of the Woods, or his Deputy; that they were cut with his Licence and Approbation; and altho' he is enjoined to give the said Certificate without Fee or Reward, yet 'tis putting it in his Power to dispute every Man's Title in the whole Country, which is a very great Latitude to be reposed in any one person; for that it, in a manner, makes him the sole Judge of all Properties, as far as the said Præmium or Bounty extends.—The Pennsylvania Gazette, The 17th of the 5th Month 1729.

Amboy, September 23, 1729 On Friday Night last, one William Scot, was Apprehended in Woodridge, for Uttering one of our 18 Penny Bills, who on search, own'd he had Five more of the like Bills; he had a Parcel of Ribbons, and said he got them for some of the said Ribbons he sold at Long Island, but from whom he could not tell. The Justice there sent him to our Goal in this City, being betwixt 11 and 12, at which time I went to the Prison and had him strip'd, (the Justice of Woodbridge, having only searched his Pockets) and had a thro' search, but could find no more Counterfeits, but found on his Examination. that there was great reason to suspect him; next Morning the Mayor and Aldermen, after some search, Examined him; on which we dispatch'd an Express to Acquaint his Excellency therewith, to know what Bills he had Passed on the Road; and to have his Chest searched, which we suspected was at his Lodgings in New York. Our Governour gave Orders to search his Lodgings, and other suspected Places, but John Thomson the Express we sent, Braced his Chest and Beding, to be put on board of the George and John, Anthony Adamson Commander; and likewise found sundry of our Counterfeit Bills, Pass'd in New York, and on the Road, by the said Scot.

Yesterday the said Tomson returned, on which we went on board of the said Ship, and Demanded the said William Scot's Chest and Beding, which was Delivered by the Captain, and on search we found in a false Bottom of a small Trunk 476 Counterfeit Bills, Sign'd but not Numbred, and 106 Bills neither Sign'd nor Numbered; on which we went to the said Scot and acquainted him therewith, who on his Examination, did depose that this Adamson, had carried one of the said Bills (he believed) from hence to Dublin, and that in Company with the said Adamson and Thomas Eanon, the said Adamson told them, that if they could get the like Printed, they would get Money enough by them, for that they Pass in those Parts as well as Gold or Silver, that the said Eanon agreed with the Printer, whose Name the said Deponent was sworn not to discover, that they paid their Proportions to Eanon for Printing, and that they divided the Bills betwixt them, but does not own what Number; he affirms they had not a Thousand each, that the said Eanon, Adamson, and himself, the said Scot, had all the Bills, and that there was no other concerned with them on that Affair. The Captain we had Examined, as well as all his Men, and his Ship searched, but they all deny that they knew anything of the said Scot, or ever see him but at Salem in New-England, where the Ship Landed her Passengers, and the said Scott came first into those Parts, and when he put those things on board in New-York. As there is a great reason to suspect, the Captain, he was committed likewise last Night to our Goal, but are in hopes to fix the Passing Part of the said Bills on him.—The American Weekly Mercury, September 18–25, 1729.

Run away the 7th of this Instant September, from Daniel Allen, of Great Egg-Harbour, in West-New-Jersey; a Negroe Man, a short squat Fellow, Pitted with the small pox, he had on when he went away a strip'd Vest, a Pair of Woollen, and a Pair of Linen stockings, a Fine Hat (not New) with three shot Holes in it. Whoever secures the said Negroe, that his Master may have him again, shall have Three Pounds Reward, and reasonable Charges, Paid by, Daniel Allen.

To be SOLD.

A Tract of Land containing about a Thousand Acres, lying on South River, about Four Miles from Brunswick, and about Eight Miles from Amboy; it is well timber'd, and has about 60 Acres of good Meadow, a good Dwelling House and a Store-house, and a good Landing very convenient for Trade and bringing Goods from York to the Ferseys, and excellent for taking of Shad at the Time of the Year when they are in Season, as hath been proved.

Any one who hath a mind to purchase the same, may apply themselves to Gabriel Steelea, Esq; at Perth-Amboy or Dr. Browne near Burlington.—The Pennsylvania Gazette, October 27–30, 1729.

Perth-Amboy, November 1. At a Special Court of Oyer and Terminer, held at Perth-Amboy, on Wednesday, the 29th of October last, were Tryed at the said Court one Anthony Adamson and William Scott, for Counterfeiting the Bills of Credit of this Province of New-Jersey, and for uttering the same, who were found Guilty of the Crime so charged upon them. And the Court gave Judgment against them, as followeth, viz.

That you the said Adamson, be taken into a Cart at the Prison Door, on Friday the last Day of October, and so Carted thro' the Streets of Perth-Amboy, with a Roap about your Neck; and that you be, about Eleven a-Clock in the Forenoon of the same Day put into the Pillory, and there to continue for an Hour, and from thence Carted with a Rope about your Neck to Woodbridge: to the Meeting-House of the said Town, thence to the Square before Mr. Herds Door, and to stand in the Cart a quarter of an Hour: and that you have a Paper fixed on your Back and Breast, declaring your Offence, with one of the Counterfeit Bills fixed thereto; and from thence back to the Goal, there to remain until you pay the Fees and Charges,

The same Sentence was pass'd on William Scott, with this Difference, he was to be Carted to Piscata-away and not to be inflicted on him until Saturday the Fifteenth of November.—The American Weekly Mercury, October 30 to November 6, 1729.

Burlington, November 10. On Friday last, at our Supream Court, came on the Tryal of Fames Burnside, an Irishman, for a Rape on the Body of Anne Eastworthy, Widow of ——— Eastworthy

The said Anne Eastworthy being brought into Court in a Chair, depos'd, That going from Philadelphia in a Boat to A Goforth's Plantation, she enquir'd for some Spinning; that the said Fames Burnside being in the Boat with her and several others, told her, He could help her to half a Year's Work: That afterwards landing on the Fersey Shore, near Ancocus, about Dusk, she went with him in Hopes to get Work; but he led her thro' several Woods and Fields, and at last into a Cow-Pen; that upon her telling him, She would make him Amenas if he could assist her, he told her, He desir'd Nothing but a Night's Lodging, which, as she said, very much surpriz'd her; and thereupon he took her in his Arms, and [N. B We omit those Expressions which tho' used in Open Court, we apprehend may be offensive to the Ear of a modest Reader That she struggled, resisted, and cry'd out bitterly, begging him for Christ's sake not to abuse her, but rather to kill her, saying, For Christ's sake, Man, don't abuse me thus, but rather kill me; that after he had ravish'd her, they walk'd on for some Time, she being, as she said, in a miserable Condition, and in Fear of her Life, he asked her. Whether she would tell of it or no, and she saying No, he - ravish'd her again; That then they walk'd on further till they came to a House, where the Good Man took her in.

The said Person depos'd, that she came to his House about the same Time before depos'd in a seeming weak Condition; that she remained in his House Two Weeks and upwards, weak and languishing. It was also sworn that the said James Burnside offer'd to pay for her keeping and to make it up with her.

The Prisoner made little Defence himself; but having Counsel allow'd by the Lenity of the Court, several Witnesses were call'd, particularly Mr. E. R. Price, who depos'd, that some Years since, when he was Deputy to the Attorney-General, the said Anne Eastworthy had swore a Rape against one Hill at Salem; that she and her Husband being bound to prosecute, or appear as Evidences, absconded and forfeited their Recognizances, upon which the Grand Jury brought in the Bill Ignoramus.

Titan Leeds, Esq; Sheriff, deposed, that having a Writ for the said Anne Eastworthy, he found her in Bed; That several Persons being in the Room, Discourse began about the aforesaid Rape, and the said Anne declar'd, That if the aforesaid Burnside would come and marry her in the Condition she was in, he should not be hang'd; or Words to that Purpose.

This was confirm'd by another Evidence; and the Fellow had several appear'd to his Reputation, particularly his Master, who gave him the Character of an honest, faithful, civil Fellow; and another Evidence, who told the Court bluntly, If they wanted to be inform'd further, they might ask the Prisoner's greatest Enemy in Court, who had several Daughters with whom he us'd to keep Company.

The Counsel offer'd to prove that the said Anne Eastworthy had been an infamous Woman; but that not being allow'd by the Court, after a Tryal of about four Hours, the Jury brought him in Guilty. Death.

The next Day the Prisoner being brought into Court to receive Sentence, his Counsel offer'd several Arguments in Arrest of Judgment, and particularly that the Indictment was insufficient, by Reason, that after the Word Ravish, the Words, against her Will were left out; whereupon it was order'd, that the Pleadings on both Sides should be put off till next Court, and the Prisoner was remanded back again, and order'd to be put in Irons. 1—The Pennsylvania Gazette, November 10–13, 1729.

Philadelphia, Fanuary 13. On Monday sennight was killed near Shrewsbury in the Fersys a monstrous large Phanter, the like never seen before in these Parts. Its Legs being thicker than that of a Horse, with a Body proportionable, and the Nails of its Claws longer than the middle Finger of a Man's Hand.

It seems the Indian who killed him was creeping up on the Ground, in order to have a Shot at a Buck, but hearing a rustling of Leaves behind him accidentally saw the Panther a few yards off, just ready to leap upon him he thereupon instantly fires, and luckily, with about 4 or 5 Swan shot, hit him in the Head, and Killed him. The Indian received a considerable Reward for the Service, from the Liberality of the neighbouring People.—The New England Weekly Fournal, February 23, 1730. No. CLIII.

His Excellency's Speech to the General Assembly met at Amboy in New-Jersey, the 7th Day of May, 1730. Gentlemen;

IT is with great Pleasure I meet with this Assembly, because it gives me an Opportunity of convincing you and your Constituents, that I have the Prosperity of New-Jersey sincerely at Heart, and gives you an Occasion of expressing your Loyalty, Fidelity and Gratitude to the best of Kings.

His Majesty, who during the whole Course of his Reign, has shewn a constant and unwearied Care to promote the Ease and Happiness of his Subjects, and a tender Concern for the Well-fare of his remotest Dominions, has commanded me to have a strict Regard for all your Rights and Privileges, and has fully instructed me to concur with you in everything that is for the real Good and Advantage of the Province, particularly the encouraging of your Trade and Manufactures.

He expects on your Part, that you will support his Government by settling upon him a Revenue in as ample a Manner, and for as long a Time as former Assemblies have given it to his Predecessors.

I do earnestly desire you to shew on this Occasion such Temper and Unanimity as is becoming the Representatives of so considerable a People; that will certainly be the most effectual Way of serving your Country, and of recommending your selves to his Majesty's Royal Favour.

Fom Woodbury Creek on the other Side of the River we hear, that on Sunday Night last a Servant Man belonging to one Tateham, got out of Bed about Midnight, and telling a Lad who slept with him that he was going a long Journey and should never see him more, he went into the Orchard and hanged himself on a Tree: But it seems the Rope broke in the Operation, and towards Morning he found himself alive upon the Ground to his no small Surprize. He then went and hid himself in the Barn among some Straw, for several Hours, while his Master and the rest of the Family were searching and enquiring after him to no Effect. At length having procured a better Rope, he hanged himself again in the Barn, and was there accidentally found by the Maid in the Afternoon: When he was cut down there appeared no sign of Life in him, nor were any Means used to recover him; but by that Time the Coroner and his Inquest were got together and come to View his Body, he was upon his Legs again and is now living.—The Pennsylvania Gazette, August 20–27, 1730.

Burlington, Oct 12. Saturday last at Mount-Holly, about 8 Miles from this Place, near 300 People were gathered together to see an Experiment or two tried on some Persons accused of Witchcraft. It seems the Accused had been charged with making their Neighbours Sheep dance in an uncommon Manner, and with causing Hogs to speak, and sing Psalms, &c. to the great Terror and Amazement of the King's good and peaceable Subjects in this Province, and the Accusers being very positive that if the Accused were weighed in Scales against a Bible, the Bible would prove too heavy for them; or that, if they were bound and put into the River, they would swim; the said Accused desirous to make their Innocence appear, voluntarily offered to undergo the said Trials, if 2 of the most violent of their Accusers would be tried with them. Accordingly the Time and Place was agreed on, and advertised about the Country; The Accusers were I Man and I Woman; and the Accused the same. The Parties being met, and the People got together, a grand Consultation was held, before they proceeded to Trial; in which it was agreed to use the Scales first; and a Committee of Men were appointed to search the Men, and a Committee of Women to search the Women, to see if they had any Thing of Weight about them, particularly Pins. After the Scrutiny was over, a huge great Bible belonging to the Justice of the Place was provided, and a Lane through the Populace was made from the Justices House to the Scales, which were fixed on a Gallows erected for that Purpose opposite to the House, that the Justice's Wife and the rest of the Ladies might see the Trial, without coming amongst the Mob; and after the Manner of Moorfields, a large Ring was also made. Then came out of the House a grave tall Man carrying the Holy Writ before the supposed Wizard, &c. (as solemnly as the Sword-bearer of London before the Lord Mayor) the Wizard was first put in the Scale, and over him was read a Chapter out of the Books of Moses, and then the Bible was put in the other Scale, (which being kept down before) was immediately let go; but to great Surprize of the Spectators, Flesh and Bones came down plump, and outweighed that great good Book by abundance. After the same Manner, the others were served, and their Lumps of Mortality severally were too heavy for Moses and all the Prophets and Apostles. This being over, the Accusers and the rest of the Mob, not satisfied with this Experiment, would have the Trial by Water; accordingly a most solemn Procession was made to the Millpond; where both Accused and Accusers being stripp'd (saving only to the Women their Shifts) were bound Hand and Foot, and severally placed in the Water, lengthways, from the Side of a Barge or Flat, having for Security only a Rope about the Middle of each, which was held by some in the Flat. The Accuser Man being thin and spare, with some Difficulty began to sink at last; but the rest every one of them swam very light upon the Water. A Sailor in the Flat jump'd out upon the Back of the Man accused, thinking to drive him down to the Bottom; but the Person bound, without any Help, came up some time before the other. The Woman Accuser, being told that she did not sink, would be duck'd a second Time; when she swam again as light as before. Upon which she declared, That she believed the Accused had bewitched her to make her so light, and that she would be duck'd again a Hundred Times, but she would duck the Devil out of her. The accused Man, being surprized at his own Swimming, was not so confident of his Innocence as before, but said, If I am a Witch, it is more than I know. The more thinking Part of the Spectators were of Opinion, that any Person so bound and plac'd in the Water (unless they were mere Skin and Bones) would swim till their Breath was gone, and their Lungs fill'd with Water. But it being the general Belief of the Populace, that the Womens Shifts, and the Garters with which they were bound help'd to support them; it is said they are to be tried again the next warm Weather, naked.\(^1\)—The Pennsylvania Gazette, October 15-22, 1730.

Our Fathers crost the wide Atlantick Sea,
And blest themselves when in the Desart Free,
And shall their Sons, thro' Treachery or Fear,
Give up that Freedom which has cost so dear!
What-e'er Pretence our Enemies may frame,
The Man is alter'd, but the Cause the same.
From Cæsar's Court should Cato fawning come,
Be sure that Cato is no Friend to Rome.

A stranger passing by, and seeing several Persons read the above Lines, caused him to stop, and having perused the same, he took a piece of Calk, and writ under-neath the Lines following, viz.

Their Fathers crost the wide Atlantick Sea,

To be in Desarts from their Deserts free,
And shall their Sons with glaring Insolence
Support a Cause so void of common Sense?
What-e'er Pretence this stubborn People frame,
The Case is altered, but the Men the same.
From Cæsar's Court should a new Ruler come,
Be sure they'll Starve him, as they've others done.²

To Mr. William Bradford.

Connecticut, December 3.

SIR:

I am a Boston Man by Birth, and meeting with your last Weeks Gazette, I there found a Satyr on the New-England Verses, wrote by a Gentleman passing thro' Perth-Amboy, I reading them, called for Pen, Ink and Paper, and wrote the following Answer to it, and seeing it is Poetry, I write this in his own stile, viz.

Presumptuous Traytor, we can make't appear, It was not Treasons made our Fathers fear, Nor Hal . . . res made them fly for Safety here. But it was cruel Papists, cursed Parts, That made them Venture into wild Desarts, To avoid their Malice and Blood-thirsty Hearts. And having crost the wide Atlantick Sea, And purchas'd dear a perfect Liberty, We'll keep it still, and what is that to thee? Know this, vile Traytor, we have cause to sing, Our Dear-bought Liberty's a precious Thing, Under the Influence of a Gracious King. Great George is Merciful, and well doth us use, Tho' some of us his Mercy hath abus'd, Which we that's Loyal, beg, will be excus'd. Now should a Salary be fixd out-right1 On him that's appointed to guide us Right, Then all our Dear-bought Freedom takes its Flight. Of Liberty, the Jews of Old did sing, When either under High-Priest or a King, Then shall we give up such a precious Thing? Oh no, we're strong, and we'll stand our Defence, Altho you're pleas'd to call it Insolence; This for our Freedom is a good Pretence. -The New-York Gazette, Dec. 5, 1730.

¹ When Governor William Burnet was transferred, in 1728, from the Government of New York and New Jersey to that of Massachusetts he was instructed to insist upon having his salary appropriated for five years in advance. This the General Court refused to do, on the ground that it would thereby part with its independence. The same contest took place in New York and New Jersey.

Richmond, December 8, 1730.

Mr. Bradford:

One who has a just value for the Connecticut Poetry in your Gazette, No. 267, takes Leave to congratulate the Poet on that extraordinary Performance.

Hail happy Man! New-England's genuine Son: For none but such could write as thou hast done. The Heat proceeding from each rattling Line, Despising Muses Aid, to make them shine; Proclaims, thy Breast is warm'd with Hebrew Fire; And Heathen Orpheus, never tun'd thy Lyre: Which makes thy Song (like Musick of the Spheres) So far transcend the Reach of mortal Ears. Ah! Bard sublime! may all thy Saints agree, To act most like themselves, and write like thee.

At a Petty Sessions of the Peace, held for the County of Burlington, at Burlington, the 16th Day of April, 1731. It was consider'd that Fairs generally occasion great Concourse of People, from the most adjacent Places, and that at present it is not meet for keeping the Fair at Burlington, as usual, by reason of the great Mortality in Philadelphia, and other Parts of Pennsylvania, where the Small-Pox now violently Rages: Therefore, to prevent, to the utmost Power of the Justices at the said Sessions, the further spreading of so Epidemical and Dangerous a Distemper, and more especially, for that the approaching Heat of Summer may be more malignant and fatal; it is Ordered that May Fair next be, and is hereby Prohibited to be kept in the said Town of Burlington, and all Persons are hereby strictly required to take Notice hereof accordingly as they will answer for their Contempt at their Peril.—The American Weekly Mercury, April 15-22, 1731.

Monmouth County, New-Fersey, September 2. On Tuesday last an Apprentice of one Robert White in Shrewsbury being Corrected by his Master, went home to his Parents who lived near and told them he would drownd himself, and took his leave of his Father. His Mother went with him to his Masters, by the Way he told her that what he had he would give to her, and informed her of what he had in his Pocket-Book, and some small debts that were due to him. His Mother told him if his Master abused him he should Complain to the Justices and they would discharge him, at which he smiled, signifying that that was not to be compared with his own way of discharging himself. When he came to his Master he threatned that he would beat him the next Morning, to prevent which the Lad rose early the next Morning, took a Rope and a Stone of about sixteen Pound Weight and went out into the River in a Canow and tying one end of the Rope to the Stone and the other with a running nuse about his Neck, jumped Overboard and drownded himself.—The American Weekly Mercury, September 2–9, 1731.

Upper-Freehold, September 7. Yesterday one Thomas Deacon a Servant to Robert Lawrence, and a Boy of about 11 Years of age, coming from Meeting together heard their Dog (who for Fashion sake had been to Meeting) bark very much, sent the Child to see what was the Matter, who running back told him it was two great Bucks fast together by the Horns. The Man with much difficulty Cut both their Throats, their Horns being so lockt together that several have try'd to part them, since both their Heads are cut off, but find it cannot be done without breaking or cuting of them.—The American Weekly Mercury, September 2–9, 1731.

Philadelphia September 9. We hear from Cranberry in the County of Middlesex in New Jersey, that one Daniel Parine¹ taking his Gun down (that his Brother had charg'd, unknown to him) and striking the Flint with his Knife in order to sharpen it, the Powder took Fire and the Gun went off and shot his Wife with a Bullet and seven Swan shot just above the Hip Bone. The Force of the Shot was deadned by her Quilt Petticoat so that the Bullet and Wadd was taken out but an Inch in the Flesh near her Back. Her Life was at first dispaired of she being with Child and near her Time; but it is now

This is to inform Mr. Richard Wright, of the Kingdom of Ireland, who lately kept a School at Perth-Amboy, that his Brother Joseph Wright is arrived in these Parts, and having made diligent Enquiry after him, cannot learn whither he has removed: If the said Richard Wright will send an Account thereof to the Printer of this Paper, his Brother may hear of him, and they may have a Meeting.—The Pennsylvania Gazette, September 30 to October 7, 1731.

We hear from Hopewell in the Jerseys, that on the 4th past, two Bucks were observed fighting near the new Meeting-House there; one of them extraordinary large, supposed to be a Roe-buck; the other small and of the common sort. In company with them was a black Doe, who stood by to see the Engagement. The small Buck proved a full match for the great one, giving him many violent Punches in the Ribs, but in the height of the Battle, they fastned their Horns so strongly together, that they were not able with all their Strength to disengage; and in that condition they were taken. The Doe retreated into the Woods, but being pursued with several Beagle Hounds, she was taken also alive, and they have put her and the large Buck into a boarded Pasture together, in hopes to have a Breed, if the Sizes are Philadelphia, Dec. 2. We hear from the other side of the River, that a few Days ago, a House about 4 Miles back of Benjamin Wood's was burnt down to the Ground. The Man was abroad at Labour, and the Woman gone to borrow a Sieve at a House about a quarter of a Mile distant; she left two young Children playing at the Door, and a third, the youngest, lying on the Bed: when she was returning, to her great Surprize she saw the House on fire, and ran to call her Husband; who came home with her, but too late to save anything, tho' they could see all their three Children at the Bed surrounded by the Flames, and by no means to be deliver'd. 'Tis thought the two went in to fetch the youngest. A Bitch which had two Puppies, carried one of them out of the House, and 'tis suppos'd she endeavoured to fetch the other out also, her Hair being much singed.—The Boston Weekly News-Letter, Dec. 23–30, 1731.

New-York, Dec. 7. We hear from Crosswicks in West-New-Jersey, that some time ago two Brothers quarrelling the one bit off the other's Ear. It is supposed they had been too free with Liquor.—The Boston Weekly News-Letter, Dec. 30, 1731, to Jan. 6, 1732.

¹Philadelphia, Jan. 19.

The following is a Speech of an Indian King, named Oppekhorsa, who died lately in the Jersey's, spoken just before his Death to his Successor. The Gentleman, who by Letter communicated this to us, makes the following Remarks thereon.

"You will therein find a true Greatness of Soul "worthy of a King, and a deep Sense of unshaken "Honesty, & a Humility which even Christians "might boast of, with many other Beauties of Sense, "couch'd under strong Rhetorical Figures, dictated "by pure Reason, and simple Nature alone."

The Speech

My Brother's Son.

This day I deliver my Heart into thy Bosom, and would have thee love that which is good and keep good Company, and to refuse that which is Evil, and to avoid bad Company—

Now, in as much as I have deliver'd my Heart into thy Bosom, I also deliver my Bosom to keep my Heart therein; therefore always be sure to walk in a good Path, and never depart out of it; and if any Indians should speak any Evil of Indians or Christians, do not joyn with it, but look to that which is good, and joyn with the same always: Look at the Sun from the Rising of it, to the setting of the same. In Speeches that shall be made between the Indians and the Christians, if any thing be spoke that is Evil, do not joyn with that, but with that which is good. And when Speeches are made, do not thou speak first, but let all speak before thee, and take good Notice what each Man speaks, and when thou hast heard all, joyn with that which is good.

Brother's Son.

I would have thee to cleanse thy Ears, and take all Darkness and Foulness out, that thou may'st take Notice of that which is Good and Evil, and then to joyn with that which is Good, and refuse the Evil, and also to cleanse thine Eyes that thou may'st see both Good and Evil, and if thou see any Evil, do not joyn with it, but joyn to that which is good.

Brother's Son

Thou hast heard all that is past, now I would have thee to stand up (he means by standing up to be resolute) in Time of Speeches, and to stand in my Steps, and to follow my Speeches, which I have said before thee, then what thou do'st desire in Reason will be granted thee. Why should'st thou not follow my Example in as much as I have had a Mind to that which is good, therefore do thou also the same. Whereas, my son Sheoppy and Swampis, were appointed Kings in my stead, and I understand by my Doctor, that Sheoppy, secretly advis'd him not to cure me, and they both being with me at John Hollingshead's House, there I myself saw by them, that they were more given to Drink, than to take Notice of my last Words, having then had a Mind to make a Speech to them, and to my Brethren the English Commissioners, therefore, I have refused them to be Kings after me in my stead, and have Chosen Thee Oppekhorsa my Brother's Son, to be King in their stead to succeed me.

Brother's Son, I desire thee to be plain and fair with all both Indians and Christians as I have been, I am very weak, otherwise I would have spoken more.

Extract of a Letter from Trentown, dated August 11, 1732.

On Wednesday last about 12 o'Clock, a sudden Clap of Thunder struck on the House of Ebenezer Prout near this Place; he was setting at the Front Door and one William Pearson at his right Hand, his only Son a Boy about 9 Years old, who stood within 3 Foot of them with his back towards the Door, was struck down dead, the hair of his Head burnt off close, his Jacket, Shirt and Breeches were torn all to pieces, but no part of his Body touched. The Posts of the House were split, the Rafters shattered as small as you can imagine. The Woman of the House being in the new Room (where the Thunder did the greatest Execution) was so much hurt that we despair of her Life, her youngest Daughter is in the same condition, William Pearson is much hurt but like to recover. The Man of the House is not hurt. The Boy was buried yesterday.

Philadelphia. We hear from Brunswick upon Rariton River, that at the breaking up of the Ice a vast deal of Damage was done at the Ferry there, the Fresh occasioning such an Inundation that whole Barns and Warehouses were born down and carried away, and much Wheat, Flower, Beef and Pork lost. The Water was many Feet high in the Dwelling-Houses at the Landing; but we hear of nobody drowned.

The Assembly of the Jerseys is farther prorogu'd till the Twentieth of next Month.—The Pennsylvania Gazette, Feb. 22–28, 1732–3.

Philadelphia, Feb. 27. We have these further Accounts of the Damages done by the Freshes & Ice, at New-Brunswick the Water was all over the City, and has damag'd abundance of Wheat, carried away a Barn, the Ice turn'd a House quite round, undermined the House of Wm Cox, carry'd away Mr. Antil's Barn, Stable & Hay, together with several Hogs, Turkies & Fowls, likewise carried away a large quantity of Wheat & Salt.

We likewise hear that the Freshes have done much Damage at Trentown, that it carried away the Dam of the Iron-Work, & the Dam of the Grist Mill, Bridge, & Dying-House, with a large Copper was carried down the Stream, & abundance of other Damage. There was a Horse drowned lately with a Cloth Side-Saddle, and we hear the Woman is since taken up at Glocester, but can't learn as yet who she is.

New York, Febr. 27. Last Week there was a great Flood in Rariton River, in New Fersey, which did a great deal of Damage: It carried away three Barns with Corn & Cattle in them. At New-Brunswick it broke several Store-houses & Wharffs, and quite destroyed Mr. Hude's Store-house, with near 3000 Bushels of Wheat in it, & other Damage.

Philadelphia, Fuly 26. We hear from Cape May that last week the Bodies of three Men drove ashore there, one of them had good Cloaths on, Gold Buttons in his Shirt sleeves, two Gold Rings on his Finger, a Watch and some pieces of Gold in his Pocket, and Silver Buckles in his Shoes, but was shot thro' the Head, the other two had their Heads cut off. About the same time a small Sloop drove on shore about 15 Miles to the Northward of the Cape, but it is not known who she or the Men are. We also hear that a Brigentine sailed up our Bay as far as Bombay Hook, then tacked about and stood to Sea. Some think it was the Brigentine bound from Bristol with a number of Convicts, and that they have mutined, and Murdered the Master and Men. We expect a more particular Account of this barbarous Murder in a few days.—The New-York Gazette, Fuly 30, 1733.

We have Advice from New York of the 21st of January last. That in Summerset County in East New Jersey, on Raritan River, there has lately been a Conspiracy among the Negroes there, to Murder the English, and to assemble together in a Body, and make their Escape to settle themselves in some new Country. About 30 of the Conspirators have been apprehended, one of them hang'd, some had their Ears cut off, and others were whipt. Several of them had Poison found about them.—The Weekly Rehearsal, Feb. 11, 1734.

THE Lands settled in two Plantations belonging to Mr. Henry Neal, lying and being near Rockyhill, in the County of Somerset and Province of New-Fersey, containing about Nine hundred Acres of very good Land well Watered with several Brooks running through the same, convenient to set Mills thereon, with Buildings of House and Barnes, three Orchards about Four hundred Acres of very good Land cleared, and in good Fence, very good Meadowground for Grass already clear'd, and much more may be clear'd. To be sold very reasonable the whole and entire Quantity, or otherways separated and in Part by his Attorneys, having a good sufficient Power to sell the same, with the Assurance of an undisputable Title. And for Information, enquire of Samuel Hasel Merchant, in Philadelphia, or Mr. Benjamin Clark jun. at Stony-brook, and Mr. John Stevens, living at Rockyhill.—The New-York Gazette, Feb. 11, 1734.

New-York. We are inform'd, that about the beginning of last Month Mr. Thomas Wood belonging to New-Jersey rode thro' New-London seemingly in perfect health, but when he had got a few Miles from that town, was taken with a numb Palsey, and fell from his Horse, he was taken up and carried into House, and all possible care taken of him, he lived about two Weeks without speaking one word, and then dyed.—The New-York Gazette, Feb. 25, 1734.

These are to give Notice that there is to be Sold a Propriety Right to take up about 600 Acres of Land in the Western-Division, of New-Jersey, which has been inspected and approv'd by the Council of Proprietors, and a warrant issued to lay out the same; any Person inclin'd to purchase, may apply to Samuel Bustill at Burlington, and be satisfied as to all further particulars concerning the said Right.—The Pennsylvania Gazette, Feb. 27 to March 6, 1733-4.

Mr. Bradford;

THE Letter from Burlington printed in Franklin's Gazette, insinuating that the late rising of the Negroes in the Eastern-Division of New-Fersey, was occasioned by the Papers lately published in the Neighbouring Province, the Authors of which he is very free with. I having been present at some of the Examinations of those Negroes, think it necessary to give the best account thereof I can, in order to warn all Masters of Negroes not to be too careless of their own Safety, with respect to their Slaves, which now begin to be Numerous, and in some of our Colonies too much indulged, and by some particular Persons rather encouraged in their Vices, than put under a due Regulation and Subjection. It appear'd upon Examination, that Coll. Thomas L-d keeps at some Miles distance from his dwelling House, Negro-Quarters (as they are called) who provide for themselves, which Quarters have been a Randevouze for the Negroes, and proved a Pest to the Neighbourhood, by encouraging the Neighbours Negroes to steal from their Masters both Beef, Pork, Wheat, Fowles, &c., where with they feast and junket at those Quarters, and at times have met in great Companies. It was at one of these Meetings their design of Rising was agreed and some time since fully resolved on by some hundreds of them, but kept so private amongst themselves, that there was not the least appearance or suspicion of it, till the Negro of one Hall at Rariton having drank too much, accosted one Renolds on the Road, and told him, The English-men were generally a pack of Villains, and kept the Negroes as Slaves, contrary to a positive Order from King George, sent to the G-1 of New-York, to set them all free, which the said G—aid intend to do, but was prevented by his C-2 and A-3 and that was the reason there now subsisted so great a difference between the G— and the People, &c. Rennels was surprized at the freedom and Independence of this Fellow, & told him, he was a great Raskel to talk in that manner: The Negro answered, That he was as good a Man as himself, and that in a little Time he should be convinced of it.

This was the first occasion of Suspicion of a Negro Plot. And upon Rennel's Information of what this Fellow had said, he & another Negro was taken up, Tryed, Condemned, and one Hang'd; Hall's Negro made his escape, and is not yet taken. Upon this Examination and Tryal it appeared, that the Design of these Negroes was this, That so soon as the Season was advanced that they could lie in the Woods, one certain Night was agreed on, that every

Negro in each Family was to Rise at Midnight, Cut the Throats of their Masters and Sons, but not meddle with the Women, whom they intended to Plunder and Ravish the day following, and then set all their Houses and Barns on Fire, Kill all the Draught Horses, and secure the best Saddle Horses for their flight towards the Indians in the French Interest

How easie this Design might have been put in Practice, if it had not been discovered, I leave every one to judge, and how very necessary it is for every Colony to make proper Laws and Ordinances for their own Security, and against the Attemps of these barbarous Monsters (by some so much indulged.) I would also have each and every one of us to remember, and not forget the great Calamity and Disolation there was in the City of New-York some years since, by the Negros rising there, and murdering many good innocent People, and had it not been for his Majesty's Garrison there, that City (in all likelihood) had been reduced to Ashes, and the greatest part of the Inhabitants Murdered. The late Massacre perpetrated by the Negros in the Island of St. John's, the very great head they are come to in the Island of Jamaica, and the general Melancholy Apprehensions of his Majesty's Subjects in the West-Indies, gives but too much room to fear there is some great Fatality attends the English Dominion in America, from the too great Number of that unchristian and barbarous People being imported, and then by some too much indulged in their Vices.—The New-York Gazette, March 25, 1734.

The House, Stable and Garden of Benjamin Hill in Elizabeth Town in New-Jersey, is to be Let from year to year, or for a term of years. It is a very convenient place for a Trades-man or a Shop-Keeper. Whoever inclines to Hire the same, may apply to said Benjamin Hill, now living in the said House, and know further.—The New-York Gazette, March 25, 1734.

To be Sold or Let by Catherine Lyell, Widow.

The Plantation on where she now lives, containing three hundred Acres, with about forty Acres of good Salt Meadow, well ditched, and in good Fence, two Orchards & Gardens, a good Dwelling-house and Store-house, pleasantly situated on a Navigable Creek, very convenient for Trade, called and known by the name of Middletown-Point in the County of Monmouth, New-Jersey.—The New-York Gazette, March 25, 1734.

To be sold by Philip Ringo, a Stone House and Lott, containing Three Quarters of an Acre of Land or there about; also another Lott of Land with an Orchard, containing about Nine Acres, both which Lotts are scituated in Trenton in New-Jersey. Whoever inclines to purchase the same, or any of them, may apply the aforesaid Philip Ringo in Amwell, or Cornelius Ringo in Trenton, and know the Terms of Sale.

An Extract of a private Letter from Elizabeth Town' in East-Jersey April 1st 1724.

On Saturday 29th of March, was here inter'd the Body of Peter Sonmans, Esq; Chief Proprietor of East New-Jersey. He was Son to Arents Sonmans, late one of the States of Holland, which Government after having finished his Study at Lyden, he quitted and came to England, where he had the Honour to hold some considerable Offices under his late Majesty King William 1705. Coming a second Time into this Country where he had so considerable an Interest, He was appointed one of her late Majesty's Hon. Council Agent to the Proprietors Surveyor-General, General Receiver of the Quit-Rents and Ranger of the Forests, as well as Sea-Coast, he was in two succeeding Elections Chose Representative for the County of Bergain, in which Station he Manifested himself a true Patriarch to his Country.

He was justly esteem'd for his Charity, and Clemency, his sincerity in Friendship, Patience in Oppressions and undaunted Spirit in Dangers, manifested his just Merit of the Motto of his Arms. Patientia es Fido. — — In Angustis intrepidus, much more could be said but for Brevity Sake is omitted.—The American Weekly Mercury, March 28 to April 11, 1734.

Custom House, Newport, April 4. Cleared out, Ogden for Amboy.—The Weekly Rehearsal, April 8, 1734.

Our Readers may remember, that some Time since (Feb. 11). we gave them an Account of a Conspiracy form'd among the Negros in East New Jersey, to murder the English, &c. and having now received a more perfect Account of that horrid Undertaking, with the Manner of its Discovery, we cannot but think the publishing of it at this Time, will be of great Service to the Country in general, but especially to the Town of Boston, if we are wise enough to take the Hints therein given, and in Time provide for our Safety.

[From the American Weekly Mercury, March 5, 1733-4.]

As I have been present at some of the Examinations of those Negros, I thought it necessary to give the best account I can thereof, to warn all Communities not to be too careless of their Safety, with respect to those intestine and inhuman Enemies, who are in some Colonies but too much indulged, and by some particular Persons rather encouraged in their Vices, than put under a due and necessary Subjection. It appear'd upon the Examination, that one Thomas L— d Keeps at some Miles distance from his own House, Negro Quarters, who provide for themselves, and have been a pest to the Neighbourhood, by encouraging the Neighbours Negros to steal from their Masters both Beef, Pork, Wheat, Corn, Cloaths, &c. wherewith they junket at those Quarters, and at Times have met in great Companies; it was at one of those meetings their Designs were perpetrated, and, tho' some time since concluded and fully resolved on by some Hundreds of them, it was kept so secret, that there was never the least Appearance or Suspicion of it, until the Negro of one Hall having Drank

This was the first Occasion of Suspicion, and upon Rennald's Information the Fellow was taken up, with another, and both Try'd, Condemn'd, and one Hang'd. Hall's Negro made his escape and is not yet taken. The Design was this, that so soon as the Season was advanced that they could lay in the Woods, one certain Night was agreed on, that every Negro and Negres in every Family was to rise at Midnight, cut the Throats of their Masters and Sons, but not meddle with the Women, whom they intended to plunder and ravish the Day following, and then set all their Houses and Barns on Fire, kill the draught Horses, and secure the best Saddle Horses, for their flight immediately towards the Indians in the French Interest. How easy this might have been put in Practice, I leave every one to judge, and how necessary it is for every Colony to enact proper Laws and Ordinances for their Security, against the attempts of those Monsters (by some particular People so much indulged) I also leave to each and all of them to consider, that they may not be the occasion of bringing so great a Calamity and Desolation to pass: Every reasonable Man ought to remember their first villanous Attempt at New-York, and how many good innocent People were murdered by them, and had it not been for the Garrison there, that City would have been reduced to Ashes, and the greatest Part of the Inhabitants murdered. Their late Massacree on the Island of St. Folins, the very great head they are come to in the Island of Jamaica, and the general melancholy Apprehensions of his Majesty's Subjects in the Islands in the West-Indies, gives but too much room to believe there is some Fatallity attending the English Dominion in America, from the too great Numbers of those unchristian People.—The Weekly Rehearsal, April 8, 1734. No. 132.

These are to give Notice, That Arthur Brown now plyes in a Boat betwixt New-York and South River in New Jersey. Pompton, Sept. 3. A few Days agoe an Indian arrived here from Pechachquelly, who gives an Account that some Time since several Indians had seiz'd a Boy belonging to Solomon Jennings, supposed to be the noted Outlaw, whom they stript and whipt with Hickery Switches - Solomon being then on his Return homewards, and hearing the Boy lament, hasted to rescue him, and in his Way got a Stick of Wood somewhat like a Handspike, with which he assaulted the Indians, and struck one of them on the Forehead so that he split his Scull, and the Indian died on the Spot. Another of the Indians made at Solomon with a Knife, and job'd him in the Side under his Ribs, and another job'd a Knife into the upper Part of his Shoulder, upon which Solomon took to his Heels; for he perceived one of the Indians running towards his Gun; He had not [gone] far before the Indian shot at him running, the Bullet graz'd along his Neck and under Jaw, and took off the Skin all the Way. He escap'd, though very narrowly.—The New-York Weekly Fournal, Sept. 9, 1734.

I Have received a Letter from a Jersie Correspondent, and as it is very long I now give you Part of it, and shall continue it till it is finished.

Yours, J. P. Zenger.

Middle-Town, New-Fersey, Aug. 16. 1734. Mr. Zenger;

IT is with Pleasure that we read those of your Journals that give an Account of the Behaviour of the Grand Juries of New-York; tho' few men were at a loss to guess, who was the execrable Author of a most execrable Letter, found in the Entry of the House of Fames Alexander, Esq; and tho' the Grand Jury after examining of the matter, as I believe, were in no manner of Doubt concerning him, yet they prudently forbore the presenting of him upon the Evidence of a Similitude of Hands; believing, any Person capable of endeavouring to disguise his own for so vile a Purpose, was not incapable of Forging any Body's Hand for any villainous Purpose that was most suitable to gratify both his own and the Resentments of others, who have not too much Goodness to omit any favorable Opportunity that offers for that End.

I am told (and I hope it is true) that notwithstanding the low Condescensions made by many of Feasting, to gain a Party, very few have been prevailed on to quit the Side of Liberty for a Bitt of Bread or Glass of Wine, and that the greatest Part even of those few, are ashamed of what they have done and honestly own, they were deceived and misled into the Signing of a Paper which, it now seems plain to them, would be attended with other Consequences (should it meet with Credit) than what they who signed it understood was meant and intended by it, and their Signing (tho' imprudent) they hope will not be said to be Criminal.

A late fulsome Address to a Plantation Gövernour published in the White Hall Evening Post, is not the only instance of what some men are capable of doing, and tho' I believe hardly any thing will totally deter such men from Signing any Thing they are commanded or desired to do, yet as I am pretty well assured they have the mortification to be informed, what are the Sentiments of Folks on the other Side of the Water concerning it, and them, I believe they will be a little more cautious for the future.

I forebear saying any Thing at this Time concerning a Letter wrote to a great Minister of State, making a bungling Defence, or rather Excuse, for some very ill Conduct because I believe the Writers are not now to know they have met with as little Credit, and almost as much Disgrace as they deserve, but all in good Time.

Two late Tryals in your Supream Court, have exposed one great man of many Offices to the world in a strong Light; and yet it is thought, that the continuance of him in the Execution of those Offices is by no means any Reflection on the publick Administration there, but on the contrary, An argument of Wisdom and Prudence, or at least of Mildness and good Nature, for which there may be Reasons that the lower Part of the World are entirely strangers to. If I am rightly informed two late Grand Juries have not Entertained so favorable an Opinion of him, but by the Light they received first from one, and secondly from the last of these two tryals, behaved themselves with a Justice Honesty, and Courage, suitable to the Stations in which they stood; nay I am told that the last behaved themselves with such an Honest Boldness and Bravery, as deserves the Thanks of their Country. We here are Strangers to their Persons, and unacquainted with their Names, I pray that in your next you would let us know their Names, and those Members of the Courts to whom they made Application, that just notice may be taken of both, who I doubt not in Time will receive Rewards suitable to their Merits, and be treated by Posterity as they both deserve: There is a Saying, That Laws may sometimes sleep, but never die.

After the honest and bold Jurors that have appeared in New-York, give me leave Mr. Zenger, to say something of honest Harry Beekman, the late Sheriff: I know he was by many thought a Tool in the Hands of some who would not fail to make a proper Use of him; and I confess I was not without my Suspicions of him; but his Conduct has shewn that those Suspicions were without Ground, for the Juries that have been summoned by him, both Grand and Petty, shew that he has behaved himself like an honest and impartial Man, and I doubt not his future Conduct will more and more shew, that he is really the honest Man we suppose him to be; and I hope his Successor, John Henderick Symes will (for his own sake) by the like impartial Behaviour preserve the fair Character he is now possessed of.

We have heard it confidently reported here that your Attorney-General has formerly been so very zealous to bring some supposed Criminals to Justice, that when Grand Juries have declined finding Bills given to them against such Criminals, he has thought it for His Majesty's Service to have them prosecuted by Information, whether the reports be true or not, with his relation to his late Conduct in a Presentment made by the Grand Jury of the Honourable Francis Hanson Esq; is what I can't at this Distance determine, but if it be, I am told by those who have the Honour to be well acquainted with Mr. Attorney, that no regard he now has or ever had for Mr. Hanson, could influence him to decline the Prosecution of him, and if he did decline such Prosecution, he must have done it for good and sufficient Reasons, which he is under no obligation to declare till they are demanded in a proper Manner, and by a competent Authority for that Purpose, to whom that Enquiry ought to be left.

Chief Justice who had no such order from the King communicated to him by the Governour nor entered in the Council Books, apprehending some Danger might arise to the Sheriff, convinced him it was necessary for him to retake her into his Custody, where she is said, still to remain. How far this account is true, or how these great Officers will settle this point between them I won't pretend to determine; but I am told the particulars are sent to Mr. Zenger, and we wait with Impatience till they are made publick— The Attorney General is not only a great and necessary Officer for the King, but very useful for the Subject while he strictly and impartially pursues the duty of his Office. He is in England by his Patent to be during his good Behaviour 4 Inst. 117. He seldom meddles in England with the forming indictments but in very considerable Cases, where more than ordinary Judgment is required, that being the Business of the Clerk of the Peace who is to be paid for doing of it, and is lyable to pay 5l. if he does it ill: and whether the refusing to do it, be not a Forfeiture of his Office, or if it be the Business of the Attorney General (of His) may be a question that I shall not at present determine but a resolute Grand Jury may, if they please, find out a way to get it determined if ever such a Ouestion or Doubt should arise; for I cannot easily persuade myself to believe that it is in the Power of an Attorney General, or any other Officer to stop a criminal Prosecution, without particular Orders from the King or his Representative for so doing, and then appearing to be founded on good Reason, the King can indeed pardon all Offences, and the Governour many, but whoever pleads a pardon acknowledges himself guilty of the Offence thereby pardoned and it is not of such Stopping that I would be understood. The King is indeed the Fountain of Mercy, and may extend it when he pleases to those he thinks the proper Objects of it, but he is also the Fountain of Justice, in which his subjects are all concerned and he cannot be supposed to give the least countenance to the stopping or unnecessary Delay of a Prosecution in Order to convict a Criminal, this would be a Stopping the Current of the Publick Justice, and prevent the Exercising of His Mercy, the brightest of his Prerogatives; and should it be in the Power of His Inferiour Officers to stop or delay or make up such at their Pleasure, there would be an End of the publick Justice and Governments, the Protection of the Laws must cease, and the Friends of such Officers might do what they pleased with Impunity, and no one could be safe.

An Attorney General is not only supposed to be a Lawyer but one of the most considerable of the Profession. My Lord Clarendon in Vol. 1. p. 157 of his History says, that by the Constitution of the Kingdom, and constant Practice, all Bills that had passed both Houses were delivered by the Clerk of the Parliament to the Clerk of the Crown and by him to the Attorney General who presented the same to the King sitting in Council; and, having read them, declared what alterations were made by them to former Laws, and what Benefit or Detriment in Profit and Jurisdiction would thereby accrue to the Crown; and then upon a full Debate of these matters in Council, the King resolved upon what Bills were to be enacted into Laws, and respited the others that He did not think fit to consent to. As this has been the known Practice, so the Reason is visible says the noble Historian; for the Royal assent being a distinct and Essential Part towards the making of a Law, there should be as much Care taken to inform the Understanding and Conscience of the King upon these Occasions, as theirs who prepare the same for the Royal Assent-, Thus far Clarendon,—The Governours Assent to Laws here is by the Kings Letter Patent as Essential, and as distinct from the Assent of the Assembly and Council, as that of the King is from the Assent of the Lords and Commons; and I suppose it is as much the Duty of the Attorney General here, when Bills are passed by the Council and Assembly, to inform the Governour's Understanding and Conscience on the Heads above, as it is of the Attorney in England; and to declare what Bills are alterative of former Laws, introductive of New, or declarative of the common Law, and what Benefit or Detriment in Profit and Jurisdiction would by them accrue to the Crown, requires a Person of great Abilities and Learning in the Law, and who cannot be ignorant (in most if not all cases) of what the Law is. But great and learned as he is, yet he is not the King, [and] must know, that if any Person under Condemnation for Murder or Treason, is reprieved till the King's Pleasure is known, it must be the King's Pleasure and only the King's, and not the Attorney Generals, that can discharge him.—Nor can a Person of his Learning in the Law be ignorant, the Pardoning of Murder and Treason (without which no person under Condemnation for those Crimes can be set at Liberty) is a Prerogative solely and inseperably annexed to the Person of the King: And should an Attorney General take upon himself to King it by ordering such a Criminal to be set at Liberty, or do any other Regal Act which the King only can do (whatever sentiments it might create in an ignorant People of the Attorneys Power) a Man of his Learning must know, that by such an act he went much beyond the Limits of it. And that in him, it can never be deemed a Sin of Ignorance.—And in such Case should a Grand Jury take upon themselves to present the fact, (as they may, if not must) no Man can be better acquainted than such an Officer whether it is the King's Justice, or his Mercy that is most fit to be applied to

I am but a poor Country Man, and know little of Law, but what I hear from our Attornies now and then at the Court, but some time after the Reading the above Paragraph in Lord Clarendon's History, I conceived a mighty Opinion of the Attorney General's Learning and Ability tho' before that, I thought I had heard many other common Attornies speak as pertinently to the Purpose as he. And I believing that the Attorney General of Fersie was as much to inform the Understanding of the Governour with Respect to Bills passed by the Council and Assembly, in order to have His distinct and Essential Assent as the Attorney General in England was to inform the King's, could not help thinking that our Laws being to be remark'd on by so learned a Man must be excellently well digested but at the same Time, I could not conceive how this could be, or what Council was to debate these Matters, if it was not the same Council that had before passed the Bill. I, upon this apply'd to one of the Members of our Council to inform me what the Method was of passing Bills in the Council. We were then at the Secretary's Office and the Secretary produced the Minutes of Council concerning the Reading and Passing of Bills; in which the Governour was always mentioned as one. I then asked whether the Governour voted? He said, yes if it came to a Casting Vote. I asked if that was the distinct Essential Vote that made the Bill a Law? He said, it was not, for that the Governour haa by the King's Fatent a negative Voice to all Laws and that he might refuse that very Bill into a Law. This made the Matter still more dark to me; For first, I thought it very unlikely that the Governor in his gubernatorial Capacity, should refuse His essential Assent to a Bill which His distinct (tho' I think not essential) Vote in His Counselatorial Capacity made a Bill fit for such essential Assent, and which had not been a Bill without it. Secondly, I could not conceive by what Rule of Grammer or Common Sense one distinct Essential Negative Vote, given by the King's Patent to the Governour as such could be construed to be two distinct Votes; one as a Governour, to refuse Bills or assent to them and by that Assent Enact them into Laws; and another as a Concellor to Consent to or reject the very Bills themselves: Nor how a Governour with any Propriety of Speech can be said to be a Councellor to Himself or a Councellor to prepare Bills for his own Assent; these Things appear to me so manifestly absurd: in order to get more Light in this knotty Affair, if I could, I asked whether the King sat and voted as a Lord in the House of Lords in England. No replyd the Councellor, that can't be; for the House of Lords are called the House of Peers (that is equal) and the King as King or being King which is Superior cannot sit and vote as a Peer: Besides such Voting sayd he (as I take it) would be a breaking in upon and Altering the Constitution itself by (in a manner) excluding the Lord's from their Share in Legislation. Says a Lawyer then present: -Sir, if great things may be compared with small, I cannot see where the Difference is between the Governour's Voting in Council, and the King's Voting in the House of Lords; and why it is not an Altering of the Constitution here, as well as there, and an Excluding of the Council from their Share of Legislation? For the Governour is the King's Representative and when Bills are tassed by both Parts of the Legislature, and layd before him, He has a Power given him by the King's Patent to Assent or dissent to them: And if to inform his Understanding he makes Use of the Attorney General (who I take to be chiefly constituted for that Purpose) and calls a Council, or other learned Men, and freely and fully debates the Matters observed by the Attorney General, he then truly represents the King, and in the Manner the King intended he should: But to sit at the Head of the Council, and to Act and Vote as a Counsellor in passing of Bills for his own Assent, he cannot be said by any Propriety of Speech or Law, in that Case, to represent the King who never did nor could do so, but rather to represent the Speaker of the House of Lords which is inconsistent of his Character Of the King's Representative, and below it: And he must be a much better Lawyer than I am, that can show what Way such a Conduct is warranted by the King's Letter Patent, or by the Law. -Every Body knows that our Legislature consists of three Parts, to wit, the Governour, representing the King, and distinct from the Council and Assembly, the Council not representing but resembling the House of Lords, and the General Assembly representing the People of this Province: And not of the Governour distinct from the Council and Assembly, the same Governour joyn'd with the Council and acting as a Councellor, and the General Assembly. Neither doth it consist of two Parts, to wit, the Governour and Council without the Assembly; nor of the Governour and Assembly without the Council, nor of the Council and Assembly without the Governour: but of three distinct Parts, the Consent of each of which is absolutely necessary to every Law binding upon the Subject: And consequently Laws made by any two of the three Parts without the Consent of the other Cannot be binding: And how Laws made by any number of men, not the true Constituent Parts of the Legislature, can be binding is what I do not see.—Sir, said the Councellor you seem to infer mighty Matters from the Governor's Sitting and voting in Council, when I can assure you it is but seldom or rarely done. And this several Gentlemen of the Council as well as myself can testify:

And I never heard the Governor's Sitting there opposed unless by Mr. Morris who told Governour Burnet, he had no right to sit and Act there; but being not effectually seconded the Matter dropt— I pray Sir (says the Lawyer) a great Deference to what you say but can you tell, how I or any Body else shall be able to distinguish between the Bills he gave his Vote on, and those he did not, since it appears by the Messages and Minutes of Council, I think & on the Back of all original Bills, that the Governour is there named as present and one of the Parties constituting the Council; and therefore by Construction of Law, acting in it, and giving his Voice for or against every Bill brought there: This is a Matter of Record and of the highest Kind against which any Thing that you or your Brethren can say or even swear will not be admitted of sufficient Credit even while you are alive, much less after you are dead, in Case the Validity of any of our Laws should be disputed on that Head.—As it appears by Matter of Record that our Governors have acted and Voted as Councellers in the Passing of all our Laws, so it appears to be not only possible but very Probable that many of our Bills have been either rejected, not passed or made Bills by his single Vote, which would not otherwise have been so: For first whenever a Casting Vote is supposed, whether it be for the third Reading, Passing or Rejecting any Bill, the Council must be supposed to be equally divided and then that casting Vote causes that Bill to be read a third Time which otherwise would not have a third Reading; Passes a Bill which otherwise would not have been passed; or rejects a bill which otherwise would not have been rejected by the Council. So that in such Case, if the Bills voted a third Reading, or to pass, are afterwards passed by the Governour, and enacted there are Laws enacted which had not the Consent of the Council, which is one of the Branches of the Legislature to enact them, but only of the Governour and Assembly: and also bills rejected which were not agreed to be rejected by the Council but rejected by the Governor before (and not after) they had passed the Council it being only after a Bill has passed both Parts of the Legislature that the Governour has a negative Voice, and not before. Also many odd number of the Council as 5, 7, 9, 11, when 3, 4, 5, or 6, vote for the Rejecting any bill the Governour joyning with the smaller number of 2, 3, 4, or 5, may sustain such a bill, and by the coming of an absent member, procure it to be passed, and afterwards assent to the Enacting of it: So that at this Rate we may have a bill enacted into a Law, not only without the consent of one of the Branches of the Legislature, but a bill that has been actually rejected by it. What is said of Bills may be sayd of Enacting Clauses in Bills; and there is no Case when the Council can carry any Thing in Council either with Respect to the Passing or Rejecting a Bill, or Enacting Clauses, if the Governor be against it, unless there be a Majority of at least two Persons. On the contrary they may be divided in such Manner that it may be in the Power of the Governour not only to sustain Bills they would reject, but to pass those they actually have rejected and impose them on the People as Laws. If this is not a breach upon the Constitution and excluding the Council from their Share of Legislation, I am at a loss to know what is: and how far Laws so made ought to be, or can be binding upon the Subject, requires no great Penetration to discover.

Pray (says the Councellor very gravely) if a Nullity of Laws is to be inferred from the Governours voting in Council, what will become of the Support of Government? Our Governours (its said) have always done so, and believe they do so in the Neighboring Governments of York and Pensilvania Etc, and I never heard that the Councils (whose Business it was) either there or here, ever opposed the Governours Sitting and Acting in Council: And, Sir, do you consider the dangerous Consequence of a Nullity of Laws? The Support of Government, answered the Lawyer is but temporary, and in a little Time will expire by its own Limitation: But were it perpetual, I cant understand how a Government is supported by breaking the Constitution of it; that seems a Contradiction in Terms, and like Shoaring up a House by pulling of it down. But if you mean by the Support of the Government, the Support of the Governour and of your Officers I see no Reason why that should be at the Expence of the Constitution, and Burdens laid upon the Subject in a manner not warranted by Law; when it can be done with as much Ease the Right Way.—The Council (it is true) are more immediately concerned in Opposing this Voting, because the Indignity is more immediately offered to them: But why the Assembly should not be as much concerned in supporting the Constitution and defending any Attack made upon it, I cannot see; since the People they represent are in General I see the Journals of the Assembly lying there, search them, you will find an Assembly remonstrating against the mad Practices of a Governor and the vile Implements of his Oppresion; Upon which he was recalled. Look a little farther, and under the Administration of General Hunter (who was a Man as tenacious of Power and knew as well how to use it as most Men) you will find the Assembly sending their Bills up to the Council and in particular to the President of the Council: All this he admitted and never once attempted to dispossess the Messengers that brought them, on the Pretence that they ought to have been delivered to him: If he had; That Assembly consisting of Members who had no private left-Handed Views, were not so weak and low Spirited as to suffer such an Attempt to pass without Remarking in a Manner suitable to the Violence of such a Conduct —You, Sir may know (tho' I do not) what has been always done by our former Governours. Some of them have had Impudence enough to call every Opposition to their unwarrantable and extravagant Actions and the despicable Wretches they employed to promote their Purposes a Resistance and Opposition of the Royal Prerogatives of the Crown: And Sir (with Submission) I think their Practices ought never among sober and free Men to be alledged as Presidents fit to follow—What the Governours of the neighbouring Governments of New York, Pensilvania, etc. have done, I neither do nor am concerned to know, any more than they are with what our Governours do or have done here: The Constitution of their Governments may be different from ours; And what is unlawful here, may be lawful there for aught I know. I am not concerned and meddle not with them or any of them. nor ought they or any of them to meddle with us, it is of Fersey I speak; and of Jersey I would be understood to speak and of no other Place whatsoever. As to your Nullity of Laws, I take that to be a Sort of Bugbear fit only to be used to frighten Children, and can be urged with equal Force had the Laws been made by any one Branch of the Legislature And must a man decline in Such Case the saying they are not binding, lest they loose their unlawful Force, and which indeed they ought to loose? The question is not What are the Consequences of a nullity of Laws? But whether they are null or not? And, if made only by one, of two Branches of the Legislature when they ought to be made by three? The answer is easy and what every Man in Duty to his Country, himself, and Posterity, ought to give.—And whatever the Consequences be in such Case, they are chargeable upon those who took upon them to do what they ought not to have done; and not upon those who legally dispute or refuse to obey an illegal Command Nor do I see the mighty Danger of esteeming any Laws void that really are so.—If the Matter of many of them be Convenient or Necessary for the Community tho' made by an incompetent Authority; the Nullity of them is easily and quickly remedied by enacting such of them as are fit to be enacted by a Competent Authority. But a Breaking in and making a Nullity of the Constitution not only infers but introduces A Nullity of Liberty, which I think every Freeman is to guard against as much as he can.

A Gentleman present, who had all this time been very attentive said to the Lawyer that what had been spoken with respect to the Governours Acting and Voting in the Passing of Bills in Council and the Effect it had upon our Laws and Constitution was intirely new to him, as he believed they were to most of his Auditors; as he seemed to be acquainted with the nature of our Fersey Constitution, he desired Leave to ask him, why the late President adjourned the Assembly of this Province by Proclamation in the Kings Name, and unver the Seal of the Province. Since the Governours did it by Proclamation in their own Name, and (if seal'd at all) with their own private Scal? Who replied, he could not pretend to know the motives that induced the late President to differ from the Practice of former Governours: But if the late President could adjourn the Assembly at all, he believed he had taken the right Method of doing of it: For tho' the Governour had Power to Call, prorogue, and disolve Assemblies, as he has to make Judges and Justices, yet he cannot do this in his own Name, and by his own private Seal, but in the Kings Name, and under the Seal of the Province. So the Assembly are called together, and if they can be adjourned by the Governour (which may admit of Debate) it must be by something of equal Authority with that which called them together, which a Procl. under his Hand and Private Seal is not. It is now held in our Books that Prorogation can only be by the King but Adjournment must be by each House themselves see 3d Salk. 266. But it appears by I Anderson 294, 295; That Queen Elizabeth did adjourn a Parliament in the 28th Year of her Reign, but then it was by Commission under the great Seal of England after they were met: and there is not an Instance to be given of any Parliament called or prorogued or adjourned (if adjourned by the King) but what was done under the great Seal. And I believe all the Lawyers that you can converse with will agree to a Man (if they know any Thing of the matter) that an Assembly cannot be prorogued or Continued from one Sessions to another by Adjournment (if done by the Governour) by any less Authority than that which gave them a being and called them together, to wit, the King's Name made Use of, and his publick Seal of his Province of New-Jersie, tested by the Governour for the Time being. A Practice like this has always been the Practice of the Regents and Guardians of the Realms of England as appears abundantly by the Books — The Beginning, Continuance, Proroguation, etc, of Parliaments are Ex Officio taken Notice of by the Judges; and in pleading of Acts of Parliament the Mistake of a Day in either of these is fatal. Proclamations and Charters are both of the same equal Authority, and both under the great Seal, I. Shower 140. A Proclamation to adjourn or prorogue a General Assembly in Fersie is one of the highest Acts of Government here, and should be under the Seal of the Province and in the Kings Name; and when a Governour Issues such a Proclamation in his own Name, and under his own Private Seal, the Practice of his Predecessors may perhaps be admitted for an Excuse for his Vanity, but the Law can never justify the Presumption of the Practice, nor our Assembly be adjourned or prorogued by any such Proclamation.

You seemed to make a Question (Said the Gentleman) whether the late President' could adjourn the Assembly, do you think he had less Power than the Governour had?—I made that Question (replied the Lawyer) not from any doubt that I had of the Presidents Power believing that to be Equal with the Governour's: but from a Belief I had that neither the one nor the other could do it, which Belief was not founded on the want of Power in the President (if a Governour or President could adjourn (as either could prorogue) which will admit of Debate) but from the Want of an Assembly in being to be adjourned which I think pretty clearly appears from what has been already said: The Assembly not having been adjourn'd or prorogued by the late Governour by any Instrument under the Seal of the Province of New Yersie; and therefore no Assembly in being to be adjourn'd or prorogued by the President:—But I shall say something more, in order to clear this matter farther up, if possible.—A Proroguation if done before the time appointed in the Writ for the Meeting of the Parliament, is a putting of the Time of Meeting the Parliament off to a farther time: and this is done by an instrument under the great Seal. And the Beginning of the Parliament is not the Day on which the Writs are made returnable; but the Day of their Meeting appointed by the Proroguation Dyer 203, pl. 72, 2d Keb. 82 pl 30. But a Proroguation after Meeting puts a Period to the Sessions, and discontinues every Thing unfinished in that Sessions; which must begin (if at all) in an other de novo. The Day of the Summons is the Beginning of that Parliament so prorogued. Raym. 192, I Lev 296. 2d Keb 820 pl 30,686 pl 10. An adjournment is made by each House and is a Suspension of their Acting and a Continuance of their Session, and of everything before them to be proceeded on at the Time to which they are adjourn'd. A Parliament prorogued to a Day certain, and summoned before that Day, it was agreed by the Judges that the Summons was contrary to Law, and they were again prologued to the same Day as before. Syderfin 330 pl 1. A Parliament adjourn'd to a certain Day but the Crown intending to prorogue before that Day consulted the Judges who agreed that they must be prorogu'd on the very Day to which it was adjourned; and a Proclamation was published to notify this Intention, that no more of the Members might meet, than what were sufficient to make a House, I Syderfin 393 pl. 26. I shall not multiply Author-. ities. An adjournment (as I take it) ex vi termini necessarily presuposes Persons met at the Time of Adjournment and that Meeting to be Adjourn'd, and a Time certain to which it is adjourn'd whether this is done by the House or by the King.—King Charles I (a Prince as fond of Prerogative as any) sent to the House to adjourn themselves; but the House or Sir

Fohn Elliot etc. would not suffer the Speaker to adjourn them, and Sir John Elliot and others were prosecuted for hindering of him and keeping of him in the Chair and was fin'd severally for doing of it.— That the Parliament adjourn themselves is known to all; and it is impossible to conceive how any Assembly of Men could adjourn themselves that were not met before they adjourned. Queen Elizabeth is one Instance of adjourning a Parliament, and possibly there may be some more but if any very few; And that of the Oueen was, and the other must have been, after they were met, the very Term implying so much; and every Adjournment being a Continuance of the Proceedings then before them must presupose that such Proceedure there was to be continued.— It is objected that the Terms have been adjourn'd by the King's Writ: True it is; but then the Judges met at the Term and publish'd the King's Writ at the Court, and in Obedience to the King's Command adjourned the Court.—Here is an Assembly meets, put the Case on the first of May pass some Acts and give others some a first, some a second reading: The Governour commands them to adjourn untill the 1st of September; they do so; this continues all before them unfinished to that 1st of September; and they may then proceed: But had he prorogu'd them to that Time every Thing must have begun de novo on the first of September: But if he by Proclamation under the publick Seal adjourns the Assembly (for his own cannot do it whatever the other may) on some Day betwixt May and September (Say the 1st of July) to some farther Day after the 1st of September, (say the 1st of October) Either these matters are wholly discontinued or continued from the 1st of Fuly to the 1st of October following or only from the 1st September to the 1st October. That they continued till the first of September by their own Adjournment, and no longer is indisputable.-The Question then will be what meeting was adjourn'd by the Proclamation, admitting it to be such a one as it ought to have been (which it by no means is)—The Answer is, not the first, for that had been adjourned long before: Nor any Meeting on the 1st of July for there was none such. Nor any on the 1st of September for that was to be in futuro, and could not exist on the 1st of Fuly before: For as I said before, Every Adjournment of any Assembly or Meeting of Men (and I add) of the Things doing in it by them, Cannot (as I conceive) be understood possibly to be made, Either by themselves or any other, but while that Assembly is in being, met together, and acting. To suppose otherwise seems to me a Contradiction in Terms and Manifest Absurdity: and of Consequence our Assembly not meeting at the Time to which they were by themselves adjourned, nor at that Time prorogued to any farther Time: (As I take it) they were of course dissolved and entirely dropped; considering first that they were not adjourned or prorogued by an authority Equal to that which called them together, to wit, the King's Name and Seal of the Province: Secondly as not adjourned by themselves nor by any Body else, in a proper Time nor proper Manner therefore dissolved, or had no being as an Assembly, and long before the late President issued any Proclamation concerning them.

As to Proroguation it seems to stand pretty nigh upon the like Foot: For an Assembly being to be called together by the King's Writ, returnable at a certain Day it seems Clear that no Writ afterward issued Could assemble them before that Day but the Power that called them together. As they might have appointed any other Day: so it seems reasonable that before that Day the same Power might Prorogue that is, put their Meeting off to a farther Day; So after their Meeting, when prorogued to a certain Day by the King or by Commissioners under the great Seal, it appears by the Authority in Syderfin before mentioned that it was contrary to Law to call them together before that Day and found necessary to prorogue them to the same Day; so when they stood adjourned to a certain Day, and the King being willing before that Day came to prorogue them, consulted his Judges, who told him it could not be done before that very Day; and accordingly he issued his Proclamation to acquaint the Members with his Intention of Proroguing the Parliament, that no more Members might attend than was necessary to make a House for that Purpose. And the Reason of this seems to be plain: for it is not the several members separated and in their Private Capacity inhabiting the City and Kingdom, and of which a Parliament is to be made up of, but those Members convened in their publick and legislative Capacity, at the Time and Place appointed that are to be adjourned; and that seems one Reason why so small a Number as forty (or a very small Number compared with the Rest) makes up a Quorum of the House of Commons.

A Parliament before they are met cannot be adjourned, because not a Parliament in Being to be adjourned; nor any Thing done to be continued: But the Time of their first meeting may be prorogued or put off to a farther Day. But after they have met, to adjourn a Parliament at any other Time than when they are met and a Parliament, is adjourning of what is not in being at that Time to be adjourned. Which is too manifest an Absurdity to need more to be said about it.

If this Doctrine be true what comes of the Support of Government, and the Rest of our Laws? 'Tis hard to be without Laws, said the Gentlemen.

I have spoke to that already (said the Lawyer) and hate Repetition. The Support of the Government is Temporary, and but for a small Time too, and difficult to be disputed (however lawfully it may be done) before a Governour and Judges of his own making, and who are made to believe, it is in his Power to displace them at his Pleasures and consequently all concerned in Interest to support that Support that maintains them; but may not be averse to the hearing of Disputes Concerning beneficial perpetual Laws;—because if not made by a competent Authority there is some Prospect of Advantage to be acquired by assenting to them when they are, and the Price may rise in Proportion to the Need there is of them; But honest and resolute Men will no more buy wholesome and Necessary Laws than they will sell them.

Admitting that the Assembly be dissolved as you say (replied the Gentleman) and they do not know or believe they are dissolved or will not believe it, but will notwithstanding sit and act, will not their Laws be binding?

If they are dissolved said the Lawyer (and I believe it will puzzle you or any man to prove they are not, and have not been so a long time) what Reason can you or any One give me, why the Laws made by any other equal number of Men that will sit and act and lay Burthens upon the Subject, shall not be Equally binding and compel the Subject to pay them? And will they not be very wise People who submit to pay any Taxes laid by an unlawful Authority.

I am no Lawyer reply'd the other, and therefore can say little to these matters, But I wish the Judges and Lawyers of New York or our Chief Justice had been present at this Discourse.

I should have been well pleased if he had (answered the Lawyer) for tho' I know any Thing I can say before Persons of so much Learning and Knowledge in the Law will be like holding a Candle to the Sun; and what I have said would have served only as hints for their more clear and explicit Treating of the Thing (for I doubt not every one joyns with me in Opinion) since they are not here, you (said he turning to me) who have taken this Discourse in short Hand (as I suppose being a great Master in that Way of Writing) may communicate it to the publick; whom I hope these learned Gentlemen will oblige with their more copious and elaborate Handling of this Subject.¹

This Mr. Zenger I now do, and am Sir,
Your Humble Servant,
Jeremy Anonimous Jun.

Middletown in New-Jersey, August 16, 1734.— The New-York Weekly Journal, Sept. 9, 16, 23, 30, 1734.

¹ This remarkable letter is the outcome of the extraordinary contest then going in New York, between the "Court party," as it was called, composed of the adherents of Governor Cosby, and the popular party, led by Lewis Morris, James Alexander, William Smith, and men of that stamp. On November 5, 1733, John Peter Zenger, a German who had been sent over by the charity of Queen Anne, and who had learned printing in the office of Bradford, then the only printer in New York, started "The New-York Weekly Journal." Prior to this time political discussion was unknown in American newspapers, and almost equally so in England. But Zenger's paper was filled from the begining with a series of articles, able, witty, sarcastic and severely personal, which harped incessantly on the importance of the "freedom of the press." It was a new phrase in American journalism, and the cry instantly filled the mouths of the people, not only in New York but in New Jersey, Pennsylvania and as far south as Charleston, where a paper was speedily published. These articles were undoubtedly written by Alexander, Smith, Morris and their friends. Bradford's paper responded in solemn and stately style, which provoked new sarcasms and cutting rejoinders from the Journal. Party politics waged fiercely in New-York and in New Jersey. Lewis Morris, of Morrisania, Westchester county, New York, and also of Monmouth county. New Jersey, was removed from his office of Chief Justice of New York, by Governor Cosby simply handing James DeLancey a commission as Chief Justice one day as they were sitting in the Council chamber. The new commission, moreover, was "during the pleasure" of the Governor. Morris went home intensely angry, and in the Fall of 1733 offered himself as a candidate for the Assembly from Westchester county. The election was intensely exciting. Modern politicians have learned little in the last century and a half that our forefathers did not know. The polis were controlled by the High Sheriff, a creature of the Governor, and the Morris party naturally feared foul play. They did not propose to take any chances. Accordingly, fifty stalwart voters were stationed all night to watch the polling place at East Chester, to prevent fraud. A charming contemporaneous account has come down to us of the zealous Huguenot voters of New Rochelle, who after going to church piously in the morning started on foot in the afternoon in order to walk to East Chester, that they might get there early Monday morning in time to vote; how they were entertained on the way at the houses of the numerous Morris partisans, and how at daybreak they were met by a mounted escort of seventy men, who accompanied them to the polling place, to inspiring music furnished by trumpeters and violins. Morris himself marched to the polling place with three hundred of the principal men of 'he county, all on horseback. At 11 o'clock his opponent, William Forster, appeared, accompanied by 170 mounted partisans. At noon the High Sheriff arrived, gorgeously arrayed in all the insignia of his office. Morris was clearly in the majority, but a poll was demanded by the opposition, and soon the excitement became intense. A Quaker offered his vote for Morris; it was demanded that he take the usual oaths. He declined,

Trent-Town, August 31. On Tuesday last about Five in the Evening [after] a very pleasant Passage by Water, his Excellency our Governor and his Lady, arrived at Perth-Amboy, and lay there that Night; the three following Days they were very plentifully and cheerfully entertain'd by several Gentlemen at their Seats on the Rariton, and rested on Friday Night at Brunswick, and this Afternoon arrived in good Health at Kingsbury, being attended by the Chief Justice, and Sheriffs of Middlesex and Somerset, and were met eight Miles from this place of course, and the Sheriff refused to count his vote. Morris insisted that his affirmation be taken, but the Sheriff persistel, and 37 Quakers were thus disfranchised, although they would have been a lowed to vote in England. Nevertheless. Morris was triumphantly elected, by a large majority. Zenger's paper was filled with songs, squibs, and other articles exulting over the victory. Naturally, this widened the breach between the Governor's party and the people. On the night of February 1, 1734, as some of James Alexander's guests were leaving the house at a late hour, they found a letter thrust under the door, or thrown into the entry, in which the writer demanded ten pistoles of Alexander, under the threat of poisoning him and his family. Alexander's friends declared the handwriting to be that of Harrison, a member of the Council, and a close friend of the Governor. They took the matter before the Grand Jury, but that body declined to indict, on the ground that the mere resemblance in handwriting was not sufficient proof of authorship. Harrison indig antly denied any complicity in the matter, and intimated that Alexander and his friends had got the letter up themselves, in order to fasten opprobrium on him. Harrison, it may be remarked, subsequently went to England, where he died in poverty and forgotten. The popular party made a tremendous ado about the letter, and kept stirring it up every week in Zenger's Journal. The Governor offered a reward for the discovery of the author of the letter, but of course without success. When Morris went to England in the Fall of 1734, the Governor intimated that he did so to escape detection as the author of this letter. In September, 1734, an election was held in New York for aldermen and assistant aldermen, and the popular party were again overwhelmingly successful. Zenger's Journal again bubbled over with aggravating articles and songs of congratulation, and of mockery of the Governor's party. Chief Justice DeLancey charged the grand jury that Zenger's paper was inculcating treason and defamation, and insisted that they must indict the editor. They paid no attention to the charge. Then the Governor sent a message to the Assembly, complaining of Zenger, but the Assembly laid the message on the table. Two new broads:de ballads on the election were printed and circulated, and the wrathful Chief Justice instructed the grand jury to indict the printer. That body only contented itself with "presenting" the songs and ordering them to be burned by the common hangman. The Governor's Council also ordered four numbers of Zenger's paper to meet the same fate, and directed the aldermen and assistant aldermen to attend the execution. The city fathers refused to attend, the hangman declined the job, and the Sheriff had to designate one of his deputies to burn the obnoxious papers, which he did in the presence of Harrison and a few others, the people resolutely staying away. It was about this time that Lewis Morris and his son, Robert Hunter Morris, sailed for Engby the Sheriffs of Burlington and Hunterdon, and a great Number of the principal Gentlemen and Inhabitants of the Neighboring Counties, who express'd the utmost Satisfaction on his Excellency's Intention of staying sometime among them.—The New York Gazetle, Sept. 9, 1734.

WHeras James Moor of Woodbridge has advertised in this Gazette, as well as by Papers sent out and posted up. That his Wife Deliverance has eloped from his Bed and Board. These are to Certifie, that the same is altogether false, for she has lived with him above eight Years under his Tyranny land, to agitate for the removal of Cosby. As part of this history it may be added that the grand juries having refused to indict Zenger, the people's champion, Attorney General Bradley, of New York, filed an information against him for libel, and he was hurried off to jail, without bail. James Alexander and William Smith had him brought up on habeas corpus before Justice DeLancey, who released him on bail, but demanded the exorbitant sum of £800; this was furnished. But again the grand jury would not find a true bill against him, despite the instructions of the Chief Justice, and the Attorney General again filed a bill against him. He was again brought before the Chief Justice. Alexander and Smith appeared as counsel, and boldly took exception to the information, on the ground that it was in the name of DeLancey and his associate as justices of the Supreme Court, and in the face of the Chief Justice they challenged his right to sit on the bench, on the ground that Lewis Morris had been appointed Chief Justice to hold during good behavior; that the Governor had endeavored to supplant him by merely giving DeLancey the commission personally, without the advice and consent of his Council, and that he had commissioned DeLancey to hold office "during his pleasure." instead of "during good behavior.', The Chief Justice was wild with rage at the temerity of the daring counsel, and adjourn. ed the court for the day, at the same time plainly intimating to the counsel that they might know what to expect if they insisted next day on their point. They did insist, and he incontinently expelled them from the bar. On the death of Governor Cosby in 1736 Alexander and Smith were both readmitted to the bar, and the former was reappointed a member of the Governor's Council. Having got rid of Zenger's counsel, the Chief Justice supposed he had plain sailing in dealing with the alleged culprit. The trial was set for August 4, 1735. On that day the court assigned counsel for the prisoner, but the Attorney General made short work with him and the way seemed clear for ruining the defendant and breaking up his paper. But to the astonishment of the court, there arose at this juncture Andrew Hamilton, a venerable lawyer who had come on from Philadelphia at the request of Zenger's friends, although in ill health, to champion the cause of human liberty. When the Attorney General offered to prove the publication of Zenger's paper containing the objectionable articles, Hamilton waived all that, and said the publication was admitted. Bradley sat down in triumph. "But," said Hamilton, "you must prove that the artices are libelous." The Chief Justice refused to listen to his argument. Thereupon he turned to the jury. and declared that as the court would not hear him, they must be the judges of the law and incredible Abuses; for he has several Times attempted to Murder her, and also turned her out of Doors, shamefully abusing her, which is well known to the Neighbours and Neighbourhood in Woodbridge.—The New York Gazette, Sept. 9, 1734.

and the facts. And then for hours he held the packed court room spellbound, as he made the first plea ever heard in America for the freedom of the clitzen, and of the press, from the tyranny of the rulers. Despite the charge of the Chief Justice the jury returned a verdict of "not guilty." and Zenger was borne off in triumph. The next day, when Hamilton was about taking boat for Philadelphia. he was followed to the water's side by the whole populace, who hailed him as the champlon of popular liberty, while the corporation presented him with the freedom of the city, in a gold box. It was the most memorable trial for libel ever witnessed in America, and thus early was the principle established in this country that in such cases the jury must be the judges of the law and the evidence. It was a grand victory for the people.

If the article given above, from Zenger's Journal, was not written by James Alexander, William Smith or Lewis Morris, it was undoubtedly inspired by them; it looks very much as if Alexander had written it. He was or had been a member of the Governor's Council in New Bersey as well as in New York; the same arguments used as to the Governor's prerogatives in one Province applied with equal force to the other. It may be noted that after the death of Governor Cosby, when Lewis Morris was appointed Governor of New Jersey his instructions provided that he should have no vote in the Council, and he never sat with that body.

Trent-Town, New Jersey, Sept. 26. On Tuesday the 24th of September his Excellency our Governour, with his Lady and Family, went down to Burlington, having received a very respectable Invitation from the Mayor and Aldermen of that Place, to their New City. His Excellency was met at the Water-side by the Gentlemen of the Corporation, who testified their Pleasure in seeing him, with great demonstrations of Joy. And being conducted to the House of Mr. Pearse, the Mayor, the Recorder, (in the Name of the Corporation) presented the following Address.

May it please your Excellency:
Sir:

It is with the utmost Pleasure, that the Corporation of Burlington sees your Excellency, your good Lady and Family in health, and we do beg leave to Return our sincere Thanks to your Excellency for your affectionate Opinion and Esteem you have been pleased to express, and in a more particular manner with the strongest Sentiments of Gratitude, we do acknowledge your Excellency's Readiness in Erecting Us into a Corporation; and this too, your Excellency was pleased to bestow upon us meerly for promoting the Happiness and Interest of Burlington; and it is to be hop'd, it will never be our Power or Inclination to abuse your good Intention. We shall therefore endeavour, with Moderation, to make such Laws and Regulations as may redound to the general Benefit and Advantage of this City.

To which his Excellency return'd the following Answer.

Gentlemen;

I Return you Thanks for this Kind Address, and as my Intention in Erecting you into a Corporation proceeded from no other Motives than the Esteem I bore you, and a desire to promote the Interest of Burlington; So I now wish you all Happiness, and hope that the Affairs of the Corporation will be carried on in such a manner as may prove most conducive to the good of it.

The Corporation, afterwards gave his Excellency a very handsome entertainment, and in the evening his Excellency return'd to Trent-Town.—The New-York Gazette, Oct. 7, 1734.

New-York, November 25, 1734. We hear from Shrewsberry in New Jersey, that the Honorable Lewis Morris, Esq; late chief Justice of this Province, and one of the Members of the General Assembly thereof, and President of His Majesties Council of New-Fersey did on Saturday last (together with his Son (Robert Morris), Embark from that Place, on board of Capt. Payton for London, to sollicit Matters of great Importance at the Court of Great Britain; as well relating to this as other the Northern Colonies in America. He was attended at his Departure by several Gentlemen of that Colony, the News whereof gave great Satisfaction to the Inhabitants of this City, who heartily wish him a good Voyage, Health and Success, and we believe it will be equally great to the Body of the People of this Colony.

And in all the Churches of this City, Prayers were yesterday publickly offer'd in their behalf.—The New-York Weekly Journal, Nov. 25, 1734.

New-York, Dec. 2, 1734. By a private Letter from London, via, Philadelphia, which came here on Fryday last, we are Informed that His Majesty has ordered the Province of New-Jersey, to be a seperate Government from New-York, and that a Commission is daily expected to pass the Seals, to appoint Sir William Keith Governour of that Colony.—The New-York Weekly Journal, Dec. 2, 1734.

Mr. Bradford:

I Observe an Article in Zenger's last Weeks Journal concerning Coll. Morris, which for the better information of the Publick I shall give a more particular and truer account of his going off, than is set forth in said Journal. You must know then, That some time ago Coll. Morris, a Member of the Assembly of this Province, obtain'd leave of the House to go Home, on account of his Sore Leg (which in Governor Burnet's Time, us'd to be call'd his Politick Shin) alledging that he wanted to be at quiet, in order to forward the Cure; but by a most ingenious *Prevarica*tion (Peculiar to himself) extending the Signification of the Word [Home] to mean England, not his House in Westchester County, he and his Son Robert Stole away privately into the Neighbouring Province of New-Fersey, and went on board Capt. Peyton, under a Convoy of Armed Boats, from Shrewsberry; and on Sunday following, written Tickets were sent to all the Churches in New-York, in the subsequent words, The Prayers of the Congregation are desired on

Mr. Zenger:

I Find Mr. Bradford's Correspondents can't help calumniating, as appears by their last Letter, in their last Gazette No. 475. concerning Coll. Morris's departure. To use their own Words, you must know then that what they have said of his asking leave to go Home, alledging that he wanted to be quiet in order to forward the Cure of his Leg, is a direct Falshood, to say no worse of it. I am pretty well assured, that the Words he made use of were these, Mr. Speaker, I must desire the House will give me Leave to go Home; which was readily granted, and it was entered in the Journal accordingly.

Their next petty observe is, but by a most ingenious Prevarication (peculiar to himself) extending the Meaning of the Word Home, to mean England. I don't know what the Writer means by extending the Meaning of the Word. I well knew what he meant, for he told before he asked leave, that he intended to embark on Board of Capt. Peyton for London, and I know perfectly well, That several of the Members besides knew by his asking leave to go home, that he designed to go to England. I would advise this Letter Writer, the next Time he ventures to appear in Print, to read a Letter said to be wrote to the Duke of New-Castle, in Answer to Mr. Van Dam's Articles, printed at Boston, 1734, where he will find most ingenious Prevarications, I won't offer to say who they are peculiar to.

I am a little Surprised at that Gentleman's saying he stole away privately: I suppose he intends by it to tell the World, he was over Head and Ears in Debt, and so went off privately to defraud his Creditors. It is so mean an Insinuation that it is hardly worth observing upon; I shall only say, I heard him declare, he did not owe one Hundred when he went off; and that can be paid when ever it is demanded.

He went from hence in the Tarter's Pinnace to Fersey to take his Leave of Part of his Family at Tinton and went on Board in the same Boat from thence and I am credibly informed she was no other ways Armed than what is usual for the King's Boats to be.

The Reason of his going Home is to sollicite Affairs of Importance at the Court of Great Britain; and the Quality he goes in is that of an honest Man, and one that knows the State of the Plantations better than any one Person in the Province, and has Abilities sufficient to put them in their true Light to the Ministry at Home.

As for the Posts of Honour and Profit in New-Fersey, they will be disposed of by the Person whom his Majesty intends the Government for. As for those in this Province, the Person His Majesty has intrusted has already disposed of them.

His true Friends (not those that are ironically called so) think, he has considered, not only his own Interest, but that of the whole Country. As for a dutiful and courteous Behaviour towards his Superiours, it is what he has always had, consistant with the Character of an honest Man: But if a Man can't make his Conscience and Honour subservient to Men in Power, it is immediately said he flys in the face of his Superiours, which I take to be the Reason that the many Favours the Crown has heaped on him and his Family (as they are pleased to say) are taken from them.

The Voyage is long and dangerous for a Man of his Age; but I think he followed in this Case a known Proverb of two Evils choose the least. As for the Example of the last Voyage he took to England, every Body that knows any Thing about that Affair knows that he effected what he went for, as it is not doubted but he will do the same in this Case.

Mr. Zenger

And now in my Turn I must say, you in your last Fournal, have taken a great deal of Pains to vindicate the Character of Coll. Morris, alas, his Character wants not to be vindicated he has appealed to the World, and even to his greatest Enemies, and defied them to say any Thing of his Character, either in Publick or Private Life, inconsistant with, a Man of Honour; besides if they had but remembered a Motto in their own Paper, which is Printed in their Gazette, No. 428, which I beg to repeat for their benefit, de mortiis nihil nisi bonum, de absențibus nihil nisi verum, they would have scorned to Mention any Thing derogatory to that Gentlemen's Character; how ever as he is out of their Power, I would not have your Correspondents mind any of their Efforts but dispise them.

I shall Conclude with the Advice, I gave you in my last.

Thus Zenger you may see what I intend, Is still to keep you to the Point in Hand, Keep close to that in spight of all the Tubs, And then you'll meet with praise instead of Rubs.

We hear that the 16th of this Instant began a Hearing before his Excellency Governour Cosby, as Chancellor between sundry Persons of Hopewell complainants, and Coll. Cox Defendent, which Hearing lasted four Days.—The New-York Weekly Fournal, Dec. 23, 1734.

Mr. Bradford:

SOme of Zenger's Correspondents, in his last Weeks Paper, desired a Place in his Journal for somewhat he calls an excellent Letter, Printed in England, pointing out the Qualifications of a Judge; I pray send to some of your Correspondents to furnish you with some Remarks on the Gentlemen's Consciences who Practice at the Bar; and we shou'd be glad to have a Disquisition of the different sorts of Consciences arising from different Principles in Religion, and particularly why a Quakers Conscience is four times more moderate than a Presbyterian Conscience, having been inform'd that in a late Ejectment Cause, in the Jersies, Fifty Pistoles having been offered, for a Fee, to a Quaker Conscience, the Clyent had Forty Return'd him, and the same Number being offer'd to a Presbyterian Conscience, the latter, modestly kept Forty, and returned Ten.

By giving the above paragraph a place in your next Gazette, you'll oblige one of your constant Readers.

Run away, the 26th of this Instant December, from Nathan Beakes of Chester Township in Burlington County, West-New-Jersey, a Servant Man named John Pearce, about 25 Years of age, and small of Stature; had on a light colour'd Coat, a red Vest, a light Colour'd Kearsey pair of Breeches and a Felt Hat. able Charges,

Mr. Zenger:

ENVY PRAISES THOSE IT RAILS AT CATO.

SHOULD a Man desire another to accept of 50 Pistoles for Services done, and the Man to whom the Offer is made, does generously say the Sum is too much, and therefore returns 10 of the 50 the Nature of Envy is such, that it will find some way or other to blast this generous Act, and cover it with such Colours, that instead of appearing generous, it will rather appear sordid and griping, . . . Man unacquainted with the Force of Envy will be very much put to seek, how it could possibly twist and colour that generous Act so as to appear a sordid or a griping one; but those possess'd with that low Habit have a Way at Hand. . . . It's but feigning a Case four times more generous, and setting the two Cases in Opposition, and in one View; and observing the feign'd Man's Conscience is four times more moderate than the other's, how moderate is the one's! And how griping is the other's!

be none, but on the contrary (to inattentive Readers) sordid and griping; But thinking Men will soon discover the Fallacy and Envy, and instead of Blame for not being so generous as he in the feigned Case, will esteem the real generous Man, first Good and just, in not asking or insisting on more than was offered for the Service, and then generous for every Penney he returned of what was esteemed by the Employer to be his Due. . . . And thus the envious Man, by his Railing praises the real generous Man, as Cato has observed.

There's a remarkable example of this Envy (if not worse) and its Method of Practice in Mr. Bradford's last Gazett, No. 478, where it is said, that a Quaker Conscience is four Times more moderate than a Presbyterian Conscience, for that in a late Ejectment Cause in Fersey, the Quaker Conscience returned 40 out of 50 Pistols offered for a Fee; whereas the Presbyterian Conscience being offered the same Number, modestly kept 40 and returned 10. . . Were this Case only compared with the Case I have before put, I think it is sufficiently Answered, as to the Reflection there by designed to be cast on the Presbyterian: But as that Article of Mr. Bradford, is so open that few Men can mistake the Persons thereby pointed out, because there is but one Quaker and one Presbyterian Practiser in Jersey, to whom such Fees could probably be offered; and consequently to most People in these Parts, the Quaker and Presbyterian must be as well known as if the envious Man had given their Names and Sir-Names at Length: And as the Amount of Mr. Bradford's Paragraph seems to be to tell the World, that if they'll employ a certain Person, naming him, they will find him four Times more extravagant in his Demands for his Services than such a one. . . . The Envious Man appears to me too plain to need any farther pointing out. . . . The Quaker I am sure has more Generosity and Honour than to be privy or consenting to so mean a View, or base Insinuation, than to discredit a Man in his Way of Living . . . who the Envious Man is I neither know, nor desire to know.

I have the Happiness to be well Acquainted with both the Quaker and Presbyterian, and both of them I greatly and equally value and esteem, being convinced they deserve the Esteem of the World; this put me upon the Enquiry into what Truth (if any) was in that Publication, and upon sufficient Enquiry I found in this Case, that Envy disdains to be confined to Truth, it delights in making White appear Black, and as it self is low and mean, it is for reducing Things above it to its own Standerd and Levell, as the Reader will find by the following plain Narrative of the Truth of what's the Foundation for the envious Mans Publication concerning the Presbyterian; and it is this, . . .

rian; and it is this,

The Presbyterian (with much entreaty) was prefailed on to travail 80 Miles to Burlington, to assist as Council in the Tryal of an Ejectment for a Matter of great Consequence, his Client promising to reward him handsomely for coming He went accordingly, and for coming his Client offered him his Bond for 50 Pound, which the Presbyterian said was more than his service would be worth. He then press'd taking his Bond for 40 Pounds, which was in like Manner refused. 30 Pounds was in like manner offered and refused; upon which the Presbyterian told his Client, to defer that Matter till the Tryal was over, to see what Service he could do him in it.—The Cause was tryed; his Client had the desired success, and then repeated his Offers, where upon the Presbyterian told his Client, that if he would give his promisory Note for 20 Pounds he would look on it as sufficient for his Service; which Note of 20 Pounds was accordingly given and accepted, and it is not doubted but that it will be honourably paid.—How much the envious Publication deviates from the Truth is too plain from this Narative to need pointing out.

That the Quaker in the same Case was satisfied with 10 Pistoles, or 14 Pounds may be true; and yet 20 to the Presbyterian (all Circumstances considered) might have been as moderate as 14 to the Quaker, even admitting the Abilities of both to be equal. It is certain that the Presbyterian had not used to attend the Practice of that Court, nor had he been at Burlington but once in seven years before, nor had even appeared there in the Tryal of one Cause before that Time, and in order to attend that Service did travail from the Place of his Abode four Times as far as the Ouaker did; wherefore I look upon the Moderation of both to be equal and exemplary, and well deserving the Praise of all Men, which Praise the World might never have had the Opportunity of rendring for want of knowing that it was done, had not that invious Breath been blown, which had extorted the Publication of the Truth of the Matter:-Which farther makes good the Observation of Cato, that Envy praises those it rails at.

It is now Eight Months and Twenty Days since this Presbyterian had Occasion in Print to submit his Conduct to the World, and in Case any Part of it deserved a severe Remark, he requested his Adversaries by all means to let it be known. What gave Occasion for that Challenge, and the plain Envy of this Bradforian Writer, shews a sufficient Inclination in his Adversaries, to expose his Conduct, if they could; and yet in all that Time they have not been able to find any one Part of it blame worthy, till now they have been so unlucky as to point at a Part of it, which instead of blame, appears worthy of not a little Praise.

I have already spent too much Time on this Bradfordian, envious, pitiful Tub, therefore shall conclude with one Remark; that as the Moderation of the Quaker and Presbyterian Consciences appears very conspicuous, I wish it may prove a motive to Churchmen, of all Ranks and Professions, High and Low, but especially the High to acquire some more of That Amable Virtue

I am

A Coppy of Verses upon Coll Morriss Voyage to England.

Neptune! be kind, and calm the raging Sea
Let no rough Wave retard the Patriot's Way.
Protect him! Oh protect him safely ore,
Thy vast Dominions, to the British shore.
Let prosp'rous Gales fill every swelling Sail,
And waft him gently ore the liquid Main.
Ye Gods, be kind unto the worthy Chief;
Conduct him safely soon to get Relief:
Where great Augustus Reigns; there may he find
An easie Access, and the Sov'reign kind;
There may he Plead his injur'd Countries Cause,
Restore its Rights, its Liberties and Laws;
And then return with joyful tydings ore,

And spend his Days on this his native Shore, Where, for the glorious Deeds, that he has done, To endless Ages, shall his praise be sung.

Whoever is inclined to Purchase the same, may apply to Richard Edsell living upon the Premises, who will dispose of the same on very Reasonable Terms.—The New York Gazette, April 7, 1735.

ON Wednesday the 23 of April next, at the Paper-Mill in Elizabeth-Town, there will be Sold at Publick Vendue to the highest Bidder, all sorts of Household Goods, Cattle, Horses, Hogs, Cart, Plows, Harrows with Iron Teeth, and other Utensils:

^{1 &}quot;As early as 1728 William Bradford [printer of the New York Gazette] owned a paper mill at Elizabethtown, New Jersey. When this mill was built I cannot determine; but I believe it was the first that was erected in New Jersey; and, it is not improbable that it was the first in British America."-Thomas's History of Printing (ed. 1810), II., 95. "This was the old mill that was still standing, until within a few years, at the stone bridge in Broad street."—Hatfield's History of Elizabeth, 324. Bradford owned in 1697 a one-fourth interest in a paper mill near Germantown, Philadelphia.— Historical Magazine, I., 124. In 1714 a paper mill was erected upon Chester creek, Delaware, which was still in operation in 1857.-Munsell's Chronology of Paper and Paper-Making, 1857, p. 23. The first paper mill in Massachusetts was established in 1730, by Daniel Henchman, bookseller. - Thomas, I., 213. It may be added here that in 1803 Messrs. (Charles) Kinsey, Crane & Fairchild built a paper mill at Paterson, N. J. In 1808 Kinsey was granted a patent for a machine for making paper in an endless web. The first Fourdrinier paper machine in America was started October 24.1827, in Henry Barclay's mill, at Saugerties, N. Y., by Peter Adams and Thomas Lindsay, who were machine tenders. The machine lay in Liverpool two years before it was permitted to go through the custom house for export. So the editor was informed by Peter Adams, who died at Paterson, N. J., in 1889. See also p. 175, ante.

The Plantation adjoining to the said Mill will also be Sold, which contains about Ninety Acres, about thirty Acres within a good new Fence; about ten Acres sowed with Winter Grain. Upon the Premises there is good House, with a Cellar under it, and a Kitchen adjoyning to it, a Barn and other Out-house, a Garden and Orchard. There is also a large Frame of a House, with Boards and the Roof will be Sold. The Sale to begin about ten or eleven a Clock in the Forenoon, 23d of April, 1735—The New-York Gazette, April 7, 1735.

To be SOLD,

A Tract of Land in the County of Somerset in East-New-Jersey, near the Court-House, very Convenient for a Publick-House or Store, containing 12 Acres, with a good House and Barn, a small Orchard. The Title is good. Any Person inclining to purchase the same may apply to Daniel Brinton Davison at Frince Town.—The American Weekly Mercury, April 10–17, 1735.

Whereas I am informed that a Report is lately spread at Amboy and other Places, to the effect following, viz. That it is generally believed that I gave great Sums of Money to the Governor, Chief Justice and Attorney General, for the reprieving Elianor White, now in Monmouth Goal and condemned to dye for the Murder of her Bastard Child (as is said.) And I am further told that said Report was spread by a Gentleman of the Petty-Jury in that Case, and some others. This artful way of publishing a Report, and ascerting it is generally believed in order to gain it Credit, without any other Reason given for the belief of it, plainly discovers that it hath no Reason to support it, and that it was contrived and published by designing Men, on purpose to make credulous People believe it to be true, without any Reason, with a design to defame the Governor, Chief Justice and Attorney General. Therefore I think it my Duty in this Case to do what in me lies to undeceive the People and defeat the above design. And in order thereunto, I hereby declare that the abovesaid general Belief (if any such thing there is) is altogether groundless, and the abovesaid Report, upon which said Belief is said to be grounded, is altogether False; For his Excellency the Governor was pleased to grant said Reprieve at the Petition of some of the Justices of Goal delivery for said County, and above one Hundred and Forty Freeholders and Inhabitants of said County, without any Money being given or paid, or my or any other Person giving any Expectation of any Money to be given or paid to the Governor, Chief Justice, Attorney General, or to any other Person whatsoever, for granting said Reprieve. And for the Confirmation that what I here publish is true, every one that knows said Elianor White, and her very few Relations that she hath, knows them all to be very Poor, and that no Money can be expected from her or them. And there are likewise several honest Men in said County that well know not Fourteen Pounds was gathered in all, in behalf of said Elianor White, (and no Subscriptions for more Money) out of which the Charges of riding several long Journies, and other Expences of said Affair, have been paid, so that no Money could be engaged to be paid to the Governor, or to any other, and but a very inconsiderable Sum could be left, not fit to offer the Governor, the Chief Justice, Attorney General, or to any of their Friends, if I had been so base as to imagine that they would accept any Money on that Account

By his Excellency WILLIAM COSBY, Captain General and Governour in Chief of the Provinces of New-Jersey, New-York and the Territories thereon Depending, in America, Vice Admiral of the same, and Colonel in his Majesty's Army, &c.

In Council, A PROCLAMATION.

Whereas I have received Information upon Oath, that one Duncan Oguillon and one John Collier, were on the second Day of Fuly last past, severally put into the Possession of the Dwelling Houses and Plantations lately in the Possession of John Parks and Thomas Smith, late of Hopewell in the County of Hunterdon, by Daniel Coxe Esq; who then had possession of the said dwelling Houses and Plantations, delivered unto him by Bennet Bard, Esq; High Sheriff of the said County of Hunterdon, by Virtue of a Writ of Possession to the said Sheriff, directed and issuing out of the Supream Court of this Province of New-Yersey: And that in the Night between the Thursday and the Friday following, divers Persons unknown, to the number of Twelve or more, being all disguised, having their Faces besmear'd with Blacking, and Armed with Clubs, and Sticks in their Hands, Did in an Insolent, Violent, and Riotous Manner, break into and enter the said respective Dwelling Houses, and did Assault, Beat, and Wound the said Duncan Oguillon and John Collier, and other Persons then in the said several Dwelling Houses; and them did with Force & Arms, violently amove and turn out of possession, Cursing, Swearing, and Threatning in a most outrageous manner, that they would Kill and Murder the said Daniel Coxe Esq; in Defiance of all Law and Government.

To the End therefore, that the said audacious Offenders may be brought to condign Punishment; I Have thought fit by and with the Advice of his Majesty's Council, to issue this Proclamation, hereby promising his Majesty's most Gracious Pardon, to any one of the said Offenders, who shall discover one or more of their Accomplices so that he or they may be brought to condign Punishment. And as a further Encouragement to any one who shall detect so unparellel'd and insolent an Outrage, I do hereby promise to Pay to the said Discoverer the Sum of Thirty Pounds, Proclamation Money, within one Month after any or either of the said Offenders shall by his Means be convicted of the said Offence.

Given under my Hand and Seal at Arms, at Perth-Amboy, the Twenty Second day of August, in the Ninth Year of his Majesty's Reign.

Annoque Domini, 1735.

By his Excellency's Com-

W. Cosby.

¹ An interesting sketch of John Tatham, by John D. McCormick, of Trenton, was published in "The American Catholic Historical Researches" (Philadelphia), April, 1888, Vol. V., No. 2, pp 79-92. The writer is not strictly accurate in speaking of Tatham as "New Jersey's First Catholic Governor." It is not certain that Tatham was a Catholic, and it is certain that he was never Governor; Dr. Daniel Coxe. chief Proprietary and Governor of West Jersey, appointed Tatham Deputy Governor in 1687, but the Assembly of that Province rejected him.—Smith's Hist. N. J., pp. 191-2. In 1690 the Proprietors of East and West Jersey appointed Tatham Governor of both Provinces, but there is no record that he ever qualified or was recognized as Governor.

Philadelphia, January 27. We are inform'd, that at Corswicks in West New-Jersey divers Persons have died lately of a Distemper in the Throat, and that that Distemper prevails there. We are therefore desired to Publish the following Remedy (which has proved successful) for the advantage of those who may hereafter be visited with the like Distemper. Take some Honey and the sharpest Vineger, with Allow dissolv'd therein, and let the patient often Gargle it in their Throats; or if they be Children, then take a Feather and dip it into said Liquor and so wash their Throats.—The New-York Weekly Journal, Feb. 9, 1736.

In my No. 119¹ [Feb. 16] I inserted a Letter from Mr. Jonathan Dickenson of Elizabeth-Town, containing an Account and proposing a Method of a Distemper which rages in divers Parts of this Country; I thought it might be of Service to republish the following.

In New-Fersey they have found Relief by the following Medicine.

TAKe some Honey and the sharpest Vineger, with Allom dissolv'd therein, and let the Patient often Gargle it in their Throats; or if they be children then take a Feather and dip it into said Liquor, and so wash their Throat.—The New York Gazette, Feb. 24, 1736.

To be LET.

From the Boston Gazette.

SIR.

I Have seen in your publick Gazette, an Account of a very surprizing Distemper prevailing in some Parts of this Continent, especially in the Eastern Parts; and also some Description of the same; which I forbear to rehearse: But it hath its Seat and Situation in or about the Throat. And I have seen a publick Desire to all that profess Physick, or have had any Experience of the same, to publish some Measures proper for the Cure of the same. And having had some late News that this Distemper doth still prevail, and no remedy can be found; which makes me (out of pity to my fellow Creatures) willing to communicate of my Judgment and Experience; for the Distemper has been and is now very brief among us; but I believe that not one to sixty Dies thereof. What is used is as follows: First be sure that a Vein be opened under the Tongue, and if that can't be done, open a Vein in the Arm; which must first be done, or all other means will be ineffectual: Then take Borax, Allum and Bole Armoniack, powder'd and mix'd with Honey, to bathe or anoint the Mouth and Throat, and lay on the Throat a Plaister of Unguintum Dialthæ. To Drink give a Decoction of Devil's bitt or Robbins Plantain, with some Sal Pruncllae dissolved therein, as often as the Patient will drink. If the Body be costive, use a Clyster agreeable to the Nature of the Distemper. I have also known many other things used, especially a Root call'd Physick Root, filarie or five leaf'd Physick, also a Root that I know no Name for only Canker Root; but be sure to let Blood, and that under the Tongue. We have many Times made Blisters on the Arms, but that has prov'd some times dangerous. What I have set down in short, has been the most successful of any I know of. It is a Distemper that has now spread it self in many Places in this Colony: Therefore please to give this a Place in your Paper. And I pray God to give these Means the same Blessing where ever used, as they have among us.

From Your faithful Friend and Servant,

N. H.

ALthough in our last weeks Paper we gave an account that since the Impostume in his Excellencys breast had been lanced, his Cough was ceased and there was a very great Prospect of his Recovery, which account was according to the opinion of his Physicians and Friends about him. Yet since that it appears that it was only an enlivening before Death; for on Wednesday the tenth of this Instant his Excellency Coll. William Cosby Governour of this Province, departed this Life, after a severe Illness of almost sixteen weeks; and on Saturday following he was decently interred in his Majesty's Chappel in the Fort, his Corps being attended by the Gentlemen of the Council, the Clergy of the City, the Physicians that attended him in his illness, and most of the principal Gentlemen and Merchants. who from an affectionate concern for his Death, voluntarily assisted in paying their last Duty to his Remains. The Grief and Affliction of his Family, the Concern and Regret of all that knew him, is a testimony that he was, in relation of Life, a valuable Man.—The New York Gazette, March 15. 1736.

Mr. Bradford:

If you will incert the following Ralation into your next Gazette, you will oblige several of your constant Readers, and particularly,

Your Friend

I. S.

The late Seizure of sundry Boats belonging to New-York, made by Persons appointed to put in Execution the Act of Assembly made for the Preservation of Oysters within the Province of New-Jersey, having occasioned a great Clamour and Reflection against the Inhabitants of this Province (a Gift indeed which has been long since nearest at hand, and which has been as liberally bestowed on us, on every pretence) This, I say, together with the false Representation of the Fact, and of the Treatments which the Captors met with here, has given us the trouble of writing this to inform the Publick of the truth of the Transaction of this Affair.

But before I proceed, it may be necessary to premise, That the Proprietors of this Province of New-Fersey are said to be legally vested, under the Crown, with a Right (among other things) to all Fishings in all the Rivers to the Westward of the Channel from Sandy Hook to Hudson's River; I suppose the Fishery of the Oysters passed in that Grant; I say, I suppose so, for I am not knowing enough to affirm it; yet I may assert, (if the Grant be good) that it is contrary both to the Law of God and Man, without the assent of the Proprietor, to take away his Property.

This, however, may remind you of the East Boundaries of our Province, whose Assembly, I presume, have an equal Right with any of the American Colonies to pass Laws (upon a Principle which will hold both in Justice and Policy) passed an Act rendring all Boats & not belonging to an inhabitant of this Province, or in which an Unresident shall be raking Oysters on the Banks, Seizable.

The occasion of putting this Law in execution is this, Several Boat-men in Boats belonging to New-York, provided themselves with chosen men, small Arms, Powder and Bullets, &c. and in direct Opposition to the Law, did gather large Quantities of Oysters from the Beds within the bounds of this Province, where Capt. Hews (one of the Commissioners) accidentally being with a White Man and a Negro, saw these Men transgressing, &c. he thereupon manfully attack'd entred and seized the Boat of one John Cannon, who was call'd their Commodore, and was fastned to another, in which there was 15 Men, accoutred, as is before set forth; after his receiving many blows, they knock'd him over board, but he recover'd himself and seized the Boat of one David Provoost, another of Jacques Dennis, and a Pettiauger of Alderman Romer, and brought them into Amboy, but Commodore Cannon and one William Cook got clear, and hoisted a Flag of Defiance (as they call'd it) and dared the Fersey Men to attack them (as by their Message) Capt. Hews pursued them, and Cook running a ground, Hews came up with him, Cook with six men resisted, and presented their Fire Arms at Capt. Hews (who had not any with him) but not being daunted thereat, he enter'd and seized Cook's Boat; but in the Engagement two of our Men were Knocked over board, and had like to have been drowned, and two others of our Men were wounded to the Scull. One of our men who were knock'd over board, being got upon Cook's Deck again, (and before he had recover'd his Senses) took up a Cutlas and struck Cook over the Head, which was the chief wound the New-York Men received, who then surrendered their loaded Arms, one of which was loaded with Nine Swan Shot, and 'twas said, the rest were so too; but our Men had no further curiosity than to discharge all their said Fire Arms, and to secure the Powder, Ball, &c. which lay in readiness upon Deck. After they had thus surrendered then Rebelled twice, and both times over come. But

Being landed at Perth-Amboy, they were treated civilly, but conducted before the Mayor and other Magistrates, who upon Complaint and Proof of Facts committed against the words and intent of the Law, could do no less than commit them; but they remain'd in the Courthouse without the Restraint of a Lock, and the 3d and 4th day they were all bayl'd out, and the whole matter accommodated with the Persons who by the Act, had the right to the Seizures, by the Mediation of almost every one who was at hand, and the like was done in behalf of the Owners of the other two Boats and Periauger, who all (before they left Amboy) acknowledg'd their transgressions and the reasonable treatment which they have met with, not having paid an Eighth of their Forfeitures.

I should have told you before, That W. Cook chose a private house for his Lodging, where he had assistance from the Doctor, at the request of our People; and the next Morning he was so well as to attend the Doctor at his own House.

As to a Negroman assisting in this affair, we all blame the action, but it was accidental, (as I mentioned before) and the part he acted was this, When Capt. Hews entred the Boat, they knock'd him down with the Tiller, and the man being about to repeat the blow, the Negro apprehending what Damage might happen, run to him with a Pistol, (without Flint or Powder) and swore he would shoot him, if he kill'd his Master. Upon which a surender ensued.

The greatest part of the Transactions of this Relation I was a Witness to, and the rest is or may be proved, and if so, let any Impartial Reader judge, if this deserves the hard Measures we met with; or was it just and reasonable for——of your to advise some hot headed Persons to come and make Reprizals in our Province, Vi & Armis, which they were ready enough to put in practice, had not a certain Lawyer advised in the case, and told them it be a Riot, and consequently the Actors might be committed.

In the next place they seek occasion against the Fersey Boats, and upon search they find in a Boat that carries four Coard and a half of Wood, three Sticks that were an Inch shorter than the established length, for which he was fined forty Shillings; which we think hard measure, because there were many more Sticks longer than the three short ones; and if a Person that buyes, has his Quantity, we think it might suffice, and in Equity answer the end of the Regulation; but Men are not always so happy as that the best things have the most Patrons. What shall I do? something must or ought to be done.

I've not the Art of tickling Vulgar Ears,

But yet my Vote weighs some-what with my Peers, When A——s Judge, 'tis Musick to be loud,

When A—s Judge, its Musick to be loud,

And that which shocks the Thinking, charms the Crowd. Some others of our Yersey Boats (I am told) have accidentally transgrest the Ordinance of your City, and they have paid their full Fines; I hope the Watchfulness of said Citizens will make our People more cautious. As to the Corporation of New-York just at this time to make a new Regulation of the Size of Cask for Beef and Pork, looks as if it was done to prevent us from carrying our Beef and Pork to New-York, but it does not offend us, because we can find other Markets to vend our Country Produce. And while we are thus taking advantage against one another, it will be a prejudice to both Provinces for the present, but may turn to our advantage in time. [Necessity is the Mother of Inventions.]

However, the present Circumstances of our poor Country-men bring to my Remembrance what a great Man long since wrote, which as the Rules are good and just, they may be of service to some of your Readers. They are as follows, viz.

'Tis crul Pleasure to enjoy the Pain
Our Sentence dooms the Guilty to sustain;
Justice forgets the First and great Intent,
When to Revenge she turns the Punishment.
But 'tis a God like Happiness of Mind,
Freely to judge, with Passion unconfind'd
To reason Calmly, and as things appear
In their true light, be Gentle or Severe.

I have some more Things to mention by way of Complaint, but at present shall forbear, wishing we may agree, and not vex one another, but live in Friendship one with the other.

I am yours
Middletoniensis.

—The New York Gazette, March 22, 1736.

New-York, March 22. We also hear from the County of Somerset in New-Jersey, That one——Lawrance, a Glasier, having a small matter of Money in the House, a Person that was a Lodger there, took an Ax and wounded his Wife so that she dyed; her Husband coming in he fell upon him, cut and wounded him so, that he was disabled from defending himself. Then the fellow took the Money and some other Goods and fled; but soon after was pursued, overtaken and is committed.—The New York Gazette, March 22, 1736.

Boston, March 22. From the New-York Weekly Journal, March 15, we have the following Article of News: That on Wednesday the 10th Instant, between the Hours of One and Two in the Afternoon, died his Excellency William Cosby, Esq; Governor of the Provinces of New-York and New-Jersey.—

The Boston News-Letter, March 18–25, 1736. No. 1674.

Philadelphia, March 9.

We hear, that a large Scooner from Amboy, bound to Cape Fear, Richard Hartshorn, Master, on the 4th of last Month Founder'd, when they were about 45 Leagues (as they suppos'd) from Winyaw; and the Company betook themselves to their Moses, in which they continued 48 Hours, when they were taken up by Capt. Wyat bound to St. Augustine, with whom they continued four Days, and then judging themselves near Land, (though they had not yet sight of it) they chose rather to adventure in their Boat than to go to St. Augustine, and accordingly they (7 in Number) left Capt. Wyat about 7 a Clock in the Morning, and about 8 at Night got safe on shore at Otters Island, lying between Georgia and South Carolina, and from thence proceeded to Charlestown, where 3 of them (who bring us this Account) took their Passage in Capt. Lusk for this Place.—Boston News-Letter, March 25 to April 2, 1736. No. 1675.

Last Saturday Morning there was found Posted up in the Market and other Public Places in the City of New-York, a printed Faper containing the following Words, viz.

WHereas on the 13th day of this Instant March James Alexander, one of his Majesty's Council for the Province of New York, was served with a Protest by Rip van Dam, Esq; against all Persons who had aided, abetted or assisted, or should aid, abet or assist the honourable George Clarke, Esq; in taking upon him, or in Keeping the Administration of this Government.

And whereas the Affairs of the said James Alexander called him to the Province of New-Jersey, on the 15th Instant, where he remained until the 23d, and being returned back, he was this day inform'd, That a certain Paper had last Week appeared in Print, Posted up in the Market-Houses, and other Publick Places of this City: From the Words of which many People had Inferred, That he the said James had Advised and Consented to the Honorable George Clarke's taking upon himself the Administration of this Government, and to his issuing a Proclamation, Notifying the same &c.

Now lest this SILENCE should be interperted as an Admission or Owning of the Truth of that INFERENCE, and be used as an Argument for subjecting the said Fames to the Dangers in the said Protest mentioned, he thinks it his Duty, for his own Safety, according to Truth, to Declare, and he the said Fames Alexander doth hereby Declare, That he Denies that he ever Advised or Consented to the honourable George Clarke taking on him the Administration of this Government, or to his issuing any Proclamation, or to his doing any Act of Government whatsoever as President.

In Testimony whereof he the said James hath hereunto set his Hand. James Alexander.

Philadelphia, March 9. We hear that a large Schooner from Perth Amboy, bound to Cape Fare, Richard Hartshorn Master, on the 4th of Feb. past, Founder'd 45 Leagues from Winyaw; the Company betook themselves to their Moses, and in about 48 Hours after were taken up by Capt. Wyatt bound to St. Augustine, with whom they continued 4 Days, and then judging themselves near land (tho' they had not yet sight of it) they rather chose to adventure in their Boat than go to St. Augustine, and accordingly they (7 in number) left Capt. Wyatt about 7 a clock in the Morning, and about 8 at Night got safe on shore at Otters Island, lying between Georgia and South Carolina, and from thence proceeded to Charlestown, where 3 of them (who bring us this Account) took their passage in Capt. Commander in Chief of this Province, which Station he held but Eighteen Days. A Gentleman of the strictest Honour and Integrity, justly valued & lamented by all his Acquaintance. The Administration of the Government is devolved on the Honourable John Hamilton, Esq;—The American Weekly Mercury, March 23 to April 1, 1736.

tunate expedition to Darien, to establish a Scotch colony there. The Rev. Jacob Henderson, missionary, in a letter to the Lords of Trade, accused Anderson with having, after his return to Amboy, "lett his ship rot and plundr'd her and with ye plunder bought Land," but this charge upon investigation was shown to be based on the fact tha Capt. Anderson having sailed in her three years, and finding her unfit for further service, at the end of that time sold all the movable parts of the vessel and then left her, but kept a careful account for her owners, which showed a balance in his favor of £156, 2, 2.—Ib. 156, 178, 179. The curate of his church also certified that Lieut. Col. Anderson had been a constant communicant in his church for eleven years, up to 1713.of exemplary conduct, generous to the clergy, and lived on his wife's land, having bought none.—Ib., 178. He was one of the Justices of the Monmouth Quarter Sessions in 1711.—Old Times in Old Monmouth, 209. In the same year Gov. Hunter recommended him for a seat in the Council, in which the Board of Proprietors concurred. He was at that time a resident of Perth Amboy, a very large trader, an old planter, and a man of one of the best estates in the town.-N. J. Archives, IV., 63, 153-4. He was appointed in 1713, and on the accession of Gov. Burnet. in 1720, Anderson was continued In the Council. -10., 182; V., 3. At a meeting of the Council, April 20, 1722, he ventured to dissent from the Governor's declaration that George Willocks was an enemy of the government, whereupon Burnet immediately suspended him; but in this the Governor was not sustained by the Lords of Trade, and finally, on July 11, 1726, Gov. Burnet removed the suspension, and Anderson resumed his seat in the Council. -Ib., V., 35, 52; XIV., 221, 318. He continued a member of that body thereafter until his death.-Ib., XIV., passim. By an order of the King in Council, Nov. 6, 1728, he was appointed one of the commissioners in New Jersey for the trial of pirates.-Ib., V., 147. He was strongly in favor of a separate Governor for New Jersey, and signed a memorial to that end only ten days before his death.—Ib., 297, 443. His tombstone in the old Topanemus burying ground (about a mile west of Marlborough, Monmouth county) bears the following inscription:

"Col. John Anderson, once President of His Majesty's Council of the Province of New Jersey, who died 28th day of March, 1736, aged 71 years.

"His Country's true friend, obliging to neighbors, Gave no man offence, paid each for their labors, Was easie at home, abroad dare appear, Gave each man his dues and no man did fear."

—Old Times in Old Monmouth, 238. Col. Anderson (it does not appear how he got his military title) married Anna, daughter of John Reid, a prominent Quaker, of Perth Ambov, but who afterwards lived on Hop Brook, near Topanemus —Ib., 238: White-head's Perth Amboy, 48. Anderson had children John, James, Kenneth, Jonathan, Margaret, Helena, Anna, Elizabeth, Isabella. His son Kenneth became a colonel, and had a daughter Isabella, who married Col Nathantel Scudder, a hero of the Revolution, who was killed by the Refugees in a skirmish at Shrewsbury, October 15, 1781.—Stiter's Monmouth and Ocean Counties, Genealogical Record, III and IV; Stryker's Officers and Men of New Jersey in the Revolution, 355.

RUN away on the 29th past, from Jacob Lippincut of Burlington, a Servant Man named William Bush, aged about 18 or 19 Years, short Stature, well set, whitish Complexion, smooth Face, brownish Hair, curling a little; three of his Finger-nails shrivel'd up in a remarkable Manner. Had on a felt Hat somewhat worn, a dark grey homespun Jacket of Cotton and Wool, a flannel Shirt pieced on each Sleave, Leather Breeches much worn with Brass Buttons, dark grey yarn Stockings, much worn, old Shoes slit in the upper Leathers.

Whoever takes up the said Servant and secures him, so that his Master may have him again, shall have Thirty Shiltings Reward and reasonable Charges paid by Facob Lippincut.

Mr. Bradford

You are desired to incert in your next Gazette, the following short and True Narrative of what passed in Council the 10th of March last, on which day the late Governour Cosby Dyed. It is for the information of the Publick

Your Friend and Servant,

A. B.

Extract

The Commission, Instructions and Seal of the Fersies, having been also brought down into Council, there was some discourse, what was proper to be done with them; and Mr. Alexander acquainting the Board, that he intended to go to Amboy the Sunday after, and offering to take care of them, and deliver them to the Council in New-Jersey, the Board were of Opinion, that Mr. Clarke should take them into his keeping, and unless Mr. Anderson, or some other Proper Person should call for them sooner, that then he should deliver them to Mr. Alexander, who said, he would wait upon Mr. Clarke on Saturday in the Evening to receive them. And so the Council broke up.

The Reason for publishing this Narrative, is to undeceive the Publick, who may, perhaps be mis-led by a paper posted up in the Market-places of this City, signed Fames Alexander.

NOTICE is hereby Given,

That the Lands, Tenements, and Real Estate, lately belonging to Peter Sonmans, Esq; of the City of Perth-Amboy, County of Middlesex, and Province of New-Fersey, Deceased, situate in the Province aforesaid, or elsewhere, and which were by his last Will and Testament Devised to Sarah Sonmans then his WIFE, are now by good and sufficient Conveyances vested in Samuel Nevill¹ of London, in that Part of ¹ Samuel Nevill, son of John and Mary Nevill, of Stafford, England, was a man of liberal education, a lawyer by profession, and for sometime editor of the London Morning Post. He had a brother John and a sister Sarah, who was the second wife of Peter Sonmans, to whom she was married October 17, 1723. By the will of Peter Sonmans, his wife, Sarah Nevill, was made his sole heir and executrix. She married a second time in September, 1735, but her husband died in the following November, and she in December of the same year. Her brother Samuel as her eldest brother was her heir-at-law, and he came to America to settle up the estate. Directly after his arrival he agreed to divide the estate with Dr. Peter Sonmans, of Philadelphia (who married Barthea Wilson, January 8, 1737), son of Peter Sonmans, and his own brother, John Nevill. Each of the three parties was to have an equal share in the estate after the debts were paid. In 1745 he obtained a release from Dr. Peter Sonmans. He settled at Perth Amboy, where his brother John was already a resident. He was a vestryman of St. Peter's Church in 1741, and one of the wardens, 1742-62. He was twice elected to the Assembly, serving 1743-49, 1754-64, and was speaker of that body 1744-5, 1748-51. He was appointed Judge of the Court of Common Pleas, Mayor of Perth-Amboy, and at the March Term, 1749, was appointed Second Judge of the Supreme Court, which office he held until his death. In 1752 he published a compilation of the laws of New Jersey, and in 1761 a second volume, continuing the laws down to that time. In January, 1758, James Parker, of Woodbridge, issued the first number of "The New American Magazine," which was the first periodical published in New Jersey, and the second in America, immediately superseding "The American Magazine," which had been published for a short time at Philadelphia. Samuel Nevill was the editor, using the pen name "Sylvanus Americanus." It was an excellent periodical for that day, well printed, and well edited. It was continued until March, 1760. It is one of the scarcest of American periodicals. The writer of this note knows of no perfect copy outside of the libraries of the New York Historical Society and the Historical Society of Pennsylvania, although he has twenty-five of the twenty-seven numbers that were issued. Judge Nevill died October 27, 1764, in the sixty-seventh year of his age, and was buried in St. Peter's church yard, Perth Amboy, beside his wife, who had died in 1755. They left no children. He was evidently a man of high character, of fine, scholarly attainments, a polished gentleman, an honest and capable judge, and an exemplary citizen in every walk in life. See Whitehead's Perth Amboy, passim; Vroom's Supreme Court Rules; N. J. Archives, VI, VII, VIII, IX, passim; Pennsylvania Archives, III., 206; Marriage Record Christ Church, Philadelphia, in 2 Pa. Archives, VIII, 239.

Great Britain called England, Gent. Eldest Brother and Heir at Law to her the said Sarah, John Nevill of Perth-Amboy aforesaid, Gent. and Peter Sonmans of the City and County of Philadelphia in the Province of Pennsylvania, Doctor of Physick:

Who, by an Agreement made between them, are to Discharge all the Debts due from the said Estate, so far as the Estate will enable them to do.

THESE ARE THEREFORE to Desire all Persons who have Mortgages or other Incumbrances on any Part of the Lands aforesaid, or any just Demands against the said Estate, forthwith to transmit Accompts thereof to the said Samuel and John Nevill at Perth-Amboy aforesaid, or to the said Peter Sonmans in Philadelphia, that proper Care may be taken to Discharge them.

And any Person or Persons inclining to Purchase any Part or Parcel of the Premises may apply to either of the Subscribers.

Burlington, June 16. His Majesty having been graciously pleased to give the Royal Assent to our Act of Assembly for making 40 thousand Pounds in Bills of Credit, last Week the Persons appointed by the Assembly to get said Bills Printed in the best and cheapest manner they could, met to consult about the same, and I hear they have agreed to have said Bills printed for the Sum of One Hundred and Sixty Pounds Proclamation Money, whereas another Person would have done it for One Hundred Pounds, or less.1 But such is the effect of Party, Faction and Prejudice. Its no matter, its the Country's Money, and if the Publick cannot afford to pay well, who can? Its proper to serve a Friend when there is an Opportunity.—The New-York Gazette, June 21, 1736.

Mr. Bradford:

The Author who has oblig'd the Publick in Zenger's Journal, Numb. 149, with a sketch of the late Governor Cosby's behaviour during his Administration, is doubtless too honest not to publish his Name to his so excellent a Piece. It is wrote with such a Spirit of Moderation, Truth, Respect, to the Dead, good Nature and strength of Reason, that surely it can be nothing but Modesty that deprives us of the Pleasure of knowing the Gentleman that is capable of favoring the World with such an excellent Performance. It is therefore heartily desired that he will incert his Name in Mr. Zengers next Journal, and prevent our further Importunity.—The New York Gazette, [July 4] 1736.

ON Saturday last in the afternoon came to our hands an Answer to the Reflections made on the behaviour of the late Governour Cosby, now deceased, as contain'd in Mr. Zenger's Journal, No. 149, which Answer being pretty long, we have not time nor room to incert it in this Gazette, but shall publish it in our next. — The New-York Gazette, [July], 1736.

Cape-May, July 17. Yesterday the Coroner's Inquest view'd the Body of an Indian Man, said to be kill'd by Joseph Golden, an English Inhabitant here. Isaiah Stites being present and seeing the whole Difference, gave his Evidence to the Inquest, the Substance whereof was, That Golden having hired the said Indian with another Indian Man and Woman to pull some Flax, was to give them three quarts of Rum for their Labour, with which they got Drunk and quarrel'd with Golden, who then bid them be gone from his House, but they refus'd going and gave him ill Language, whereupon a Ouarrel ensued, and many Blows passing on both sides, Golden got a small Stick or Cudgel to drive them away, but the two Indians fell upon him and got him down, beat him very much and twisted his Neck, so that he seemed in Danger of his Life; Stites endeavored to part them; at length Golden (with Stites help) got on his Legs, and then took a larger stick in his Hand to defend himself, bidding the Indians to keep off; but one of them coming violently at him, he struck him on the Head, knock'd him down, and he died without speaking a Word more: It appearing that there was no Difference between Golden and the Indians, before that sudden Quarrel and that they had put him in fear of his Life, before he struck that blow, the Coroner's Inquest found it Manslaughter.—The Pennsylvania Gazette, Aug. 2-7, 1736.

— The American Weekly Mercury, Oct. 21-28,

We have the following remarkable Account from Salem, That two Men having been Partners in cutting of Staves, the Wife of one of them conspired with the other to kill her Husband; but her Heart failing her when the Thing was to be done, she run out of the House and cry'd Murder, upon which the designed Assassin was taken and committed to Prison. This enrag'd him so against the Woman, that having broken out in the Night preceeding the Day of the Fair, he went and found her at the House where she liv'd, stab'd her in several Places in the Body with a clasp Knife, and having left her for dead, he came back to the Prison-Door in the Day time, and made his Appearance in the Fair, all bloody, with the Knife in his Hand, declaring that he had taken his Revenge and kill'd the B---b, but that no body should put him in Prison again, tho' he would go in himself, if the Sheriff would toss him the Keys: Nobody caring to go near him while he held the Knife in his Hand, they persuaded him to clasp it, and then they seiz'd him and put him in. The Woman was not dead but its thought she cannot recover. The man has endeavour'd to kill himself with the Knife, but it meeting with the Breast Bone, he only cut and mangled himself in a miserable manner.—The Pennsylvania Gazette, Oct. 21-28, 1736.

Boston. We have Advice from the Province of New-Jersey via New York, that on the 20th of the last Month, the Hon. Col. Morris, at the Council Board of that Province, demanded of the Hon. Fohn Hamilton, Esq; President of His Majesty's Council, &c. the Administration of that Government, by Virtue of His Majesty's Commission and the Royal Instructions to the late Governour; which Mr. Hamilton was pleased to refer the Consideration of to the Gentlemen of His Majesty's Council, and laid before them the Commission and Instructions, that so they might be enabled to form a Judgment whether any Article or Clause therein can effect the present Administration, so as to give Col. Morris any Right thereto: Accordingly a Committee of the Council on the Day following made a Report directed to the Hon. Fohn Hamilton, Esq; that they had with all the Caution and Attention that became them, on this extraordinary Occasion, perused both the Commission and Instruction, and therein have recited part of both, with their Remarks thereon (which we have not room to insert) and Conclude in the Words following, to which they have affixed their Names, viz.

"We cannot find any thing in the Royal Instruc"tions that can give Col. Morris any colour or pre"tence to demand or take upon him the Administra"tion of the Government, except his Name being the "first in the List of Councellors, as in truth it is in "the Instruction Numb. 1. But that Gentleman was "in England, and had been there more than 12 "Months before the Death either of the late Gover"nor or President, as is before mentioned, and did

"absent himself from this Province, and continued "absent for the space of near 2 Years, without leave "from the then Governor, under his Hand and Seal, "or any other ways, that ever we could hear or learn, "And therefore we are of Opinion, That by the King's "Instruction Num. 10, his Place in His Majesty's "Council in this Province, is become Void. And "upon the whole, That the Administration of the "Government is Lawfully and Rightfully vested in "your Honour; and we make no Question but you "will steadily pursue such Measures as may best "conduce to the Honour and Interest of his Majesty, "and his good Subjects here, and exert the Authority "you are clothed with, in the Preservation of the "Peace of the Province."

Philadelphia, Oct. 28. We hear from Bucks, that the Woman lately condemn'd to be hang'd at Philadelphia for Burglary, but repriev'd and discharg'd, is now in Prison at Newtown for a Crime of the same Kind.

And from the same County, That Elijah Done, a Farmer there, having some People at his House to assist in Husking Indian Corn, took a Horse and rid towards Bristol for some Rum to entertain them with; and having sent it home-wards, he cross'd from Bristol to Burlington with his Horse, tho' he had no Business that way, and rid up Burlington Street full Speed; a Cow happen'd to be in the Way which he rid over, and fell, broke one Arm, languish'd two Days, and then died. It seems he had some times before been disorder'd in his Senses, and at such times us'd to ride violently thro the Woods—The New-England Weekly Fournal, Nov. 9, 1736. No. 501.

Perth-Amboy, November 2.

By a Letter from a Gentleman in Monmouth County in New-Jersey, we are informed, That on Sunday the last of October, Col. Morris gave direction for the Minister of the Church of England to read the Prayers for her Royal Highness the Princess of Wales, &c. but the Minister knowing that his Honour President Hamilton, had issued a Proclamation that forbids all Persons from aiding or assisting the said Lewis Morris in usurping the Government of the said Province, did therefore refuse to obey such Order from said Col. Morris. whereupon his Son, Mr. — Morris stood up in the Church and read the same to the congregation.—The Boston Weekly News-Letter, Nov. 12–18, 1736. No. 1707.

Coll. Morris having applyed to the General Assembly of this Province to go into the Province of New-Jersey, acquainting them that the Publick Service there required his Presence; and it being publickly Reported that he is gone to take the Administration of the Government of that Province upon him, has caused a general Enquiry what would be the effect of his proceeding in that Affair, we presume it will be agreeable to many of our Readers to have an account thereof, so far as is come to our Knowledge. And since we can't do it better than in the language of the Gentlemen of his Majesty's Council for that Province, we will incert the Report of a Committee of said Council, which is in the words following, viz.\(^1\)—New York Gazette, Nov. 15, 1736.

RAn from William Snowden of Trent-Town, a Servant Man named Thadymack Donoyl, he is of middle stature, has short Hair, is very much pitted with the small Pox; he had spun Coat with large Brass Buttons, a pair of Trowsers, and Worsted Stockins, and a half worn Beaver Hat. RAN away on the 14th of March Inst. from George Eyres, of Burlington, a Servant Man named Chris-

1 Mr. Franklin Eyre, of Philadelphia, has kindly furnished the editor with the following note on George Eyre, his ancestry and descendants:

George Eyre was the third child and only son of George and Sarah Eyre, of Worsop, Nottinghamshire, England. He was born at Worsop, Nov. 17, 1700. His great-grandfather was Sir Gervaise Eyre, of Nottinghamshire, England, who lost his life while Governor of Newark Castle, May 5th, 1645, fighting for his King, Charles I. The local historians of the day speak of Sir Gervaise as a man of irreproachable character, the best horseman in King Charles' army, and add: "That had the King had many such soldiers as Sir Gervaise Eyre, he had neither lost his crown nor his life." The grandfather of Sir Gervaise, was also named Gervaise, who married Mary, the daughter of George Nevill, who was lineally descended from Ralph De Nevill, 2d Lord of Raby, who was lineally descended from the ancient Saxon King, Ethelred II. By this same family, through Cecily Nevill, who married Richard Plantagenet. Duke of York, whose son became Edward IV of England, the present royal family of England trace their descent from the old Saxon Kings of England. These Nevills have intermarried with the principal families of the nobility of England, and of this historic family, all remember him who is termed the last of the great Barons of England-Richard Nevill, the Earl of Warwick, called the King-maker. The first member of the Eyre family to settle in England, was named Humphrey, who was a Knight of William the Conqueror, and fought at the battle of Hastings, 1066, where he lost one of his legs. The crest of the Eyre coat-of-arms, is a leg, in armor, couped at the thigh.

George Eyre studied for the ministry, but, while on a visit to this country in 1727, he met Mary, the daughter of Hon. Samuel Smith, of Burlington, N. J., whom he married about 1729-'30, and resided at Burlington, N. J., his residence being directly opposite the Episcopal Church of St. Mary. Through this marriage the Eyres are made claimants to the mythical Jennens Estate. By the said Mary Smith, George Eyre had eleven children, viz: Samuel, born 1731; George, born Sept. 24, 1732; Samuel and Sarah (twins), born Feby 2, 1734; Manuel, born Nov. 10, 1736; Jehu, born Jany. 10, 1738; Mary, born Octo. 1739; Martha, born Octo. 28, 1741; Hannah, born Augt. 1, 1743; Elizabeth, born June 10, 1746; Benjamin George, born June 1, 1747. George Eyre, shortly after the death of his wife Mary, married a widow, Mrs. Shreeves of Burlington, N. J., and by her, had a daughter, named Ann, born Sept. 10, 1756. The said Samuel,1 George, Sarah, Hannah and Elizabeth, all died unmarried. Samuel2 married Elizabeth Folwell of Burlington county, N J., and had six children. Manuel married Mary Wright, daughter of Richard Wright, the leading ship-builder of Philadelphia, and had thirteen children. During the War of the Revolution, he was a prominent member of the Pennsylvania State Navy Board, and did noble service throughout the war. He died Nov. 1, 1805, at Kensington, Philadelphia, Penna. Jehu married Lydia Wright, sister of the said Mary Wright and had nine children. He was Colonel, commanding the Philadelphia artillery during the Revolution, until his death, which occurred July, 1781, from exposure. Mary married the Rev. John Colin Campbell, Rector of St. Mary's Church at Burlington, N. J., and had three children. Martha married William Gordon of Burlington, N. J., and had one child. Benjamin George marslim Man, hath no Beard, and is Freckled in the Face: He was Born in England, but has been brought up at Plantation Business in this Country for 8 Years, and pretends to understand Brick making. He had on when he went away a light colou 'd Broad Cloth Coat with Mohair Buttons, and a plain sleeve without any Cuff, black worsted Jacket, black Breeches, oznabrigs shirt, gray yarn Stockings, a good Felt Hat and good shoes new sol'd; and hath taken a bundle of other Clothes.

Whoever takes up said Servant and secures him so that he may be had again, shall have Thirty Shillings Reward paid

By George Eyres.

Ran-away on the 27th of March last, from Henry Wynkoop of Salem an Irish Servant Man named John MacNeil, aged about 21 Years, of middling Stature; he has a smooth Face, and a fresh Colour. He had on when he went away, a brown Coat and Jacket, both of them much mended, with Metal Buttons to the Jacket; Buck-skin Breeches, doubly ried, first, Hester Boyd of Philadelphia, and had by her, one child; he married, second, Mary Cheeseman of New York. and had by her, two children. Benjamin George Eyre was a Colonel during the Revolution, and at the battle of Princeton was an aid de camp to Gen'l Washington. In the historical painting of the Battle of Princeton, by Colonel Trumbull, Colonel Eyrg's figure has been placed on the canvas quite conspicuously, charging with sword in hand, without his cap, on his horse's back. He died July 11, 1789. Ann Eyre married Judge Thomas Adams of Burlington, N. J., and had six children. The said George Eyre always lived at Burlington. He was a devout Christian gentleman, and well educated. When on a visit to New York in 1760-61, he returned home in a sleigh on Jany. 10, 1761, was taken sick with the pleurisy, and died Jany. 14, 1761, at midnight. He was burled at Burlington on the 16th. His descendants are quite numerous, especially in New Jersey, Pennsylvania and New York. Many of them have held positions of honor and trust.

Run away on the 16th Instant from Micajah How of Burlington, a Servant Man named William For-

In his autobiography, Benjamin Franklin, narrating his journey to Philadelphia, in October, 1723, at the age of *eventeea, says: "I got in the evening to an inn, within eight or ten miles of Burlington, kept by one Dr. Brown. He entered into conversation with me while I took some refreshment, and finding I had read a little, became very obliging and friendly. Our acquaintance continued all the rest of his life. He had been, I imagine, an ambulatory quack doctor, for there was no town in England, nor any country in Europe, of which he could not give a very particular account. He had some [taste for?] letters and was ingenious, but was an infidel, and wickedly undertook, some years after, to turn the Bible into doggerel verse. By this means he set many facts in a ridiculous light, and might have done mischief with weak minds, if his work had been published but it never was."—Sparks's Franklin, I, 31-2.

PHILADELPHIA, July 21.

Extract of a Letter from Salem, dated July 7.

'On Sunday the 3d of this Instant July, about 2 a 'Clock in the Morning, one John Thompson, an aged 'Man, who lived in this Town of Salem in New-Jer-'sey, who was very Poor, but very subject to drink 'Rum; had been drinking Rum the fore-part of the 'Night till he was Drunk, or very near it; and being 'got in a Passion with his Wife, told her, he would 'pack up his All, and go to Carolina; and thereupon 'he took a Bundle of things in a Wallet, or Bag, and 'went to the Wharffe at the lower end of the Town, 'and by Endeavouring to get into a Cannoe, (a Ves-'sel he had chosen to make his Voyage in,) accident-'ally slipt off the Wharffe into the Water, and was 'drowned.

'He had a Son drowned near the same place, about 'two Years ago, in the like condition of being drunk with Rum.

'This, and the like, often prove the Consequences 'of excessive Drinking, which, tho' however frequent 'such things come to pass, yet nevertheless People will not be deterred from the immoderate Use of 'strong Liquors: This certainly bespeaks want of 'due Conduct in the Use of Things, a Defect too frequent amongst Mankind, which is, I think, a perfect 'Blot in that Escutcheon of Reason annexed to the 'Fabrick of human Bodies.

We hear from Hattonfield, over the River, that on Sunday last, during the Violent Gust, (which we had also here) one Clemens being in his Barn making up a Mow of Corn, was struck down by the Lightning; and on recovering he perceiv'd the Corn and Barn to be in Flames, out of which he made his Escape; but the Barn was burnt down to the Ground with every thing in it, notwithstanding the great Fall of Rain,) to the Damage of 100 £.—The Pennsylvania Gazette, July 14–21, 1737.

We hear from Shrewsberry in New-Fersey, that in that Township, last week, a Pedler was met with a Foot-Pad upon the high Road, who ask'd him if he had a chew of Tobacco to give him? the Pedler answer'd, Yes, and while he was taking it out of his Pocket the Rogue took hold of his Horses Bridle, and then ask'd him if he had any Money, for he must have it? The Pedler answered, No, for he was newly set out with his Pack, &c. The Rogue pull'd out a sharp pointed Knife, and cut his Leg, stob'd him in the Brest and other places, cut open his Pack, wherein was ten Pound in Paper Money, which he took and made off, leaving the man in his blood, seemingly a dying, but in a little time he got to a House, which was near, they sent for a Surgeon who drest him, and its hop'd he will recover. Diligent search has been made for the Rogue but he is not yet taken.— The New-York Gazette, Oct. 24, 1737.

WHereas it is agreed by the Council of Proprietors of the Eastern-Division of New-Jersey in America, That there shall be a Farther Dividend of Two Thousand Acres to each Propriety, or Twenty Fourth part of the said Eastern-Division, after the Term of two years from the Date hereof; And that yearly after the said two years, there shall be farther Dividends of the said Land, until all the Lands in Common in the said Eastern-Division be Divided and appropriated; And that Notice thereof be published in some of the News Papers of London and New-York.

These are therefore to Notifie to all Proprietors and Sharers of Proprieties, in the said Division whether Inhabiting in Great Britain or else-where, that they do either come or send, or appoint in this Province proper Persons to Elect and Locate all the past Dividends of Lands due to them within the two years aforesaid, And after the said two years, to Elect and Locate the Dividend of two Thousand Acres appointed, as aforesaid, and such farther yearly Dividend of Lands as shall, from time to time, be thought proper to be made; on Failure whereof they must blame themselves if the best Land be elected and divided before they come, and that the worst is left for them to Divide afterwards; for that the Interest of the said Division, and of the Proprietors thereof, has already much suffered by the past Delays of making Dividends, and will suffer more if further Delays be made in the doing thereof.

THese are to desire all Proprietors & Sharers of Proprieties in the Eastern-Division of the Province of New-Yersey, to meet at Amboy on Tuesday the 8th of November next, to consult on their Affairs.

IN Perth-Amboy there is a large Brick House, with a good Garden, Stable, several Out-Houses, a good Well, and other Conveniencies, which is to be Sold, being the Dwelling-House of the late Mr. John Stevens! deceased.

LJohn Stevens, when a mere lad, came, in 1699, from Middlesex county, England, to New York, where he entered as a law student with Barne Cosens. He remained in New York, in the practice of his profession and in mercantile pursuits, till Septem-Fer. 3731, when he removed to Perth Ambey, having about 1710 married Ann, the eldest daughter of John Campbell, a prominent citizen of that town, and the 1 winer and proxy of Lord Drammon ?, Earl of Melfort, one of the Twenty-four New Jersey Proprietors. In 1718 John Stevens was appointed the first Chamberlain and Treasurer of the new corporation of Perth Amboy, and in the charter of St. Peter's church, of that place, granted in the same year, he is named as one of the Vestrymen. In 1735 he was Clerk in Chancery. He died in 1737. He had three sons, Campbell, John and Richard. Campbell was a Captain in Col. Peter Schuyler's regiment of "Old Blues." who fought in the French war at Oswego and at Fort William Henry. John (second) was born at Perth Amboy about 1715; he married (1748) Elizabeth, daughter of James Alexander, sister of William, Earl of Stirling, He filled many important official stations in New Jersey, being a member of the Assembly 1751-62, [and of the Council, 1762-76; Vice President of the State, 1776-82; member of Congress, 1782-3; and President of the State Convention of 1787 to ratify the Federal Constitution. He died in May, 1792, and was buried at the Frame Meeting House, Bethlehem township, Hunterdon county, a church he contributed largely to build. He was the father of the late Col. John Stevens, of Hoboken, the distinguished inventor, and of Mrs, Chancellor Living-

Mr. Bradford

A Neighbor of mine having dream'd a Dream, not only Once, but Twice, and with some Concern has told it Publickly, I therefore send it to you desiring you to Print it, which will oblige one of your constant Readers,

THat I was at the City of New-York, walking upon the south side of the Town, and as I stood upon the Dock I saw a Cart drawn by two Oxen and twò Horses, and a White Man to drive it. Many Spectators saw it, as well as I, and wondered to see it drive so furiously. I asked, Whose Team it was? Answer was made, That it was Co. M—'s. I asked, Where they were going, that they drove so furiously? Answer was made, It was going to M—l. By this time I saw the Team run furiously into the River, in sight of all the Beholders, where it Perished. But so soon as the Team was sunk, I saw a great Mastiff Dog go into the River and fetch the Driver out, and did shake him. And the Driver turned instantly into a Beast with a pair of Horns upon his head.—The New York Gazette, April 3, 1738.

RAN-away the 30th of March last, from Charles Oakford, of Allaways Creek, in Salem County, Two Servant Lads; one named Samuel Woodfen, aged about 20 Years, was born at or near Salem; had on when he went away a dark brown homespun Kersey Coat with flat Pewter Buttons, and a Jacket of the same, both without Lining; a pair of thick Leather Breeches with Brass Buttons; an old Castor Hat; a pair of redish colour'd homespun Yarn Stockings. He is of middling Stature, fresh colour'd and has full Cheeks, and dark brown Hair. The other named William Taylor, aged about 17 Years, this Country born; had on when he went away, a brown Drugget Coat with flat Pewter Buttons; an old homespun Worsted Jacket; a pair of old homspun Kersey Breeches; a pair of gray Yarn Stockings; a pair of Shoes about half worn, and a pretty good Felt Hat. He is a tall slender Lad, has light colour'd short strait Hair, and is of a palish Complexion.

They took with them a Petiauger from one Foseph Ware, in which they are supposed to be gone away; and also took from their said Master, a pair of good Calfskin Shoes with Silver Buckles, a pair of strong Neats Leather Shoes, a pair of Yarn Stockings, an old homspun Shirt, two Falling Axes, and two new homspun Sheets.

Whoever takes up and secures the said Servants, or either of them, so that their Master may have them again, shall have Forty Shillings Reward for each, and reasonable Charges paid

Boston, June 7. Entred In. Martin from West-Jersey.—The Boston Weekly News-Letter, June 1-8, 1738.

We have from Burlington a most melancholly Account of the Death of a Boy of 5 Years old, last Week, who hanged himself on the stake of a Fence with a Rope he had been playing with in the Yard. He was first discover'd by means of the Crying of a younger Child, Brother wont speak to me. 'Tis thought that the abundance of Discourse he had heard of the late Execution of Negroes for Poisoning, had fill'd his Mind, and put him on imitating what he had heard was done, not knowing the Danger. It is said, that he dreamt much of that Execution the Night before, and telling his Dream in the Morning, added, And I shall die to Day; which was not then regarded.—The Pennsylvania Gazette, June 8–15, 1738.

Piscattaway, May 26. On the 19th Instant we had very hard Showers of Rain (which was very much wanted) attended with Thunder and Lightning. At New-Market in this Province, as a Country-man with a Team and six Oxen was driving along, the two foremost and hindermost Oxen were instantly struck dead, and the middle yoke not hurt, nor the Person that drove them.—The New York Gazette, June 12, 1738.

Philadelphia, June 1. Yesterday in the Forenoon a Man pretty well advanced in years well dress'd, came to the House of Joseph Gregory at Gloucester in West-Jersey, and wanted a Passage to Philadelphia, and seem'd Impatient at the Ferry Boats stay, and asked for some Water to drink, which was brought him, then he took a walk in the Orchard, leaving his Saddle-Baggs and Hat in the House: About an Hour after he was found hanging by his Garters on a Limb of an Apple-Tree astride over the Fence, we have not yet learnt his Name.

We also hear from Chester, that Last Saturday a Boy hang'd himself in the Work-House.—The New York Gazette, June 12, 1738.

By His Excellency, Lewis Morris, Esq; Captain General and Governor in Chief in and over His Majesty's Province of Nova Cæsarea, or New-Jersey, and the Territories thereon depending in America, and Vice-Admiral in the same &c.

A PROCLAMATION.

Whereas His most Sacred Majesty George the Second, by the Grace of God of Great-Britain, France, and Ireland, KING, Defender of the Faith, &c. by his Royal Letters-Patent, bearing Date the third Day of March last, has been pleased to appoint Me Captain General and Governor in Chief of this His Majesty's Province of New-Fersey; and also by Commission under the Great Seal of the High Court of Admiralty of England, bearing Date the Twenty third Day of the same Month, to appoint Me Vice-Admiral in the said Province. I have therefore thought fit, for His Majesty's Service, to give this Publick Notice thereof, & by and with the Advice and Consent of His Majesty's Council, to issue this Proclamation, hereby Authorizing and Impowering all Officers Civil and Military, to continue in their respective Offices and Employments till further Order; whereof all His Majesty's Subjects are required to take Notice and govern themselves accordingly.

Given under my Hand and Seal at Arms, in the Council Chamber at Perth-Amboy, the 30th Day of August, in the Twelfth Year of His Majesty's Reign, and in the Year of Our Lord 1738.

Burlington, October 6.

This Day came on the Election of two Members to serve in general Assembly for this City; when Richard Smith, Jun. and Isaac Pearson, Esgrs. were unanimously Chosen: And the 10th, came on the Electing of two Members, to serve in general Assem. bly, for the County of Burlington, upon which a Contention arose, between the Electors, of the Upper and Lower parts of said County, that Occasion'd the Election to be continued three Days, during which Time, it was conducted (by the leading Men) in such a candid and peaceable Manner, as gave no Occasion of Reflection to each other, nor was there any reaping of Characters, or using of Canes in a Hostile Manner on one another, being sensible that such a Practice, is inconsistent with the Freedom, which ought to Subsist in our Elections.—And therefore did fairly choose Mahlon Stacy and William Cook Esgrs. to represent them. — The American Weekly Mercury, Oct. 19, 1738. No. 981.

It is now some Months since a Book was published in this City, with the Title of All Slave Keepers &c. Apostates. In the Preface to which are these Words, viz. These Things following are so far from offending or grieving my very Dear True and tender Friends called Quakers, who love the Truth more than all; that it is by their Request and Desire that They are made publick. From which Paragraph it is not improbable some Readers may be persuaded to believe the Author was one of the People called Quakers, and that his Book had been printed at their Request, especially, were they to be altogether silent on this Occasion. Therefore, they have thought it fit, & hereby do give publick Notice, that the Book aforesaid contains gross Abuses, not only against some of their Members in particular, but against the whole Society: That the Author is not of their Religious Community, and that they disapprove of his Conduct, the Composition and printing of his Book; and therefore are not to be accountable for its Contents.

I Was Born in Lancashire in Old England, and my Parents were but mean poor People, and both died when I was young; I was then bound out by the Town to labouring Work, till I was 24 Years old, but my Master gave me three Years of my Time; but I was brought up in Ignorance and had no Learning at all; then I was prest to serve the Queen, and March'd as far as the City of Winchester, and there I Deserted from my Company, and took a red Vest-coat from my fellow-Soldier, which was the first of my following this wicked way of Pilfering: Then came back and hired myself to labouring Work, to a Man of honest Report, but he had a bad Son, that persuaded me to steal Wheat from his Father, and sell it in Partnership with him; Then I stole sundry Cloaths from a Man near the Town of Preston: Then I listed myself a Soldier of my own free Will, but the Devil was still busy with me; I took a Fustian Frock from an Hostler in the Town of Preston; and continued in that Service almost seven Years, then I was discharged for being too short of Stature, and stole from my fellow Soldier a Coat, Vest and Breeches, and went to my own Country again, and stole a Mare, Bridle, and Saddle undiscovered: I then went to Liverpoole and listed myself a Servant for four Years to Maryland, and when I was there three Years, I consulted with a Servant Maid to run away with me, and she took sundry Cloaths from her Master for me, and from her Mistress for herself, but we were catcht, and the People got their Cloaths again: Then I took sundry Cloaths clandestinely from a Man in them Parts, and came to Philadelphia, and from thence to the West-Fersey, and stole from one John Brown, a Fuller by Trade, a piece of home-made Cloth, and then went to Work for one John Deen, where I and one John Price stole a Silver Tankard and five Silver Spoons and some Cloaths, and came to Philadelphia again, and from there to New-York, and listed myself a Soldier at Albany, and stole there from a Breeches-maker three Buck-skins; then I and one wicked man, whose Name was Roger James, joined together and stole sundry Sheep; then took sundry Cloaths from one Van Bruck, and a Gun and a Coat from Rinear, and a small piece of Linnen from one Hendrick Van Wee, and a small piece of Linnen at Esopas: Then I went to New-England, and at a Place called Simsbury I Stole sundry Goods out of the House of one Philip Harris; and took some Money and Cloaths from a Man at Seabrook, and a Horse at Hatfield; and some Linnen from a Man at Northampton; and some Cloaths at Middletown. Also this John Price would have me to rob a Merchant's Shop in Maryland, and I would not do it for fear of Corporal Punishment; and sundry Things from one Cresap in Maryland, and from a Man that lodged in his House; and six yards of Linsey Woolsy from a poor Woman in Philadelphia, and a Coat and Vest from a Butcher in the same Place; and sundry Cloaths from Mr. Wileman at the High-Lands; and a Mare from a Man, but I don't know his Name, at Middletown in New-England; from one Thomas Coleman I stole some Cloaths; and from Philip Arnel I took a Watch and two Rings, and one link of Gold Buttons, for that I was apprehended, and sold for two Years and a half; at Rhode-Island I stole out of a Sloop a Man's Coat, and Bed Quilt. At Penny Quid to the Eastward of Boston I stole some Cloaths from two Men, where I also committed a great Sin in parting a Man and his Wife, and keeping with the Woman; and at George's Fort I took a five Pound Bill out of a Man's Chest, and for fear that I could not carry it off I put it in the same Place again. And I kept Company sometime with a Man's Wife at New-Castle upon Tine, and in Maryland, and committed the Sin of Fornication in sundry Places, as also Drunkenness, Swearing, and keeping bad Company. From a Woman at Woodbridge I took a Trunk with a few Pence, where I expected more; and from William Salter in Pennsylvania I stole two Gold Rings, and some Cloaths; as also some Cloaths from one Eag's near the same Place; and from one John Smith at Burlington I stole a pair of Shoes, and seven yards of Linnen; and from a Man at Freehold I stole a pair of leather Breeches; and as I was going along the Road I stole a Shirt and a Cradle Cloth, in East-Jersey; and a Handkerchief between New-York and Brunswick, out of a Boat; and from one Joseph Fowler I stole five or six Pounds in Money and some Cloaths, for which I was Condemn'd at West-Chester, and Reprieved by the Governor of New-York. And Thomas Baily's House I robbed three Times, for which I now must Die, and hope all People will take Warning by me, and put their trust in GOD, and not give way to the Temptations of the Devil, as I have done.

N. B. This is as it was taken from his own Mouth, and read at the Gallows, at his Desire.—The Pennsylvania Gazette, Dec. 14-21, 1738.

Run away on the 24th of December past from Joseph Decow of Trenton, in Hunterdon County, West-New-Jersey, a Servant Man, named John Bowls, by Trade a Shoemaker, of a middle Stature, black complexion'd, and black Eyes: Had on a dark grey Coat, brown Jacket, good Leather Breeches with brass Buttons, a fine Linnen Shirt, dark grey worsted Stockings, half worn peeked toe'd Shoes. a white Wig, good Hat, and generally wears a Silk Handkerchief loosly ty'd about his Neck. Whoever takes up and secures the said Servant so that he is had again, shall have Thirty Shillings Reward, paid by Joseph Decow.

New-York, January 9.

From Rocky Hill, in Somerset, New-Jersey, we hear that a Negro Man of Robert Hooper, Esq; being ordered by the Overseer's Wife to bring in some Wood and make Fire, he replied in a surly Tone that he wou'd make Fire enough and pursued her with an Ax: To avoid his Fury she fled to the House, and shut the Door on herself; but in the Hurry she unhappily lock'd her little Son out, him the Negro struck so that the whole Breadth of the Bitt of the Ax entered the Cavity of the Body, between the Shoulders and the lower Part of the Neck, so as to wound the Pericardium, and afterwards mangled him by other Blows; then he immediately set Fire to Mr. Hooper's Barn, in which there was about 1000 Bushels of Grain, and then endeavoured to escape; he was soon taken and tried, and on the third Day executed by Fire.—The Boston Weekly News-Letter, Jan. 18-25, 1739. No. 1818.

New-Port, Rhode-Island January 19. Clear'd Out,

We are inform'd from New Brunswick in New Fersey, that two Men near that Place, having had some Words together, one of them told the other, that he would be reveng'd on him by setting his House on Fire, and accordingly he took the opportunity and set the four corners of the House on Fire, at which Time Two young children were in the House alone upon whom he bar'd the Doors on the out-side, so that they could not get out. The Man seeing his House on Fire, and his Children in it, got into it and took his Children up in his Arms, and as he was carrying them out, a Beam, that was burnt thro', fell down and struck the poor Children out of their Father's Arms, and the Flames being very furious, he was obliged to leave his Children to save his own Life, and as the poor Infants lay perishing in the Flames they were heard to cry out, O Daddy! O Daddy! We have not yet learnt the Mens Names.

We hear that Robert Morris¹ Esq; (our Governor's Son) is appointed Chief Justice of the Province of New-Jersey, in the room and place of Coll. Hooper, deceased.—The American Weekly Mercury, March 8–14, 1738-9.

¹ Robert Hunter Morris, born at Morrisania, N. Y., about 1700, second son of Governor Lewis Morris, who appointed him Chief Justice on the unanimous recommendation of the Council. His commission, dated 17 March, 1738 [1739, N. S.], was during good behavior. It is published in N. J. Archives, IX., 207-9. (For a note on the significance of this provision in the commission of Judges, see Vol. 1X., 323-6) Chief Justice Morris was also named as a member of his father's Council, in the commission (1738) appointing the Governor, and sturdily defended the doughty Chief Magistrate on all occasions. In 1748 he was one of the three commissioners to run the northern boundary line of New Jersey He had accompanied his father to England in 1735, and revisited that country, in 1749, when he lodged with a Mrs. Stuart, a widow, in St. James's Place, the result being a child. When he returned to assume the Government of Pennsylvania he left the child with Will Shirley, who paid out £70 or £80 subsequently for its support. Writing in 1763, Morris asked his friend Penn to make some inquiries about the child, of whom he had lost all trace, and whom he was anxious to have in America. He spent several years in England on his second visit, and was treated with much respect and consideration. He sought an appointment as Lieutenant Governor of New York. Instead, John and Thomas Penn made him Governor of Pennsylvania, and he returned in 1754 to assume that office. For two years he enjoyed a continual disagreement with the Assembly of that Province, and then resigned. He had tendered his resignation as Chief Justice of New Jersey in 1754, but as it was not accepted, he resumed the duties of the office in 1756. In 1757 he revisited England once more, and during his absence William Aynsley was appointed to succeed him, at the March Term, 1758, but died 6 July of the same year. Nathaniel Jones was commissioned to fill the assumed vacancy, and presented himself at the March Term, 1760. But Chief Justice Morris was on the bench. His commission was during good behavior. True, he had resigned, but his resignation had not been accepted, and he had concluded to resume the position His right to do this was sustained by his associate, Justice Samuel Nevill, in an opinion from the bench. Morris died suddenly on the night of 27 January, 1764, at a party at Shrewsbury. He led out the parson's wife in a dance, opened the ball, danced down six couple and then fell dead on the floor. He was a very remarkable man, and filled a large place in the public affairs of New Jersey, New York and Pennsylvania. Samuel Smith, the historian, speaks very highly of his abilities as a judge and as a speaker.

To BE SOLD, Three fourth Parts of an Iron Work and Grist-Mill,

1 In Swank's "History of Iron in All Ages," 2d ed., 1892, p. 157, is the following communication from Austin N. Hungerford: "In 1722 the erection of a bloomary forge was undertaken by Isaac Horner, Daniel Farnsworth and Joseph Borden, on the west side of Black's creek, which rises near Georgetown, in Burlington county, and runs a northeasterly course between Mansfield and Chesterfield townships and empties into the Delaware at Bordentown. On February 1, 1725, the partly erected forge with the property connected with it was conveyed by the three proprietors to Thomas Potts, a son-in-law of Joseph Borden. On the same day he conveyed one undivided half of the property to Colonel Daniel Coxe (of whom mention is made that he had been interested in the manufacture of iron for several years), and one fourth to John Allen, scituate within half a Mile of Burdens-Town, in the County of Burlington, lying about the Distance of a small Mile up a Navigable Creek which emptys it self into Delaware River close by said Burdens-Town; whereby the Water Carriage up and down that River, is rendered very commodious: Together with three fourths of 17 Acres of Land and 3 Acres of Meadow, purchased for Iron Oar. Also a Coal House and many other Necessaries for carrying on the said Work, tho' now somewhat out of Repair. Any Person inclined to purchase the same, may apply to Samuel Bustill of Burlington and John Cox of Trenton, Attorneys at Law, two of the Executors of Daniel Cox, Esq; deceased, who are impowered to sell the same, where they may be inform'd of the Title and Conditions of Sale.

N. B. Mr. Thomas Potts, who owns the other quarter Part of the Premises, will be inclined to sell with the said Executors on reasonable Terms.—The Pennslyvania Gazette, Dec. 20. 1739.

Potts retaining a one fourth interest for himself. The forge was completed in the Summer of 1725, and was probably operated for a few years, but no account of it has been obtained. The property afterwards passed into the possession of a Mr. Lewis of Philadelphia. Thomas Potts had emigrated in the Shields, which brought so many emigrants to West Jersey."
